Cheese Trays Help You Through Sugar Rationing Period!
(See Recipes Below)

Take It Easy on Sugar

No sweets with sugar rationed? Why, of course. With honey, corn and maple syrup, molasses, and prepared pudding mixtures, you can learn how to prepare delightful sugar-saving desserts, cakes and cookies that will not only take you gracefully through the sugar-rationing period but will also remain favorites with you long after these times are past.

Honey blends with raisins and spices in this delicious melt-in-your-mouth pie.

Honey Raisin Crumb Pie.

1 egg yolk
⅛ teaspoon ginger
¾ cup bread crumbs
¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup hot water
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup raisins
¾ cup honey
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup nut meats

Blend hot water with honey and add egg yolk. Mix flour, crumbs and spices. Rub in butter. Place a layer of raisins on unbaked pie shell, cover raisins with layer of nut meats, and pour over honey-water-egg mixture. Top with layer of crumb mixture. Bake at 450 degrees until crust browns at edges, reduce to 325 degrees for 20 minutes or until firm.

Magic Chocolate Pie.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1⅓ cups sweetened condensed milk
½ cup water
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
Baked pie shell (8-inch) or cookie pie crust

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk and stir over rapidly boiling water 5 minutes until mixture thickens. Remove from heat. Add water and salt Stir until thoroughly blended. When cool, add vanilla. Pour into baked pie shell, or cookie crumb crust. Chill.

Get your full quota of milk into the diet by serving it in this dessert combination with rennet powder. No sugar required!

Marshmallow Maple Rennet-Custard.

1 package maple rennet powder
1 pint milk, not canned
5 marshmallows, diced

Dissolve marshmallows in 1 cup hot milk. Then add 1 cup cold milk and warm slowly, stirring constantly. Test a drop on the inside of wrist frequently. When COMFORTABLY WARM (110 degrees), not hot, proceed according to directions on package. Chill, then serve.

Butterscotch Ice-Box Cake.
(Serves 6 to 8)

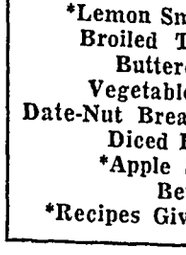
1 recipe butterscotch cornstarch pudding
½ cup cream, whipped
Lady fingers or cake strips

Prepare butterscotch pudding as directed on package. Cool Fold in whipped cream. Line bottom and sides of mold or loaf pan with waxed paper. Arrange layer of lady fingers on bottom and sides of mold. Turn ½ of pudding into mold; cover with layer of lady fingers. Turn remaining pudding into mold and place another layer of lady fingers on top. Chill 12 to 24 hours in refrigerator. Unmold

Bermuda Appetizers.

Chop Bermuda onion finely, marinate and drain. Spread on crisp crackers and cover with slice of Liederkranz cheese. Thin slices of rye, pumpernickel or whole wheat bread which have been buttered may be used instead.

You can do all sorts of things with cheese as a last course and serve it in place of fruit. Camembert has an affinity for fruit. Try it with crackers served with a bowl full of summer's luscious fruits or, try American-made equivalents of Roquefort and Blue cheese spread on hot buttered Boston brown bread tossed with after dinner coffee in place of dessert. Serve a cheese tray for refreshments and spare the sugar ration.



This spicy apple sauce cake requires only ½ cup of sugar.

Apple Sauce Cake.

⅓ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
½ cup molasses
2 cups cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cloves
⅛ teaspoon soda
1 cup apple sauce
½ cup raisins

Cream shortening; add sugar slowly, beating in well. Add well-beaten eggs and beat until well blended; add molasses. Sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with apple sauce to first mixture. Add raisins. Bake in greased square baking pan in moderate oven at 350 degrees about 1 hour. Frost with:

Raisin Nut Frosting.

1 egg white
¼ cup light corn syrup
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup chopped seeded raisins
½ cup chopped pecan meats

Beat egg white until stiff. Add syrup slowly, beating constantly. Add vanilla and half of raisins and nuts. Spread between layers and on top of cake. Sprinkle with remaining raisins and nuts.

Lemon Smothered Chops.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 pounds pork or lamb chops, cut thick

Put in a large covered skillet or chicken fryer. Cover top of meat closely with:

2 unpeeled lemons, sliced
1 large sweet onion, cut in rings
1 green pepper, cut in rings
1 teaspoon salt
Pour over all:
2 cups tomato juice

Dot with flakes of fat cut from meat or butter. Cover and cook on top of stove 1½ hours or until done. Lift onto a hot platter, being careful to keep lemon, onion and pepper slices in place. The meat cooked this way acquires a chicken texture and color, while the lemon, onion, pepper and tomato make a delicious sauce accompaniment

Lynn Says:

Household Tips: Are you wondering how those pots and pans are going to last for the duration? Since the production for these has been sharply curtailed, you will want hints on keeping them in "cooking" condition:

Aluminum: Leaving food in aluminum longer than necessary, soaking the utensil before washing and alkalies such as soda spell short wear for this metal. If you want to clean aluminum without endangering its wearing period, use very fine scouring powder or steel wool for discolorations. Or, cooking acid foods like tomatoes, rhubarb and apples will do the trick

Iron Wash in hot, sudsy water. If this doesn't clean it, use hot soda and water. If rusted, use scouring powder or steel wool. Always dry completely and wrap in paper for storage.

Tin: This metal does not keep shiny indefinitely. Remove burnt foods by boiling in soda and water for five minutes, never longer. Rinse and dry thoroughly.

JACOB'S VISION OF GOD

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 28 10-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whithersoever thou goest —Genesis 28 15.

Deception, trickery, falsehood, jealousy were all present in the family of Isaac at the time of our lesson A hopeless situation, one would say, and so it was, apart from one thing—the grace of God. We speak that phrase so easily, but in reality it has an infinite depth of meaning.

Jacob shared the deception planned by his mother, and thereby he received the blessing of Esau. Not willing to wait God's time for the carrying out of His purpose, they sinned to gain an advantage. Then to escape the wrath of Esau, he had to flee The journey was ostensibly to find a wife, but in fact a flight from an enraged brother. Could such a journey bring a man to a place of blessing? It did, as there was—

I. A Revelation of God's Grace (vv. 10-15)

The fugitive was overtaken by darkness on the second night of his journey, and made his bed in the open Then came the magnificent vision of the ladder of heaven

Heaven and earth are not separated There is a way to reach the throne of God, and there is a way for God to reach and bless His people The vision of the ladder thus reassured Jacob We need only remember the God-Man Christ Jesus, who came from glory and has returned there to now appear as our Advocate, to be assured of this fact.

God renewed to Jacob the covenant with Abraham and with Isaac. He does not forget Men make treaties only to break them. God says, "I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of" (v 15).

In His matchless grace God relieved Jacob s fear by assuring him of His protection, his loneliness by His divine presence; and his uncertainty regarding the future by the promise of blessing

The response of Jacob was—

II. A Realization of God's Greatness (vv 16-19).

Full of holy fear and of awe, Jacob realized the presence of the infinite God. It is a proper and a wholesome reaction when a man, realizing himself to be in God's presence, is overcome by the awe-inspiring experience.

Possibly the reason for our lack of reverence for holy things, for the Lord's day—yes, for God Himself, is because He has become a little God, weak and uninspiring in our thinking. Theologians, preachers, and teachers have dared to speak swelling words of disrespect concerning His miraculous power, have denied the deity of His Son, have questioned the authority of His Word. Having sown the wind of unbelief, they have reaped from the people the whirlwind of irreverence, a belittling of God, and a rejection of His authority (Hos. 8:7).

Jacob was reminded of God's immediate presence—"the Lord is in this place." The place of his vision of heavenly things had special meaning to Jacob.

But the underlying truth is that God is everywhere. He is not only in the church, or in the place of vision or of soul-struggle; He is also in the place of trial, of suffering, of sorrow, of loneliness—yes, even of sin. The thing that Jacob "found out that night was not that God visits man, but that God is with man wherever he is. We expect to meet Him in the sanctuary; but He is near us in the market place . . . Not alone in the sanctuary, but where the multitude gather in defiance of His law, He is there" (G. Campbell Morgan).

This rich experience led Jacob to—

III. A Recognition of God's Goodness (vv. 20-22).

The God who would supply his every need, who would watch over him and keep him, was recognized by Jacob as being worthy of his devotion, and he made a vow that He should be his God (v. 21).

The grace and goodness of God are intended to bring men to faith in Him and devotion to His service. Yet men can go on year after year, the beneficiaries of all His bounty, and never so much as say "Thank you," let alone recognize Him as Lord.

Jacob made a very practical and workable decision to demonstrate the reality of his vow. He promised that one tenth of all God gave him should be given back for a sacred use.

We agree with Dr. W. H. Griffith Thomas that "if only some of those who are inclined to criticize Jacob would do what he promised and give a tenth of their income to God, a different state of affairs would obtain in connection with God's work at home and abroad"

Trickery and deception were changed to truthfulness and devotion when Jacob met God face to face The same blessed transformation awaits those who meet our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in faith Have you met Him?

Work and Education

It is not necessarily the mark of a superior intelligence to disdain an inferior job, and advanced education does not and never has guaranteed an advanced position in life.

One may be fitted for an important post, but that does not mean that one is unfitted for an unimportant post. Humble and monotonous occupations can provide scope for great qualities, they can be performed well or ill and the better educated the man the better is he likely to perform them.

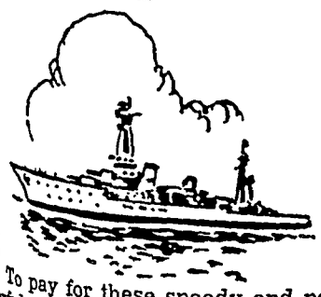
Navy Cruisers are built in two classes, light and heavy, the latter displacing about 10,000 tons. Our navy has about an equal number of light and heavy Cruisers, the 10,000 ton Cruiser costing approximately $20,000,000. Many Cruisers are under construction and many more are needed.



To pay for these speedy and powerful ships with their heavy guns and armament we must buy War Bonds. Citizens of a large town or given community, working in unity, could buy one of these ships for the Navy if they put at least ten percent of their income in War Bonds every pay day.

STREAM FISHING BEST SINCE MAY

Three Young Fishermen Having One Last Try Before School Starts Monday

With streams throughout most parts of the state in the best shape for fishing since May, record catfish strings are being commonly reported. Favorite baits being used by the hordes of catfishing enthusiasts that are lining the better known waters evenings and week-ends include chicken blood, cheese bait, minnows, fresh shrimp and crawfish. Small-mouth bass are also hitting in many streams, and in a few areas are taking flies well; but in most bass waters chubs, frogs, and crawfish are the best fish catchers. Fishing in both the artificial and natural lakes is holding up well, with bass, walleyes, northern pike, silver bass, bluegills, crappies, perch and bullheads being commonly seen on the stringers. Fishing is good but there are always "flies in the ointment." School starts Monday, and induction boards are also busy in each county of the state.

Rationing Chief Lauds Public for Cooperation

Most 'Kicks' Come From Pressure Groups, OPA Administrator Points Out.

By Leon Henderson
Administrator of the OPA

(Because the present rationing program is of paramount interest to every person, this paper presents an exclusive article written for members of the Western Newspaper Union syndicate by Leon Henderson, price control administrator. The views expressed are those of Mr. Henderson.)

There are still a lot of rough spots in rationing, but we know we're on the right track because most of the kicks we're getting are coming from the pressure groups, and comparatively few from the public.

And as more and more rationing becomes necessary, we're going to make more mistakes. But we're going to find them out, and cure them one at a time because that's the way progress is made.

While rationing on the modern scale is unprecedented, rationing itself, is nothing new to Americans. As a matter of fact, it's older than our government itself because the Pilgrims used it at Plymouth Rock to weather the hardships of days of scarcity. Washington, of course, was the nation's first rationing administrator. Indomitable courage, and rationing, brought his men through Valley Forge. Rationing played a great part in the settling of the West because many of those hardy pioneers would never have made it across the desert if they hadn't pooled all their supplies and shared alike.

Fight for Life Itself.

Now that our nation faces a fight for life itself, we're using this valuable tool to insure the necessities of life to every American so that we can all pitch in on the one big job of winning the war. That's what rationing really amounts to. The public, I believe, is realizing that rationing is a protective measure for the individual and the country instead of an unnecessary restrictive device, and they are supporting it, by and large, as they are supporting our other necessary war measures. Most of the criticisms that come to us from the public are from people who really don't understand the purposes of rationing programs and why they are necessary, or those who have been misled by selfish interests seeking to destroy rationing, into the belief that it is not necessary, or that it is being done simply to make our people aware of the seriousness of the war.

Six Commodities Rationed.

In the first eight months of war for our country, we have had to ration six commodities: sugar, tires, autos, typewriters, bicycles, and in the East, gasoline.

Very briefly, here are the reasons:

We can't ship enough sugar into the United States to give everyone all he wants of it; therefore, we ration sugar so everyone can have a fair share.

Our principal source of rubber is cut off; we can't make enough tires for everyone; therefore, we ration tires to serve our country's most vital needs.

We need our auto factories for war production. No more autos. So we ration what autos we have on hand to serve the country's greatest needs.

We need all the typewriter factories for manufacture of shells, gun parts and other war supplies. Typewriter production stops, so we ration the typewriters we have on hand to meet our most essential needs.

We need the metals and rubber that go into bicycles, for war production. No more bicycles. So we ration the bicycles we have left to those who really need them.

In the East, we can't get enough gasoline because we haven't enough tankers or other facilities to transport all it takes to run all cars as usual without hampering our war effort. So we ration gasoline to give every essential user enough for his actual needs.

Each Problem a New One.

While the underlying purposes of these rationing programs can be stated that simply, the working out of the machinery to make them effective and fair to our 130 million people is quite another matter Even if we had the benefit of long experience in such work, the launching of a new rationing program would still be a man-sized job. But to work out rationing systems for 130 million people is something new under the sun. Never before in history has it been done. Every problem that arises is a new problem. We can't call in the experts, because there are no experts. We have to work it out on what seems to be the soundest possible basis, and when we find we're wrong, and our plans don't work, we have to go back and change them. We're learning as we go.

But we have been beset on the other hand by another kind of criticism that has not been helpful. Our rationing programs have been subjected to criticisms and attacks from enemy and selfish interests whose sole purpose was to destroy public confidence in rationing; to wreck the system.

These enemy attacks were designed to hamper our war effort by spreading confusion and dissatisfaction on the home front as one phase of the Axis propaganda activities in the United States. This of course emanated from the offices of the former Bund members and other enemy agents and is dealt with whenever the FBI breaks up the work of spies and saboteurs.

Downright Selfishness.

But the other is the result of downright selfishness as opposed to the higher interests of our war effort. There have been some—and fortunately the number is small considering the size of our country—who have sought to wreck our rationing programs because their own personal profits from the sale of the rationed commodities were reduced. They have sought to do this by citing misleading figures in attempts to prove that shortages do not exist in the rationed commodity in which they hold an interest, and that rationing therefore should be discarded

These people, whether they realize it or not, are committing an unpatriotic act. They are putting their dollar profits ahead of their country's interests, and are trying to bargain their hopes for future freedom for the quick financial gain that would come from frantic hoarding by a panic-stricken people.

It is not sufficient for good Americans simply to ignore the attacks made by these selfish interests. We should all be vocal in our denunciation of such propaganda and demand that every person making such unwarranted statements designed to wreck our rationing programs, back those statements with facts to prove them

End False Rumor.

This does not mean that American citizens should be denied the right to express their opinions on rationing, or any other subject. I am simply asking that Americans who know the importance of assuring fair, orderly distribution of commodities that become scarce during our war effort, place every selfish critic of rationing in the position of having to prove everything he says. We can thus bring to an end much of the false rumor and insidious propaganda that has beset our efforts to do a necessary job.

Constructive Criticism Invited

The public has been wonderfully patient because most people know how difficult such a job must be. The constructive criticism of the large numbers of persons who have written to us, and of the loyal newspapers of the country have been a great aid in helping us plan soundly. We eagerly invite such constructive criticism.—Henderson.

Like millions of other housewives throughout the U. S., Mrs. Leon Henderson, wife of the Office of Price Administration's head, went through the routine of registering for her sugar rationing book. Dr. Elmer S. Newton, superintendent of Western high school, Washington, D. C., is filling out the application blank for Mrs. Henderson.

The other lady on the left is Mrs. Henry Wallace, wife of the vice president.

Paint Scarcity Looms, Home Economist Gives Hints on Its Best Use

College Station, Texas.—Before long, paints of many types are going to become scarce.

Mrs. Bernice Claytor, specialist in home improvement for the A. and M. college extension service, says shortages will be felt especially in paints, varnishs, and enamels for interiors. The reason is, these require natural or synthetic resins.

For some time synthetic resins have been ear-marked for exclusive war use, and lately the War Production board has ordered a 50 per cent cut in the amount of natural resins manufactured for civilian purposes.

Here are some of the specialist's suggestions for choosing and using interior paints to the best advantage.

Semi-gloss paint, which washes well and is not too harsh in appearance, is suitable for kitchens and bathrooms.

Flat paint gives a "soft" appearance and is best for large areas such as walls and ceilings. It soils less quickly than gloss paint, but it will not stand up as well under washing.

Calcimine is the cheapest wall paint available. Though it cannot be cleaned, it can be washed off entirely and a new coat applied.

The specialist cautions:

"Don't use calcimine on smooth woodwork or on walls which have been covered with oil paint." The coating eventually will chip off and make later re-painting far harder.

Enamel should be used only on very smooth surfaces, for it makes holes, chips, and scars more noticeable.

Homemakers who want to avoid the trouble of sandpapering and planing uneven surfaces, should use a gloss or semi-gloss paint instead of enamel

With other scarcities looming, homemakers have been requested by many universities' extension specialists and government officials to file clippings which describe how such material can be efficiently used

NUTRITIONIST TELLS HOW TO GET BOUYANT HEALTH

Urbana, Ill —Folks can't help but know when they possess that much sought after prize—buoyant health, according to Mrs. Nettie Esselbaugh, home economics nutritionist, University of Illinois.

The fact is they feel wonderful. They feel capable of tackling most any job. They're pleasantly tired at the end of a full day but have a satisfied, happy feeling of having done a job well.

And they're all set to begin again the next morning.

There's no tired, dragged-out feeling, no languid appetite, headache, nervousness, irritability, constipation and other annoying ailment which can be traced back to the fact that they are not getting the right food in the right amounts.

Many ailments are so common and generally accepted by everybody that it never occurs to some folks that they can help themselves to health by eating more of the vital "protective" foods, rich in vitamins, minerals and proteins, the nutritionist suggested. These liabilities usually do not receive the attention of the doctor, but quietly undermine health and stamina.

Health of the teeth, sharpness of eyesight, mental alertness, bone formation and maintenance, as well as digestive disorders, are influenced by what people choose to eat—or rather not to eat.

WOODEN SAILING SHIPS

When Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne C. Taylor was flying to Rio for the Inter-America conference, he remarked:

"Our toughest problem is shipping. We have to find something that will give us the most cargo space, using the least critical material. That's the formula."

Then he looked out of the plane window and saw a tiny sailing vessel below. "You may laugh," he said, "but we may even come to that."

That was last January. What Taylor had said on an impulse stuck in his mind. At Rio he talked it over with Brazilians who were worried about moving their coffee crop. He was sure he had the answer to the submarine campaign—ships requiring no critical materials, ships that would coast along in shallow waters and keep alive the trade among the Americas

But he struck a snag in Washington. The Maritime commission was not interested Skeptics said it was a reversion to the "horse-and-buggy days" of the sea Three times Taylor worked up his project in revised forms, but each time it failed to click.

Then he tried another tack. He published an account of the project in a trade weekly of the department of commerce Immediately it struck fire. Boat builders all over the country wanted to take part in the enterprise. Official interest was kindled.

Result was that RFC allocated $10,000,000, with which the Rockefeller Office is setting up a corporation to build and acquire wooden sailing vessels for inter-American trade.

Two designs have been completed, one for a shallow draft vessel and one for a heavy sea vessel. Yards have been selected in Latin America, and contracts are being let.

There will be an endless belt of 300-ton sailing ships, making long and short voyages, using auxiliary engines when necessary, but saving fuel by using, most of the time, the trade winds that made the Caribbean famous in the days of Clipper ships.

VICE PRESIDENT'S RECREATION

On a hot August morning, when residents of the Wardman Park hotel had fans turned on full blast, they looked with surprise to see four figures come out on the tennis court. They looked a second time. It was the vice president and a party of friends out for a set of doubles.

Henry Wallace took off a pair of slacks, threw them into a corner, and trotted out onto the court in white shorts and a white sports shirt. It was eight o'clock as the game began.

Wearing no hat or eyeshade, and wielding the racket in his left hand, Wallace entered into the game with the gusto of a high school boy. It was not tennis of professional quality, but it was high class amateur play. Frequently the ball was returned eight or ten times in a single exchange. Once when Wallace was at the net, he made five returns in succession, finally won the point.

At 9:05 the set ended. Wallace retreated to the corner of the court, pulled on his slacks, headed back to his apartment for a shower.

Other apartment dwellers, still sitting in front of the fans, sighed and shook their heads in wonderment.

NO BOASTER

The 43rd division's signal company from Rhode Island has a young buck private who has a great future before him—of some kind.

The other morning, while on K.P. duty, he offered to bet the mess sergeant $5 that he could eat two good-sized watermelons in ten minutes flat. The sergeant was suspicious.

"What makes you think you can?" he parried.

"Because," was the reply, "I just polished off two when you weren't looking."

Second Front Draws Near

By Quentin Reynolds

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

Here in London it is evident that the RAF is slapping Germany silly. They are doing it with quick daring thrusts in which airmen and commandos work in co-operation with the navy.

And today 80 per cent of the people here on Churchill's island, and a great part of Russia and America, are screaming to Britain: "Stop boxing the enemy! Go in and slug him!"

In other words, Britain is being urged on all sides to establish a second front, regardless of the German strength in France and other occupied countries.

Superiority of Armanent.

The thousands who are mounting soap boxes and platforms in Britain, the hundreds who pen cutting editorials asking why the government does not start an immediate second front, the impatient Russians here in London and in Moscow, quite understandably crying for vengeance against those who have killed some two million of their countrymen, the British civilian start-second-front-at-any-price brigade—forget that though the walls of Jericho crumbled at the blast of a trumpet, there is no reason to believe that the defensive walls of German Europe will fall at the blast of anything except superior guns, airplanes and tanks.

Loud insistence upon the immediate opening of a second front has seemed to imply that Prime Minister Churchill and his government were not over-anxious to join with their Russian allies in an all-out effort on the Continent.

Churchill Never Lukewarm.

Nothing could be further from the truth, of course, and the Molotoff agreements made in Washington have formally spiked that idea. Churchill talks privately as he does publicly, and no one who has heard his vituperative private comment in regard to the Germans, no one who has ever heard him express his admiration for the way the Russians have fought, would for a moment consider that Churchill is lukewarm on the subject of a second front.

No one in Britain more earnestly desires to establish and maintain a bridgehead on the continent than does Mr. Churchill.

Nor would Churchill's worst enemies ever ccuse him of cowardice or lack of decision when it comes to offensive action.

He has shown himself willing to gamble on any occasion when there was a chance of winning the gamble. It is no secret that when Wavell attacked the Italians in the desert back in December, 1940, he bit off a little more than he could chew. He asked Churchill for more tanks. At that time there was a serious threat of invasion in Britain, yet Churchill without hesitating sent Wavell the one armored division that Britain had, and with it the general smashed the Italian army thoroughly. This was typical of the chances which Churchill is willing to take.

Not so long ago, he actually took weapons from the hands of British soldiers and sent them to Russia. These were not surplus weapons, they were the only weapons the men had. Admittedly, Britain's army was weakened, but Churchill had shown more than once that he is committed wholly to the policy of putting weapons in the hands of those who are killing Germans.

Today's Big Problem.

Why, then, has not this bold leader ordered that a second front be opened? The answer is very simple. Such an undertaking is still a gamble. It may continue to be a gamble for at least another six months.

Any attempt to invade the continent now might easily result in another and more costly Dunkirk. If those who have been leading the clamor for a second front knew what resources the Germans have in France, Norway and other possible invasion points, if they knew the vast amount of so-called special-assault equipment required, they would realize that their agitation is very, very premature.

Maginot Guns Waiting.

There was once a little toy called the Maginot line. It stretched 700 miles and it bristled with guns. Very few of these guns were ever shot except in practice. The Germans captured all those guns. Today they are on guard against a British invasion. The whole coastal area is manned by these excellent guns.

There is the problem, then—300,000 men, well equipped, well entrenched, and with a rather large body of water protecting them. It is a military problem which has never been solved.

J. Fuller Pep

By JERRY LINK

"Fuller," says Aunt Netty, the other day. "Folks are like wine. Some sour with age, and some, like you, get better!"

"Mebbe," says I, pickin' up that little compliment, "that's because I feel so good most of the time." For, you know, folks, when you feel good your disposition's apt to be good, too. But to do that, you got to eat right, which includes gettin' all your vitamins. And KELLOGG'S PEP is extra-rich in the two most often short in ordinary meals—vitamins B₁ and D. Mighty fine-tastin', too. Try it!

Kellogg's Pep

A delicious cereal that supplies per serving (1 oz.): the full minimum daily need of vitamin D; 1/4 the daily need of vitamin B₁.

Taken regularly—Pinkham's Compound helps build up resistance against such annoying symptoms. Follow label directions. Well worth trying!

By JUDY GARLAND
Young Screen Star

You don't have to sing or dance to entertain the soldiers. All you have to do is talk. Just pull up a chair, sit down and be prepared to answer a lot of questions. That's one thing I found out during my tour of the Army camps. All the fellows want to know about Hollywood and the motion picture stars and I wanted to know all about them.

If the soldiers asked me questions, it didn't compare with the quiz I put them through. All my life I've wanted to travel throughout the United States, staying a week or two in each town. I wanted to meet people from different parts of the country. When you live in one town, your scope is narrowed.

Of course, a trip like that would be impossible for a working girl, but I didn't have to make it. In each camp I met and talked with boys from every city and state in the Union. It was everything I expected and more than an education. I had to know about each one, where he came from and what he did. The thing that touched me most was that they were equally interested in me. If it hadn't been for the boys at Camp Robinson, I would never have had a wedding cake.

WEDDING CAKE DONATED TO ME BY SOLDIERS

The day we played there was my wedding anniversary. My husband, David Rose, who accompanied me on the trip, and I were talking about it. The boys overheard and that night we were given a surprise party. The highlight of the evening was a huge wedding cake topped by a tiny bride and groom. A wedding cake was the one thing I felt cheated of when we were married. Now I had that, thanks to a bunch of swell people.

The first time I sang for the soldiers I was scared to death. My knees shook and my voice trembled with a severe case of stagefright. It seems silly now, as I look back on it. Every performer dreams of stopping a show, but believe me, no show was ever stopped with the thunderous applause and appreciative response that greets an entertainer playing to a group of soldiers.

TOURING CAMPS LIKE 'OLD HOME WEEK'

In a way, touring the camps was like my old vaudeville days. Making overnight jumps on milk trains and playing four-a-day instead of the usual two. It was like "old home week." Many of the performers were people with whom my mother and father, as well as my sisters and I, had played in vaudeville.

It was wonderful to see these people, headliners twenty-five years ago, return to bring the house down in Army camps all over the country. One of the troupers told me he never hoped to experience a greater moment than the day he opened at the Palace Theater eighteen years ago. But he did when, with the same act, he received an even greater ovation at Fort Knox in Louisville, Kentucky.

A NEW CRADLE FOR TALENT

Willie Shore, the "Abba-Dabba Man," who was my favorite comedian when I was a little girl, played with us at one camp. He does an act with a seltzer-water bottle and I used to sit out front with the soldiers and watch him. It never failed that when he squirted the water it would land on me. This often resulted in my appearing on the stage in a slightly wet and bedraggled condition, but it was wonderful.

These performers were all my old friends and it was grand to see them back in front of an audience where they belong. Camp shows have not only brought entertainment to the soldiers, they have revived vaudeville and opened a new field for young hopefuls who up to now have had no opportunity to appear before an audience. A new cradle for talent has been found.

We did four shows a day. One at the reception center where the newly inducted boys gather, one in the hospital and two in the auditorium. At each show I sang two set songs and then did request numbers. It seems the boys favor the old songs and in my case the two outstanding requests were "Over the Rainbow" and "Dear Mr. Gable."

The first time they asked for the "Gable" song I was stumped. It had been a long time since I had sung it, but after ad-libbing the lyrics a few times, the original ones came back to me. The shows were all at night and my days were spent touring the camp.

There's one thing about the army. It has a swell sense of humor. When I started out I couldn't tell the difference between a private and a general. I was introduced to a colonel one night and to the great amusement of all the boys I acknowledged the introduction with a "I'm very happy to meet you, Corporal!"

They howled and when I arrived home they sent me a huge chart listing all the insignia and what each stood for. Just to keep me straight, they wrote.

Fabric-Conserving Fashions Possess a New Kind of Style

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

LET no one think that specifications for conserving materials in wartime have put restrictions on attractiveness On the contrary, the new order of things is ushering in a fashion cycle frought with a newness in chic and charm that is excitingly interesting. Instead of finding them disappointing, you'll find that the new styles have exactly what every woman is looking for—neat silhouette and fine basic design, together with innumerable little niceties of detail which are flattering and lovely and expressive of all that is best in costume technique.

The manipulation of fabric so as to use less yardage simply fascinates with its artfulness and resourcefulness. Materials favored for the new "priority fashions" are those which lend themselves best to a delightfully feminine, draped and moded styling which achieves the utmost in figure flattery. For this purpose rayon crepes are proving ideal for the entire dress or used in combination with satin, faille or velvet. The working of two fabrics together is fashion news of outstanding importance for fall. In fact, the new black-on-black vogue which works black crepe or jersey with satin or faille or touches of black velvet is the fashion high spot of the immediate moment.

Another new trend which reacts to the good in response to the demand for curtailment in the use of metal fastenings is the amazingly clever way in which dresses and coats and blouses are made to close with self-fabric ties, or wraparound devices or with plastic buttons which are as ornamental as they are useful. New to fashion is the wraparound frock with surplice back closing. It's a style you'll adore, for it's slenderizing to the 'nth degree. See it pictured to the right in the accompanying illustration interpreted in smart black rayon sheer, a material which is ideal for summer-into-fall wear. Delicate touches of fine black rayon net at the neck, sleeves and hemline carry out the black-on-black idea now so important. A self-fabric sash ties softly at the buttoned back closing. Worn over a correctly fitted foundation garment, this suavely fitted frock has unusual grace and distinction.

Dressmaker tailoring distinguishes the charming two-piece suit frock to the left in the above illustration. Designed for now and later in handsome black rayon faille, this model features the slim long-torsoed silhouette accented by folds of the fabric at chest and hips of the fitted jacket top. The new "priority" suits with close, fitted jackets and slim skirts must be worn over carefully fitted under garments to achieve the smoothly streamlined effect so essential this season.

For the very chic afternoon dress centered in the group sheer rayon crepe in deep, rich black is draped and molded along slim figure-revealing lines. A self-fabric spaghetti trim makes soft little bows at the flattering sweetheart neck and knots casually at the waistline above the skirt draping, which is concentrated at the front.

Tremendous play is being made on the working of black satin with dull-surfaced rayon crepe. Yokes, insets and bandings of the satin, as well as big, soft bows, give pleasing variation to fall frocks of contrasting fabric.

Color contrast is another featured theme. Designers are highlighting striking effects in no uncertain terms, using sleeves of one color and bodice top of another with the two colors appearing in the skirt. Coat dresses have panels of contrasting color to match the color of the plastic buttons.

Black Satin

Black satin suits are big news for fall. Carefully sleek for autumn wear is this stunning suit done in fashion's newest fabric favorite—satin! The little jacket of this New York creation features the new shorter length. It flares slightly, as does also the discreetly gored skirt. The highly decorative plastic buttons are in aqua coloring Together with an aqua colored corsage, they add the prettily feminine touch. The stores are showing satin suits of this type in dark, rich jewel colors, too, but black is the favorite.

Bangles

Braiding, passementerie, dangles of all kinds, sequin embroideries, beadwork, novelty buttons, plastic gadgets, much jet and crystal and a wide use of embroidery and applique give to fall fashions interesting variety.

'Black' Is Still an Important Word

At all fashionable gatherings it becomes increasingly apparent that black is staging a triumphant comeback into the fashion picture. The smartness and importance of black is strikingly evidenced in the stunning new black satin gowns featured in a prologue to the fall season.

The new black frocks that make slim silhouettes their theme are appearing everywhere in fashionable gatherings. They look smartest adorned with a single, important piece of jewelry and with giddily colorful long gloves and an enchanting hat to supply the prettily feminine touch.

Then there are the entrancingly "pretty-pretty" black sheers, many of which take on endearing pink or pale blue accents. Black shantung and black linen suits are declared by many to be the smartest town-wear costume of the season. For dressy afternoon wear there's nothing in the way of a suit which outclasses those styled of black bengaline. Women are also expressing a desire for simple daytime frocks made of black rayon jersey.

An Old Favorite, the Lace Blouse, Is Back

It is anticipating its advent a long time ahead, but there is promise of the return of the lace blouse to be worn with jewel colored velvet suits and, for that matter, with satin in deep dark colors or black.

The sheerest of sheer black lace blouses has been in evidence for some time past, and it will continue its triumphs. However, the big news is the lace blouse made delightfully feminine with frilly accents, styled either of delicate Alencon or of very sheer Chantilly.

EIGHTY army nurses whose names ought to go down in history because of the courage with which they did their work during the siege of Bataan will receive their due partially, at least, in a picture which paramount has scheduled for production in the autumn. Called "Hands of Mercy," it will be produced and directed by Mark Sandrich, who'll take a hand also in writing the scenario. Another timely picture will be Metro's "Next of Kin," in which Joan Crawford will appear as a girl without social background, who marries a naval officer, and finds herself confronted with navy snobbery Joan will come out on top of course!

Bette Davis refuses to call her vegetable garden at her Sugar Hill, N. H., home a "victory garden." Like a lot of other people, she discovered to her sorrow that vegetables won't grow just because you plant them. She says she'll be lucky if she gets one New England boiled dinner out of the whole crop.

Charles Boyer couldn't have Greta Garbo for that murder mystery, "Flesh and Fantasy," of which he is both co-star and co-director. But Universal did very well by him by getting Barbara Stanwyck to play opposite him in the second sequence.

Rosalind Russell thinks she knows what the boys in camp expect of picture stars, so she decided to take all the glamour clothes that she could pack into seven trunks when starting on the tour of army camps scheduled to follow completion of "My Sister Eileen." Though on a 16-hour-a-day schedule, she'll have clothes enough to change ten times a day. "I'll wear everything but a bathing suit," she announced. And she looks so fetching in a bathing suit!

Betty Brewer, the Paramount starlet, isn't wasting any time between pictures. The 15-year-old actress, who plays a featured role in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," is studying singing and taking piano lessons—takes piano from Diana Lynn and singing from Susanna Foster, also budding stars.

Paulette Goddard's new priority gown was made from just 1½ yards of fabric. Designed by the famous Valentina, it's a dinner dress of black jersey, made with a backless top and a short, peg-top skirt. You'll see her wearing it in "The Forest Rangers."

Warner Baxter, who hasn't appeared on the screen since early last year, when he appeared in "Adam Had Four Sons," for Columbia, has been signed by the same studio to make two pictures a year. They'll be based on the radio program, "Crime Doctor," one of our most popular air shows.

Can't keep "Mrs. Miniver" out of the news. With the announcement that it was being held at the Radio City Music Hall for the ninth week—no other film has been held there for more than six—comes the news that it had been seen in that theater by 1,142,107 persons.

A 400-foot long, 200-foot wide duplicate of the original runway of the Wake Island airfield was constructed in ten days at Salton Sea, Calif., for Paramount's "Wake Island"—a picture that promises to be one of the most stirring of all this year's crop of war films.

ODDS AND ENDS—Gary Cooper's rapidly catching up to Don Ameche as a portrayer of famous men on the screen . . . Dennis Morgan has been taking daily treatments for the "sand blindness" he suffered while on location near Gallup, N. M., for "The Desert Song" . . . Ginger Rogers taps to only the tune of her own humming in "The Major and the Minor" . . . "Little Miss Marker," the film which made Shirley Temple famous eight years ago, may be filmed again by Paramount, with Baby Sandy in the leading role . . . Dorothy Comingore, has refused all assignments since she made "Citizen Kane."

Cherokee Rose

An old Indian legend recounts the love of a young Seminole warrior for the daughter of an enemy Cherokee chieftain. When the girl fled with her lover to live among the Seminoles she took along as a souvenir of her native country only a sprig of rose, which she planted in her new home. This is the Cherokee Rose, which came to be regarded as a symbol of the land of Georgia. It is the state of Georgia's official bloom.

HERO HAD BACON 'N EGGS IN KLEMME HOME

The first American soldier to fire a shot for liberty on European soil in World War II was revealed Monday to be Corporal Franklin Koons, a 23-year-old Swea City, Iowa farmer and a close friend of Otho Keraus, former linotype operator at the Times office.

'Zip" Koons, as he is known by home folks at Swea City, ate a big breakfast at the home of Mr and Mrs Wm C Keraus, not longer ago than last October 12th.

It was a Sunday morning when Mr and Mrs Keraus were getting ready to go to church when a load of soldiers drove up into their yard and lead by Otho Keraus "invaded" the Keraus home and enjoyed a breakfast of bacon, eggs, coffee and rolls prepared by Mrs. Keraus The boys were on a furlough from Camp Claiborne and with Otho were "Zip" Koons, Dick O Green, and Harry Johnson of Swea City, Truman Kittleson, driver of the car and from Ceylon, Minn. Two other soldiers were with them going to their homes in Fairmont.

Mr and Mrs Keraus recall that "Zip" was full of pep and not a bit bashful

He was with the U S Rangers and the British Commandos in the big raid last week, and came thru without a scratch

Mr and Mrs. Wm Keraus are quite elated that "Zip," now the hero of the nation, was a guest at their home.

And the incident again brings the war right home to Klemme.

IS "OLE" GIVING UP HIS GOLF?

With one ear to the ground we have heard that "Ole" Ramsay, a former disciple of the nimrod clan is beginning to "slip away from golfing" "Ole" has actually taken up fishing again and has gone so far as to rent a cottage at thelake (much to the disgust of his golfing pals)

At one time "Ole" was an ardent fishermen until the golf bug got a hold on him. However, we have always thought that "Ole's" shape is more ideal for fishing, than for the game of golf. "Ole" has difficulty in seeing the golf ball. Not because of the Milwaukee front as "Ole" is a former athlete and it is his chest which has slipped, shutting off the view of a golf ball for him.

But we again welcome "Ole" into the nimrod society and assure him that the slippage of his chest will not interfer with casting a plug or flipping a fly. In case of deep water it may serve as a float.

Anyway, "Ole" you are welcome back into the fold . . . but get rid of those golf clubs!

LEMKE IS "BIG SHOT" FISHERMAN

Walt Lemke is still pinching himself and trying to realize it was no dream when he pulled in a nine pound catfish at Clear Lake Sunday.

But Walt is putting on the high-brow when he meets up with such fans as Skeeter Albertson, Heinie Lewis, Sport Bridges, Eck Zeidler, Harvey Barz, Harry Smith and the writer and politely informs those gentlemen of the rod and reel that he is no ordinary fisherman and he goes in for the more choice sizes of the finny tribe.

Walt is pretty cocky these days, but he has a right to be. His fish is no minnow!

A NICE MESS

When a Grinnell contractor figured to move a house for Dave Graham of What Cheer, he was thinking in terms of entirety, and did not reckon on delivering lumber instead. The way it turned out was that in moving the structure it collopsed a bridge and came to rest in Coal Creek upside down. A piano that was on the ground floor at the time of the accident, later was salvaged out of the attic.

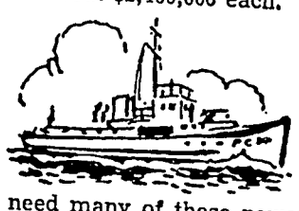
What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Aside from the sixty-mile an hour Mosquito Torpedo Boats, the Sub Chasers are the speedsters of our Navy. Light and fast, they are the eyes of the Fleet on the water. They displace approximately 1,500 tons and cost about $2,400,000 each.



We need many of these powerful, fast little boats to cope with the treacherous submarine type of naval warfare fostered by our enemies. Everybody can help pay for more Sub Chasers by putting at least ten percent of his income into War Bonds. Buy Bonds or Stamps every pay day. Buy them from your bank, your post office, or from your office or factory through the Payroll Savings Plan.

Beven of the Illinois Central System The government has requisitioned all of these materials.

IOWAN TO RESCUE

Lieut. Christian put out from shore after the first report of the sighting of the life boat came in, and his plane guided the drifter to another rescue boat which had been sent to the scene.

List Symptoms, Signs of Early Nutritional Fault

Early nutritional failure—early deficiency states—is probably far more prevalent among the population of the United States than is generally recognized, the subcommittee on medical nutrition, divison of medical sciences, National Research council, says in a report published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

In the report are lists of the symptoms and signs suggestive of early deficiency states in infants and children and in adolescents and adults. The subcommittee warns that no symptoms or physical signs can be accepted as diagnostic of early nutritional failure. It says, however, that symptoms and signs "When verified by a competent physician and when other possible causes have been ruled out should be considered as significant indications."

Those symptoms in infants and children which parents or teachers might observe are as follows: Lack of appetite, failure to eat adequate breakfast, failure to gain steadily in weight, aversion to normal play, chronic diarrhea, inability to sit, pain on sitting and standing, poor sleeping habits, backwardness in school, repeated respiratory infection, abnoraml intolerance of light and abnormal discharge of tears. The physical signs are bad posture and sores at angles of the mouth.

They're 'Jeeps' to Public But 'Peeps' to Soldiers

Those fast-moving little reconnaissance cars that have won a place in Uncle Sam's fighting forces may be "jeeps" to the public, but they're "peeps" to the army.

And thereby hangs a tale, according to Delmar G. Roos, chief engineer at the auto plant, who created the "standard design" jeep for America's fighting men.

In the army, he explains, the name jeep applies to a larger vehicle of the scout car type; but because some of the first 1,500 smaller cars manufactured carried the model marking "G. W. P.," soldiers dropped the middle initial and contracted the name from "G.P." to jeep. And it's been a source of trouble ever since! In fact, there are several other military weapons known as jeeps—including a small airplane and an anti-aircraft detector device—and the confusion of terms became so great prior to U. S. entry into the war that an army officer in Tennessee put a ban on the term.

Efficient Ski Repair Kit

Two new items for use of ski troops, a repair tip and a repair kit, have been developed by the army. The repair tip, carried as emergency equipment by one out of every four to eight men, is made of a light metal and fits any ski. It is designed as a makeshift to get a ski trooper back to his post when the tip of his ski has been so damaged that it cannot be used. The repair kit consists of a bag of tools for repairing skis which weigh less than eight ounces. An important tool is a wrench and pair of pliers in combination. The wrench will fit the nuts on the contraction band, a thin strip of metal used to hold a split ski together.

Also in the kit are a file and a countersink. The file is used to cut off the metal edges of a damaged ski at the desired place. The countersink is used to enlarge holes along the metal edges of a ski, in case large size screws must be used in repairing the ski.

Promotions for Army Non-Coms

Increasing the opportunity for promotion to the non-commissioned grades and at the same time simplifying the army pay system, the war department in the near future will eliminate the rating of specialist and create three new grades for enlisted men.

The new grades are technician third grade, technician fourth grade and technician fifth grade. Men of these grades will be non-commissioned officers, receiving the pay and allowances of the grade specified by their title, and will wear distinctive chevrons.

These technicians will rank in order of the dates of their warrants below non-commissioned officers of the same pay. For example, a technician third grade will rank below a staff sergeant. Similarly, a technician fourth grade will rank below a sergeant, but above a corporal, and a technician fifth grade will rank below a corporal but above a private first class.

United Kingdom Taxes

No taxes are imposed by the United Kingdom on either colonies or dominions. This is true also of war expenses. Financial contributions of British colonies to the war effort have been in the form of free gifts for the purchase of fighting aircraft, etc. The Dominions are independent members of the British commonwealth of nations. Their whole war effort, financial and otherwise, is entirely voluntary. Their financial support of the war has been chiefly in the form of (a) loans to Great Britain; and (b) in supplying their own materials. As allies of the United Nations they have sent armies to the various fronts and they tax themselves to maintain these armies.

War Plant Guards Being Aided by Clever Robots

Tiny robot sentries, many times more efficient than men in storm, fog and darkness, are now aiding human guards along the miles of high wire fences that enclose some of the country's greatest war-production plants.

Six months of tests under every conceivable condition were said to have proved the new sentry system to be the most efficient yet devised, with the robots "hearing" even the whisper of a person, the snip of a wire-cutter or the sound of a pick, and relaying these warning sounds instantly to the human watchman at his post or to a central guard station inside the plant.

Engineers said that the "acoustic fence" apparatus, as it is called, has the effect of multiplying by many times the number of guards on duty in adverse weather and at night. During heavy fog, blackouts, and night storms visibility is often zero and guards would have to be placed almost elbow to elbow to provide absolute protection along fences that often are 15 to 20 miles long.

But the robot sentinels can keep an alert 24-hour watch over every foot of fence, regardless of weather, enabling the human guardsmen to hear what is going on for blocks or even several miles along the fence line, and to tell instantly the location of any disturbance. Actually the fence itself serves as the robot's ears, capable even of overhearing voices speaking in whispers.

Celebrated Italian Tenor Lived in Two Centuries

Giovanni Battista Rubini was a celebrated Italian tenor, born at Romano, near Bergamo, Italy, April 7, 1795. His father, a music professor, was anxious that the boy be a musician, and at the age of eight young Giovanni sang in church choirs and played the violin in an orchestra. He continued concert work, his first important concert being at Naples, but his career probably dates from his first appearance in Paris in 1825.

Between 1831 and 1843 he sang either in England or Paris, and in 1843 he began a tour with Liszt through Holland and Germany. After they separated at Berlin, Rubini went on to St. Petersburg where the Emperor Nicholas made him director of singing in the Russian dominions and conferred on him the rank of colonel. He retired in 1844 to a home he had purchased near Romano and when he died there on March 2, 1854, he left a great fortune accumulated from his operatic career.

Police Shows Courtesy Pays

Police officials of Detroit, Mich., believe courtesy on the roads and the absence of traffic cutting and racing reduce accident rates substantially, so they are putting into practice an idea that a ticket of reward should be given courtesy drivers—and by the same traffic "cops" who ticket their erring ways.

During the few days the tickets of reward have been issued, they have been presented to a milkman who stopped his truck to help a confused, elderly lady from the middle of the street; a driver who helped push a stalled automobile to the curb after it had stopped for a red light; and two small boys who got off their bicycles at busy intersections and pushed them across the street on the outside of pedestrian traffic.

While the plan still is in its infancy, the police department hopes that a system may be developed for keeping a record of courtesy citations, and that eventually windshield stickers will be used to identify careful and courteous drivers.

Decline in Castor Bean Growing

The castor bean plant, from which we get castor oil, is not a legume, as many suppose. Although the plant grows wild and is cultivated in tropical and subtropical countries, it is cultivated also in the warmer parts of temperate zones. The plant has been grown in this country for more than a hundred years but became an important commercial crop only in certain sections of Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, and Illinois in the latter part of the 19th century, from 1860 to 1900. Since that time, however, the industry has declined and practically has been abandoned in this country. This decline has been attributed chiefly to the reduction in price caused by the importation of large amounts of cheap castor bean seed from other countries, especially from India, China and Brazil.

Pershing's Auto Number

Routine disclosure that Army Registration No. 17-561 has been issued to a light sedan assigned to the 503rd Parachute battalion at Fort Benning, Georgia, recalls that that was the number of the car used by Gen. John J. Pershing as commander of the A.E.F. in France almost a quarter of a century ago.

The big locomobile limousine which he used in France is now in the museum of the Holabird quartermaster depot. After the World war the car turned up in Washington in 1922. Two years later it was at Holabird, then returned to Washington where it was used by the quartermaster corps. In 1927 it was again returned to the Holabird depot, where it stands in the museum.

Everybody wants to know what to send a soldier, sailor, Coast Guardsman, or Marine. The answer is simple if he smokes a pipe or rolls-his-own. Send a pound of tobacco. Tobacco, according to numerous surveys among the men themselves, is the gift most appreciated, and most wanted. The favorite smoking tobacco of men in service men is Prince Albert—the National Joy Smoke—a title well deserved since Prince Albert became the world's largest-selling smoking tobacco. Local dealers are featuring Prince Albert in the pound can as ideal gifts to send in the service.—Adv.

It's a Good Morning With Flapjacks in Syrup!
(See Recipes Below)

Breakfast Time

Whether you wake to the crowing of a rooster or the jingle of an alarm clock, it's a signal to be up and about seeing to the day's work. But first! A hearty breakfast is in order so that the system can get started on its day's routine in the proper form. No matter whether it's for the head of the family going off to the defense plant, daughter on her way to the nurses' aid class, mother and the youngsters, no one should make merry blithely over this meal of the day.

For years doctors and dieticians have looked askance at those who skimped up a real up-and-at-them breakfast because it doesn't give the body a chance to start functioning early in the day. If you're tired you need fruit-egg-toast-and-beverage breakfasts to start your metabolism working at top speed to keep from tearing down of excess tissues. But if you're thin, then you need just as much of a breakfast with a few delicious trimmings, to start building up itself. If you're normal, you still need the hearty breakfast so you can maintain your health and give the body its daily nutritional requirements. And one of the best recommendations for a real breakfast is the good way it starts you off for your day's work. None of that sluggish, it's-hard-to-wake-up-in-the-morning feeling. No, Ma'am!

The hardest thing about breakfasts is that it's easy to get into a rut by serving the same old thing morning after morning. This is rather strange, considering how much time and attention is spent on planning variety for the other two-squares a day. Yes, why not variety for breakfast? And you can have this variety in fruit. I know you like juice pretty well, but you'll get out of the morning doldrums quickly enough if you punctuate the breakfast with favorite fruits-in-season, other fruit juices and some of those canned fruits you put up during the summer months. Toast? If you insist on toast, try some whole wheat, rye, raisin, cracked wheat, etc. Naturally, the bread should be enriched so you'll get the most out of toast. And then there are all sorts of hot breads that will send the family cheering to work—blueberry muffins, pecan rolls, muffins, and flapjacks!

Eggs in all manner of ways are a good standby. Poached, fried, cod-shirred, baked, scrambled, a la golden-rod, or combined with ham, sizzlin' sausage or crisp brown bacon—there you have a week's ideas.

The Cereals.

At least one serving of cereals is the nutrition requirement for the day. This is most easily served at breakfast, with cream and sugar and perhaps a few slices of fresh fruit or berries. Ready-prepared cereals are delightful, especially in the warmer weather — they're crisp, light, and nutritious. Recently some of the prepared cereals have been scientifically restored so they have all the whole-grain richness and nutritive value in them.

Light as down flapjacks are a welcome sight at breakfast! Try these:

Feather Fluff Griddle Cakes.
(Makes about 18 cakes)

2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups rich sour milk or buttermilk
1½ cups white flour
½ cup prepared pancake flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder

Have all ingredients at room temperature. Sift dry ingredients thoroughly. Add milk to eggs. Gradually stir in dry ingredients. Stir just enough to make a smooth batter. Cook on ungreased griddle. Try out one cake and if batter is too thick, add a little more milk.

Fried eggs are good to serve with these griddle cakes. Fry them thus: Slip eggs into a scant ⅛ inch layer of moderately hot fat. Cook at moderate heat, dipping fat over eggs to cook to desired doneness. Turn, if desired. Serve at once on warmed platter.

Sunday Breakfast.

Place sausage links in a frying pan, add a small amount of water. Do not prick the skins. Cover and let steam 5 minutes, then drain. Cook over slow heat, add 3 tablespoons of peach juice to 8 sausages and let brown. Serve with poached eggs on top of toasted English muffins. Red currant jelly or golden peach jam makes a delectable dish.

If you've never tried old-fashioned scrapple, you have a real treat a-comin' to you:

Pork Sausage Scrapple.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups cornmeal
4 cups boiling, salted water
1 pound sausage, in bulk

Cook cornmeal in rapidly boiling salted water, and add sausage to mixture. Blend thoroughly. Rinse a loaf pan with cold water and pack in hot scrapple. Let stand in icebox overnight, covered with waxed paper. Dip in beaten egg and fry until golden brown. Serve with spiced applesauce, cranberry sauce or maple syrup.

A variation of the ham 'n' eggs theme is this:

Frivolettes With Ham.
(Serves 6)

6 hard-cooked eggs, remove yolks
4 tablespoons grated cheese
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Salt and pepper
Melted butter

Mash yolks and mix with cheese, butter, seasonings. Refill whites. Press together. Pour a rich cream sauce over them and sprinkle buttered crumbs over them. Brown a few minutes in a hot oven. Serve on browned circles of ham.

What are your food problems? Cake making? Bread making? Pickles, jams, jellies? Children's lunches? Miss Lynn Chambers will be glad to give you expert advice on your particular problem, if you write her explaining what you want to know, at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Please enclose a stamped, addressed envelope for your reply.

Lynn Says:

Tips for Breakfast Fruits: If you're going to be a little short on sugar so do the most with what you have. A little salt in cooked fruit or sprinkled on such things as melons brings out true fruit flavor, requires less sugar. Lemon or lime juice with melon enhances the natural sweetness. Try it.

Orange juice, chilled before the fruit is squeezed, is an excellent pick-you-up. Let the sugar stand on grapefruit a while (while the coffee percolates) and the sugar will melt and go further. Try cooking fruit or juice first, but save half to finish off your breakfast—it will leave a fresh taste in your mouth.

Dried fruit stewed should have sugar added after it is stewed, with a pinch of salt. You won't need as much sweetening, this way. Cook dried fruits with a slice of lemon or orange. These citrus fruits have an affinity with dried fruits—apricots, peaches, prunes and apples.

RADIO COMMERCIALS YOU NEVER HEAR

". . . And it is generally recognized that a second front is of tremendous importance if civilization is to be saved. Now a word about Twidgett's Bread. Mr. Twidgett claims only one thing for his bread: it is just good bread. We have been too busy baking good bread to spare much time investigating vitamins. Twidgett makes bread the best way he knows how and there have never been any complaints.

"At this time between the Washington news on a second front and the last minute tremendous news from Russia, we wish to mention Twidgett's Sugar Buns. But only a mention, not a speech. Darned good buns, we think. We do not, however, claim that our armed forces cannot win the war if deprived of them."

"At this point, after which the news of the greatest naval fight in history, don't forget Boffle's Beer. It's made like most other beer, tastes like most other beer and, as a matter of fact, IS like most other beer. We think, however, it is more popular and our sales so indicate. It will not restore hair, cure intestinal troubles, give you a new outlook on life, solve the whole problem of evenings at home, make you a success in your business or simplify your gas and rubber cares. Boffle's beer is excellent, but we don't want to seem silly about it."

"Pausing for a moment between the tremendous news from Asia and the sensational dispatches from the Near East, we wish to take a few seconds for the Green Mountain Stogies. If they were not a popular stogie where would we get the dough for this radio program? They won't do a thing for you except give you a good smoke. All we can say about the tobacco is that it's the best we can buy. Without making ourselves ridiculous with an infantile melody to the effect that without Green Mountain Stogies life is not worth living, we return to the war news, which we feel a little guilty about interrupting . . ."

"And now, while civilization battles for its very existence a word about Hunkey's Goo Goo Bars. They're a candy. The kids seem to love 'em. They don't give a whoop whether they are filled with vitamins A B C and D or not. Neither do we. We are conscientious candy makers and know our business. Our sales have doubled since we cut out our somewhat absurd commercials, ditties and jingles and just interrupted this program for a few brief, simple mention of our popular product. We wish we had thought of it before."

"This account of the gravest battle to date is now interrupted for a mention of Zigger's Cooking Grease. Just a mention. There it is. Thank you. And back to the war news!"

JACOB SEEKS GOD'S HELP

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 32 2-12, 27-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—Psalm 46 1.

"O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home."
—Isaac Watts.

How true it is that "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." Jacob found it so, even though his trouble came upon him because of his own misdeeds.

God had prospered him at Haran, but in due time he was led by circumstance and by direct guidance to return to his own land (Gen. 31.1-3). Hindrances arose, but Jacob pressed on. As he came toward home, however, he recalled the sin which had caused him to flee. He remembered now how he had defrauded Esau and this

I. Guilt Brought Fear (vv. 2-8).

It always does. The sinful act of 20 years before now faced Jacob. He had left it behind and had all but forgotten it. He had hoped that the years would cover it, but they did not—and they never do.

"Be sure your sin will find you out" (Num. 32 23)—perhaps not this week or this year, or next; but until it is dealt with and forgiven it is there to rise up and plague you sooner or later.

Jacob's fear was increased by hearing that Esau came out to meet him with 400 men. He tried by his own devices to meet the situation, but ultimately realized that his predicament had reached the point where only God could help him.

How like us, trying everything else until we realize its futility, and then turning to God. How delightfully simplified life becomes when we turn to God first. Yet we are glad that Jacob's

II. Fear Brought Prayer (vv. 9-12).

It was real prayer, too, although, as W. H. Griffith Thomas suggests, it is strange that after his blessed personal experience with God he addressed Him only as the God of his fathers and not his own God (v. 9). Then, too, his faith seemed a bit weak, for it was coupled with great fear (v. 11).

We are told that fear is not a proper motive for turning men to God. Perhaps it is not the highest motive, but both in Scripture and in experience we find it to be true that fear often leads men to God in real repentance and faith. If the goodness and grace of God do not touch man's heart, it is assuredly far better that he should be saved through fear than to be eternally lost.

Jacob, however, needed a further experience of dependence upon God before he could be brought back in peace into the land. He was led to send everyone away so that he was alone when the Lord dealt with him and

III. Prayer Brought Blessing (vv. 27-29).

Jacob, who had by deceit taken the promise from Esau instead of awaiting God's time to give it to him, was now about to attempt another skillful scheme which would have won over Esau and sent Jacob into his land glorying in his own ability. In spite of all God's dealings with him, he was still Jacob the supplanter. So God had to deal with him.

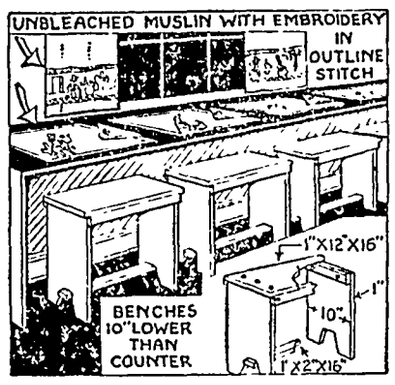
We sometimes think of the grace of God only as that which brings us blessing and joy, but often God is being most gracious and considerate of our real need by sending opposition and hardship.

The divine visitor let Jacob struggle all night, giving him a chance to submit of his own will; but when it was evident that he would not, he was shown that his own strength would not do, for he was made lame (v. 25).

The very thing which made Jacob sure of his own strength became his weakest point at the touch of God. He was not the last one to learn that lesson.

The comment of F. B. Meyer on this entire scene is most helpful: "Note that Jacob did not lay hold of this visitor, but the visitor lay hold of him. This is not a picture of a man coming to God, to wrestle with God in prayer, but a record of God coming to man, to break the spirit of stubbornness and self-sufficiency which a particular man has for too long a time habitually manifested. All night these two wrestled, the one from heaven and the one of earth, and when, at the dawn of day, Jacob saw that he could not prevail against the man, in his exhaustion and weariness he suddenly felt the touch of the stranger's hand on his thigh. Immediately his thigh was out of joint, rendering him absolutely helpless. But now Jacob realized that the one with whom he had wrestled all night was a divine person; and, whereas early in the night he was held in the grip of the other, now he refused to release his grasp of the visitor until he received a blessing from him."

ON THE HOME FRONT with RUTH WYETH SPEARS



EVERYONE knows that quick meals in the kitchen save time, but it was both time and space that had to be saved in this kitchen where breakfasts were eaten on the run and the children had but a few minutes for lunch. The problem was solved by building a 16-inch-wide counter under a window and then making simple stools to be slipped under it when not in use. The dimensions and construction of the stools are shown here. A saw, a screw driver and a wood chisel are the only tools that were used.

The stools were painted cream color to match the woodwork and the counter was covered with blue linoleum like the floor covering. Cream colored place mats, napkins and window curtains embroidered in colorful Mexican figures were then added to give a smart note of gaiety.

NOTE: These curtains, mats and napkins were made of flour bags and the gay figures tell a story of life down Mexico way. A flower seller, a peon on his burro; a caballero with his guitar, a man leading a pig to market, and girls carrying jugs and baskets on their heads are all worked in simple outline stitch. Transfer pattern including enough figures for six mats, six napkins, borders for one pair of curtains and extra figures for several pot holders, is available to our readers. You will find directions also for many other fascinating things to make in Mrs. Spears' Book 7. Send order direct to:

Motorist's Prayer

The following prayer, written by Dr. Frederic S. Fleming, rector of Trinity church, New York, should prove valuable for all motorists:

"Grant me a steady hand and watchful eye, that no man shall be hurt when I pass by. Thou gavest life, and I pray no act of mine may take away or mar that gift of Thine. Shelter those, dear Lord, who bear me company from the evils of fire and all calamity. Teach me to use my car for others' need, nor miss through love of speed the beauties of Thy world; that thus I may with joy and courtesy go on my way."

THOSE PESKY MACHINES

Rock Rapids citizens believed themselves back in the horse and buggy days for sure the other day when Ivy McKee's farm team hitched to a lumber wagon ran away down the main street, over curbs and across lawns and down alleys. The team, shying at a passing car, had bounced Ivy off at the outset of its mad carreer down a principle turnpike. No spectacle like that had been seen in the city for several decades.

IOWA LUMBER FOR WAR NEEDS

Typical Small Iowa Sawmill, One of Hundreds, Cutting Domestic Lumber, And One of the Products, A 2-inch, 18-foot Oak Plank of Furniture Quality

Iowa sawmills are buzzing at an ever-increasing tempo to supply lumber for military and domestic use. Contrary to general opinion that little or no commercial lumber is produced in this state, hundreds of small mills are sawing millions of board feet to be used by the army. The exact quantity being sawed is a defense secret; however, in Allamakee County alone more than 40 sawmills are producing lumber from Iowa woodlands. Iowa lumber is being used by the army for ammunition boxes, crates, gun stocks, and a host of other uses. The important trees being used for these purposes are oak, elm, basswood, walnut and ash. In addition, much native timber is being used by farmers for hog houses, chicken houses, graneries, cribs, etc.,to meet the increased demand for food production. Important by-products are wood posts, supplementing steel, and firewood that is helping to relieve the pressure on the coal and petroleum industries. For the most part, the trees used for lumbering purposes are prime trees of a large size, trees of small diameter being left as future crop.

Army of School Children In Step With War Effort

Shortage of Teachers Is Most Serious Handicap Of New Academic Year.

Willard E. Givens, Executive Secretary
National Education Association of the United States.

The 30,000,000 school children who march back to school this month keep step with another army—an army burdened with the equipage of battle, whose units march in Australia, Ulster, South Carolina, Dutch Harbor, Colorado, Midway. Both armies are enlisted in the same "total war," both have the same objective—victory.

This is to be a story of the army that is answering the schoolbell, of the rebuffs it faces, of its part in the fight. The school army is not as large this autumn as it usually is; some of those who would have marched with it are in the other army, or stand beside assembly lines, or pore over drafting boards, or are busy in laboratories. The high school, especially, will have fewer students, fewer teachers; for the teachers, too, have gone to the fighting fronts, to the factories.

The most serious handicap which the schools face due to the war is the loss of teachers. It is estimated that up to 100,000 of them, a tenth of the total number, are not in their schoolrooms this fall.

Many of the men teachers have joined the colors. Newly created auxiliary forces will take many of the women teachers, too. Many of those still with their school classes find that their incomes as teachers are not within reaching distance of the grocery basket. A teacher whose salary is $800 a year—the average salary paid to the teachers of a large midwestern state—accepts a war industry job that may net him three times as much money. He may not wish to leave his profession but he and his family must eat. There are many thousands of teachers whose salaries are not $800 a year, but $400 or $500 a year. A teacher who receives $500 a year will look longingly at a position in a government office paying $1,600 a year. She is quite likely to be qualified for it and quite likely to take it.

The shortage of teachers is naturally the most serious where the salary schedules are lowest, as in a southern state where the state average last year was $559 for all teachers and school officers, but there is a trek from schoolroom to factory all over the nation.

The most alarming phase of the teacher shortage is that it is greatest in the school subject areas that are most vital to the war effort. Teachers of physics, chemistry, mathematics, manual arts and certain of the biological sciences are in great demand in war industries and laboratories. When they leave the classroom for such work, they cease to train the thousands of students of mathematics and the sciences who are so urgently needed by the armed forces.

Between three and four million school children this fall will, therefore, find the school door closed when they arrive, or their educational opportunity considerably curtailed. Measures are being taken to minimize, as far as possible, the ill effect of the teacher shortage. Where students who have lost teachers are in the same school with those who still have teachers, classes are combined. This is usually not possible in rural areas where it may be many miles from a school without a teacher to a school which has one. Even where classes are combined, they often become so large and unwieldy that effective teaching is impossible.

Former Teachers Urged to Return.

Former teachers are being urged to return to the schoolroom. The ban against married women teachers is being removed in some communities.

All of these measures, however, offer only temporary relief, as was proved by the experience of World War I when the supply of teachers became so inadequate that the quality of education was greatly reduced.

It is well worth considering, nevertheless, that efficient instruction depends largely upon the teacher and that fully trained teachers are now, and always will be, hard to get at a salary which will employ a clerical worker who can be prepared for her work in a few weeks.

The army of 30,000,000 is entering schools this year that are geared as fully as possible to the war effort. Whether or not there is a lack of teachers, the organization, administration and instructional methods employed will be adapted, within the limits of available staff and facilities, to war needs.

Effective Remedy

Only one remedy has much promise of being continuously effective. Teachers must be paid well enough to enable them to remain at teaching. This is impossible in some states unless the federal government participates in financial support of schools. Educators and friends of the schools are trying desperately to secure such aid. That, however, is another story.

In many communities the students of 1942-43 will find a whole new division of education—the nursery school. The Man Power commission of the federal government is thinking in terms of woman power as well as man power. It asks for 3,000,000 additional women in the war industries by January 1, 1943. A large percentage of them will be married women who have young children. The nursery school is being established to take care of these children while their mothers are in the factories and offices.

The nursery school is already a fixed educational level in many of the better school systems, and the necessities of war will likely increase the scope and efficiency of learning in the earlier years of childhood.

'Speed Up' School Army?

The school army will face the demand for speed made in every field of preparation for this war. The United Nations have until recently found themselves everywhere equipped too late with too little. Consequently the cry, "Hurry, hurry!" It is aimed at the assembly lines, the cantonments, and field operations. The urge has not missed the schools Battles are fought by men who use machines; therefore "hurry the preparation of men" is a logical demand. It has been proposed that high schools continue during the summer, on Saturdays and holidays, that the school terms be reduced in length in order to give those who will soon be under arms as much education as possible.

In general, educators have strongly opposed universal acceleration of high school pupils.

The attitude of the Wartime commission of the United States Office of Education may be taken as typical. Its recent report points out that hastening the progress of students through school will enable them to "go into defense jobs, defense training classes, non-defense jobs to replace persons who have left for defense jobs, or into the armed forces . . . or to enter college earlier." These purposes are commendable, thinks the commission, but it rules against general acceleration in favor of stepping up the rate of progress only for pupils who are physically and intellectually able to speed up with profit to the war effort and no damage to the pupils themselves.

Because this opinion is so widely held by educators, there is little likelihood that the school year 1942-43 will be shorter than the years preceding it. Another policy will be followed by colleges and higher institutions where the maturity of students and the exigencies of war make acceleration feasible and profitable.

Different Courses Emphasized.

The students who are entering school this month will find some outstanding shifts of emphasis in the courses of study since September, 1941. These do not represent radical changes.

Only a few of these changes can be offered by way of illustration. Geography is an excellent subject with which to begin since, unlike current events and history, it is usually thought of as not changing much from day to day.

The continents and oceans, the mountains and rivers are more or less constant in size and position. These physical facts, however, are not of great importance except as they affect the lives of men. The geography textbook, therefore, which includes a chapter on the rubber plantations of Sumatra and the Malay peninsula, is due for some revision. War has considerably altered the political status of great portions of the map, world commerce has found new trade routes, and trade itself is heavily in commodities little sought a few years ago.

Methods of travel are changing the character of the maps which today's students will use. Aviation has made the "flat map" or Mercator projection of secondary importance The globe is taking its place.

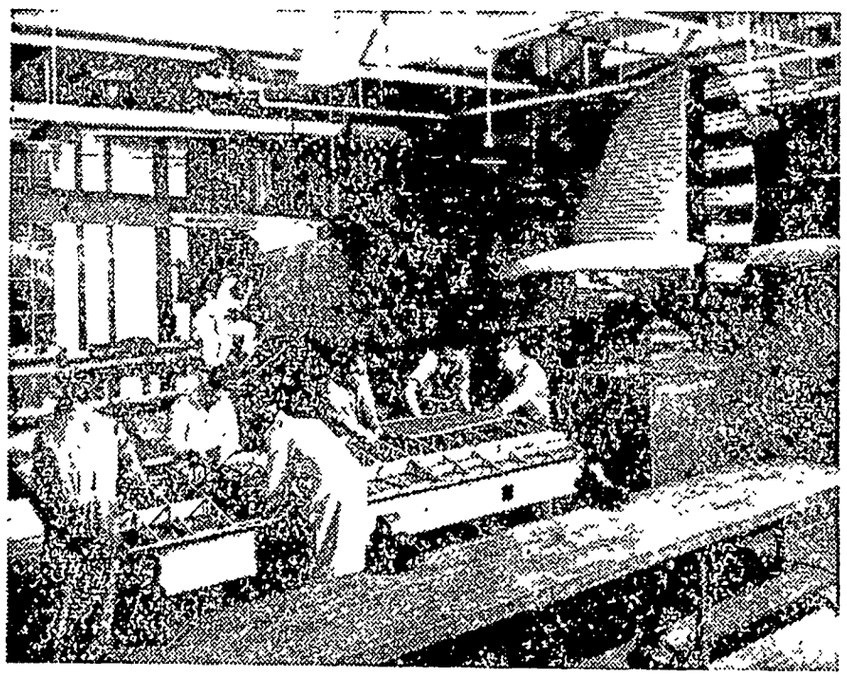
Those of us who visualize Japan due west of the United States find it difficult to realize that airplanes on their shortest route from Tokyo to the Panama canal would first strike the United States somewhere on the Canadian border.

The Need for Mathematics.

Mathematics, another study that is often thought of as fixed in nature since the same two numbers always add up to the same total, will see its change also. For many years the schools have been adjusting arithmetic to the daily needs of a people at peace. The textbook problems, therefore, have had to do with matters like life insurance, income taxes, budget making, home management and bookkeeping. Suddenly there comes a demand for skill in the use of the mathematics needed by the bombardier and gunner.

The reason for the lack of these skills is the same reason which prompted our government to sell scrap iron and gasoline to Japan. We were a peaceful people and hoped to remain so.

The mathematics of navigation and ballistics, the chemistry of the munitions worker, the physics of the military engineer will most certainly find their way into school and college curriculums and will stay there until the minds and hearts of men are set once more on the arts of peace.



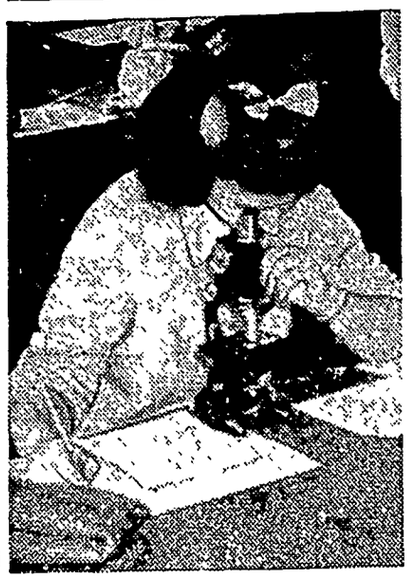
Fortunately, many high schools throughout the nation had well developed technical courses in their curriculum before United States entered the war. Now, throughout the land, such scenes as this one taken of the aviation technical course in a Brooklyn (N. Y.) high school are common. Reading, writing, and repairing is the theme today.

Direct War Work Enlists Student Aid

The boys and girls who constitute our school army this year will not only find their geography and mathematics and history and science adjusted to present needs, they will devote a great deal of time to direct war work. They will assist in the sale of war stamps and bonds, salvage for war purposes a great part of the metal and rubber and paper and fats that the American home supplies to the war factories. They will sew for the Red Cross and aid the nursing staffs of many hospitals.

In their school organizations as well as in their classes they will try to understand the war, to maintain morale on the part of themselves and others, to prepare for their part in the peace that is the supreme objective of all free peoples of the world. Not a day will pass this year without reminding the student of his duties as a citizen, without putting him actively to work in the machinery of democracy at war.

Technician



To carry on the war to a successful completion industry is requiring more and more youth with technical training. This young lady, intently studying an object through a high-powered microscope, will be well prepared to take one of the thousands of jobs which will be open to her when she leaves high school.

Walter Winchell

(WNU Service)

During Mr. Winchell's absence, on vacation, his column will be conducted by guest columnists.

By LIONEL BARRYMORE

Every actor knows what the critics think of him. These industrious gentlemen who distribute plaudits or brickbats, according to their views of plays and performances, have the benefits of their newspaper circulation to broadcast their views.

Now, having been offered the space of my friend Walter Winchell, with whom I often agree and just as often do not, I have the opportunity not often vouchsafed the actor to talk about the fellows who talk about him, in print.

Of the great stage critics there were some who honestly wrote what they believed, in spite of hell, high water and the newspaper's business office. No actor ever resented being criticized by one of these men. In fact, we respected their knowledge and views, and often benefited by constructive criticism. The same applied to playwrights, when these critics analyzed a play.

FIRED ACTOR TURNS CRITIC AND ROASTS SHOW

Sometimes critics are evolved in strange ways. Years ago my brother John and I were in a traveling repertory company. We had a friend, Fred Butler, a newspaper man, whom we persuaded to come along and try being an actor. This wasn't in any spirit of discovery. We were great cronies and liked to be together. Also Butler had a gold tooth which could always be pawned when we were broke.

The company got as far as Minneapolis when the director decided that Butler was no actor, and, much to the dismay of John and myself, "fired" him. Butler went out and landed a job on a newspaper. Then he talked the editor into letting him review our shows. Gleefully, he "roasted" them, and John and I used to laugh over his "roasts" at dinner each night. But they drove the manager wild.

I remember one gem in which he deplored that a good play "could be utterly ruined by an insignificant young actor named Lionel Barrymore."

George Bernard Shaw was a great critic, in the days when he reviewed plays for London publications. True, he sometimes wrote terrible things about them. But any criticism of his was tempered with justice. Mark Twain once tried his hand at dramatic criticism on the old Alta California in San Francisco, but never became really interested in it.

The motion picture brought about a new technique in criticism. The early "tintypes" were ignored. Then, as pictures grew in stature, critics were forced to write about them. At first, many had a feeling of hostility, but this gradually disappeared, and today a fine picture like "Mrs. Miniver" is reviewed by the keenest dramatic minds among the writers of the press.

NEW KIND OF CRITICISM EVOLVED BY MOVIES

Motion pictures have evolved a new form of criticism which the public never sees Pete Harrison started it, with confidential reports on pictures to exhibitors. He told them what to expect from the picture, from a showman's point of view, to equip them with advance information on the handling and exploitation of a film.

An adverse report meant that too much expenditure for advertising, for instance, was inadvisable. On the other hand, when he praised a picture, this meant that the exhibitor was safe in "going the whole hog" in exploitation.

Today there are numerous trade magazines, which review pictures in the same manner and for the same reason. They tell the exhibitor what to expect. Sometimes audiences fool them, however. Audiences may flock to a picture the trade critics had no faith in. And vice versa.

For, after all, the only reliable critic is the public itself.

A few days ago a group of studio writers and directors were discussing a certain picture. They picked holes in the story. They thought players were miscast. "When the critics get hold of it, you'll see," they chorused.

One veteran director spoke up. "Well, maybe you're right," he remarked. "It looks like nobody's going to like it except audiences."

He was right. The picture grossed a million.

WOMEN INFLUENCE HISTORY

All through history, from Helen of Troy to the Duchess of Windsor, women have influenced the tides of fate. And if it had not been for a woman in the life of Gen. Douglas MacArthur he probably would not have been in a position to perform his heroic defense of the Philippines and command Australia today.

Just after the last war, the belle of Washington society was vivacious Louise Brooks, step-daughter of the millionaire Edward T. Stotesbury, a partner of J. P. Morgan. She was the toast of Washington. General Pershing, just returned from France, was one of her most devoted attendants. Admiral Beatty, hero of the battle of Jutland, was another.

Once, after a dinner at Mrs. Marshall Field's both Pershing and Beatty escorted Louise to her car, nearly had an altercation over who was to take her home.

But General MacArthur, then superintendent of West Point, stepped in and married the lady. Shortly thereafter, General Pershing, not at all happy over MacArthur's victory, transferred him to the Philippines.

MacArthur and his wife were stationed in the Philippines for several years. And although the marriage later ended in divorce, it was MacArthur's tour of duty in Manila which acquainted him with Filipino leaders and later brought about his return as field marshal of the Philippine army.

BORED BY WASHINGTON

As a reward for selling $25,000 worth of war savings bonds and stamps, Delbert Hudson, Reno, Nev., newsboy, recently was given a free trip to the nation's capital by the Kiwanis club.

For several days young Delbert led the life of Riley.

He was entertained by Vice President Wallace, U. S. senators and high treasury officials. He lived in an expensive hotel, toured all the showplaces and polished off numerous ice cream sodas.

"Well, Delbert," asked Sen. Pat McCarran of Nevada when it was all over, "what do you like best about Washington?"

"My bed," yawned Delbert, "I'm tired."

SOLOMON ATTACK—A TEST

Inside fact about the attack on the Solomon islands is that it was very carefully planned six weeks in advance, and was different from any other naval action in the Pacific.

U. S. naval raids on the Gilbert and Marshall islands were hit and run affairs. There our navy had no idea of enemy strength, but depended on quick surprise hits and speedy withdrawal.

In the battle of the Coral sea also, we were able to take the Japs by surprise. And in the battle of Midway, we knew the enemy was coming, while the Japs did not know we knew.

But in the Solomon islands battle, our reconnaissance planes had made advance surveys and we knew fairly accurately the size of the enemy—knew also that we were up against a tough job that would exact heavy cost.

There is every reason to believe, too, that the Japs knew about our preparations, because troop transports cannot be loaded and brought within striking distance without enemy scouting planes sighting them. Therefore, this was a real test in more ways than one.

For instance, this was the first time land, air and sea forces all have co-operated in a single striking force.

Upon the final outcome of that co-operation will depend whether the United States follows the advice of many high army-navy strategists and concentrates more on the Pacific than on Europe.

BRITAIN'S FUTURE

A U. S official, back from London, tells of standing in line for breakfast at the Hotel Waldorf. Just ahead of him he heard an English lady say

"After this war is over, we'll have to fight a war of independence to save ourselves from becoming the 49th state of the United States."

This semi-good-natured, semi-grousing attitude, according to Americans returned from London, is rather typical of the apprehension which exists as to what will happen to Britain after the war.

There is no hostility in this, but realistic awareness that the war is strengthening United States ties, and weakening British ties, with Australia, Canada and Africa.

ALMOST any plain washstand or dresser may be given long smart lines by adding open shelves at the ends. Here, a top of plywood with a plain moulding around the edges extends across the top of the stand and shelves. By adding a plain baseboard and a coat of paint the piece is finished with a modern air. The diagram at the upper right shows how to make the wall decoration from a remnant of flowered chintz. If you use an old frame, the chintz picture may be given the appearance of an oil painting by applying several coats of varnish, allowing plenty of time for each coat to dry thoroughly

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS
● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.
● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.
● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

Japanese Rule in Korea

By Younghill Kang

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with American Magazine.)

Korea today is an object lesson to the world of what can happen to a nation that is conquered by Japan. Koreans, during the years of Japanese occupation, have been enslaved as no other people in the modern world.

During the long years of peace since Japan conquered Korea, she has had every opportunity to show to this prostrate, disarmed and helpless people some glimmer of justice, fairness and common humanity. She has shown none. With every passing year of her rule of torture, she has ground the Korean people into a deeper humiliation.

Yet she has not broken the spirit of the Koreans, and she knows it. Japan knows that in Korea, at her very doorstep in Asia, she has 22,000,000 deadly enemies who would fight her tomorrow if they had arms in their hands.

Rule by Armed Force.

The Japanese government in Korea is an army-police dictatorship. The dictator is the Japanese governor-general, responsible to no one except to the emperor of Japan—which means, in practice, the military clique around the emperor. The governor - general rules through swarms of Jap police and secret police—spies—backed up by an army of occupation.

Under this rule the Korean has no rights which the Japanese must respect. Suppose you are a Korean living in Korea today. If you walk down the street you can be slapped, spat upon, or kicked by any Jap who does not happen to like your looks, or who thinks you did not jump off the sidewalk quickly enough as he approached. Theoretically, you can sue the Jap in court for redress. In practice, if you make any protest, the Jap police will mark you as a trouble maker and then you are in for it.

The police can search your home at any moment, without notice. They can arrest you without a warrant. Once arrested, you cannot see a lawyer, or even send word to your relatives where you are. You are presumed guilty. You can be flogged or tortured without trial and without appeal. You may be held for months or for years; you may be beaten to death or crippled for life. If, as occasionally happens, the police desire the formality of a trial, you are tortured with fire and the rack until you sign a fake confession.

"But surely," you may say, "such cruelties are unusual." They are not unusual, they are the rule. They happen to hundreds of ordinary people in Korea every day.

Every year tens of thousands of Koreans are flogged and tortured without trial. It can happen at any time to any Korean, man, woman or child.

Japan's Peace Terms.

What Japan has done in Korea she will do in the Philippines, in Burma, in the East Indies, in China and in India, if she wins this war. She will do it in the United States if she makes good the boast of the Jap admirals who say they will "dictate the peace terms in the White House in Washington."

Japan's most effective slogan in this war is that she is fighting for the freedom and prosperity of her Asiatic neighbors—"Asia for the Asiatics." Millions of people in India, Burma and the East Indies may have believed this slogan. I bid them look at Korea. Japan's true purpose is "Slavery for Asiatics Under Japanese Masters," and of that Korea is the living proof.

This will give some idea of how Koreans, of every class and business, exist under the brutal heel of Japanese rule.

Most Koreans are farmers. If you own a farm on land so barren that you can hardly scratch a miserable living off it, the Japs may let you keep it—though they will seize any crop at starvation prices for the Japanese army. If your farm has fertile land, the Japs grab it under legal pretext, then take you back on the land as a tenant or laborer, but actually as a slave.

America in Korea.

Today in Korea, key point of Asia, 22 million people stir again and dream of freedom. But when Korea is first set free, she will be almost as helpless as a man who has been bound up for many years in chains. That is what Jap rule has done.

Americans were their good friends in earlier days. Americans built the first railroad, the first electric light plant, the first water works in Korea. They constructed the first large Korean steamboats, and taught Koreans modern mining methods.

LITTLE RED GANDHI HOOD

Once upon a time there was a little boy named Mohandas Gandhi. He reminded people of Little Red Riding Hood in a way. One day he packed a lunch and set off to visit grandma who lived in a cottage away out in the woods. It was a queer lunch consisting of raw vegetables and nuts garnished with queer notions. But Mohandas liked it, so he thought grandma would.

When he neared the cottage a great fire raged all around it and it was plain to see that there was the very devil to pay, but Gandhi didn't bother about that. As he was about to knock on the door he suddenly noticed that there wasn't any door. It had been torn away. But that didn't cramp his style, either.

"Grandma must be in trouble," he mused, but he brushed that suspicion away at once, and climbed across the charred beams into the bedroom.

Then he saw the bed upside down with a figure in it that was plainly not grandma to anybody but Mohandas. He wore thick glasses, you know.

The figure in bed was clearly a wolf that had put on grandma's nightcap and nightgown.

"Gr-r-r-r-rr!" it snarled.

"You don't sound like grandma," said Gandhi, "but I understand. Your voice is changing, that's all."

"You don't look like grandma," said Gandhi.

"Don't quibble," said the wolf.

"And, say, what big ears you have!"

"The better to hear you with!" said the wolf.

"And what big eyes you have!" said Gandhi.

"The better to see you with!" said the wolf.

"What a big nose you have!" exclaimed Mohandas.

"You should talk!" said the wolf.

"What big teeth you have!" said Mohandas.

"The better to eat you with!" roared the wolf, starting to get out of bed.

"Hold on!" cried Gandhi, "I'm not ready to be eaten yet."

"Why not?" demanded the wolf.

"I haven't got my freedom."

"What of it?" snapped the wolf.

"Oh!" replied Gandhi, "I must have my freedom first. I could never consider being eaten until I have it."

"I don't mind," argued the wolf. "I will eat you with or without it."

"Hush! I will be much better eating with it," insisted Mohandas.

"Bunk!" growled the wolf, looking skeptical.

At this moment fresh flames swept the cottage, the timbers began falling in. Gandhi and the wolf were running around the ruins at top speed.

"Wait a bit." insisted Mohandas. "Let's get this thing straight. Am I chasing you or are you chasing me?"

"This is pretty late in life for a man like you to start getting things straight," said the wolf who had now ripped off grandma's nighty and was wearing a Japanese uniform.

"Something's quite wrong here," said Mohandas.

"Listen," said the wolf, now a little disgusted, "I ain't your grandma. And I ain't going to eat you."

Mohandas looked the wolf straight in the eyes.

"Oh, yes you are my grandma," he declared, "and what's more you ARE going to eat me. Open wide!"

The wolf opened his jaws wide and Mohandas crawled in.

"Freedom is freedom," he announced as he disappeared down the slant-eyed wolf's gullet.

PADDY THE BEAVER GIVES WARNING

GRANDFATHER FROG sat on his green lily-pad in the Smiling Pool. It seemed to him that never before had the hearts of the lilies been so golden, or the sky so blue, or the laughter of the Laughing Brook so merry, or the ripples of the Smiling Pool so charming. On another lily-pad near him sat Spotty the Turtle. Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter were stretched out on the bank, and lazily swimming just in front was Jerry Muskrat. Grandfather Frog was telling them of his adventures and what he thought of the Great World.

"I have always told my cousin, old Mr. Toad, that the Smiling Pool is a much better place than the Great World. I was sure of it before ever I went out to see for myself, and now I know it," said Grandfather Frog.

Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter began to laugh. Grandfather Frog looked at them severely. "What are you laughing at?" he demanded.

"Much you know the Great World! Why, you haven't seen a tiny corner of it," laughed Billy Mink, who, you know, is a great traveler.

Grandfather Frog drew himself up proudly and replied in his most dignified way, "I will have you to understand, Billy Mink, that I have seen the Great World, and it is no place for honest people to live in."

"Did you visit Farmer Brown's dooryard?" asked Little Joe Otter.

"Or the heart of the Green Forest?"

"Or the Old Pasture?"

To each of these questions Grandfather Frog was forced to shake his head. It was rather mortifying to have to admit that after all he had been but a very little way out into the Great World, and he was trying to think of some sharp reply when Jerry Muskrat suddenly shouted, "Here comes my big cousin, Paddy the Beaver! Hello, Cousin Paddy! Where have you been all summer?"

Everybody turned to look in the direction Jerry was pointing There, sure enough, was Paddy the Beaver swimming out from the Laughing Brook. Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter stared. They had never seen him before. Grandfather Frog and Spotty the Turtle bowed politely. They had met him the time of the great trouble in the Smiling Pool and the Laughing Brook when the water had nearly stopped running because way up in the Green Forest Paddy had built a dam across the Laughing Brook. He had torn it down when his cousin had told him how he had spoiled the Laughing Brook and the Smiling Pool.

"I've come to give warning," said Paddy as he drew near.

"Warning of what?" asked Grandfather Frog.

"That I'm going to make my home up in the Green Forest," replied Paddy.

"Hurray! I'm so glad!" cried Jerry Muskrat, who was very proud of his big cousin. "But I don't see what you mean by a warning."

"Did you visit Farmer Brown's dooryard?" asked Little Joe Otter.

Paddy's eyes twinkled. "Well, you see I have got to make a pond up there," said he, "and to do that I have got to take the water of the Laughing Brook."

Everybody's face fell. They remembered how dreadful it had been before when there was so little water in the Laughing Brook and the Smiling Pool Paddy noticed it. "It will be for only a little while," said he. "Just as soon as my pond is made the water will run back in the laughing Brook and fill the Smiling Pool just as it is now. I wanted you to know what is going to happen, so that you will not be worried, and so I have come to give warning. I hope you will not feel badly about it."

'Pill' Used for Testing Metal's Temperature

Metallurgists now can take a metal's temperature by giving it a pill.

The new pill method was developed recently by Harry Blumberg, of Jersey City, to extend the range of existing temperature-finding methods to lower temperatures.

The problem which the pills solve is that of indicating the temperature of metals which are to be shaped or welded at less than 900 degrees Fahrenheit. Metal heated to 400 degrees, for example, is too cool to show a distinctive color by which higher temperatures can be determined.

Blumberg devised pills made of various compounds which melt at definite temperatures. After much experimentation, he developed a complete set of chemical pellets having sharply defined melting points from 200 to 900 degrees.

Now, when a plant operation is specified for a temperature of 400 degrees, the metal can be heated and a 400-degree pill, colored for identification, dropped on its surface.

San Quentin 'Rejuvenations'

Unknown to the outside world, except in limited medical circles, San Quentin prison in California for the past 22 years has been the world's greatest clinic for rejuvenation experiments, a final report by Dr. Leo L. Stanley, chief prison surgeon, reveals. All of the operations of Voronoff of Paris, Steiner of Vienna, and of other great surgeons and specialists in rejuvenation and the fighting of senility have been duplicated thousands of times as well as entirely new methods worked out by Dr. Stanley himself. In the 22 years, during which Dr. Stanley introduced and applied this system of treatment in the penitentiary, 10,000 such operations have been performed.

Hay production this year is estimated to be larger than last year and nearly as high as in 1940.

ITS TIME TO DIG POTATOES

Many reports are being received of potatoes rotting in the ground It is dangerous to allow potatoes to remain in the ground after the vines have dried, and this loss can be stopped by digging

Potatoes should be dug in the evening and picked up in the morning Or they may be dug in the morning and gathered immediately The tubers are easily injured if exposed to the sun for even a short time Spread the potatoes out in a well-ventilated shed or in the corn crib and allow them to dry off thoroughly for a few days Then cover with straw to keep out the light They should not be stored in a moist basement or cave during the warm weather months

Mute Swan, Once Eaten, Now Has Royal Tradition

The mute swan, Cygnus olor, has a royal tradition. The species is said to have been introduced into England from Cyprus by King Richard Coeur-de-Lion on his return from one of the Crusades. In Henry VII's reign the theft of swans' eggs was punishable with a fine and a year's imprisonment. To this day the king of England shares with the ancient Vintners and Dyers' companies the ownership of all the many swans on the Thames river. The swannery at Cookham, near Windsor, belongs to the king, and it is thence that George V and Edward VIII sent presents of swans to both Canada and South Africa.

Queen Victoria used to send every member of the royal family a present of a cygnet or young swan on New Year's day, but mute swans are not now regarded as table birds. In the past, however, the mute swan was highly esteemed as food, and accounts of banquets show that numbers of the great birds—full grown, they weigh between 24 and 40 pounds—were dished.

Auto Dealers on Main Street May Make Arms

The Main Street auto dealer may soon become a "miniature arsenal" for Uncle Sam's all-out armament drive.

At least that's the object of a survey of the nation's 40,000 new car retailers which was launched recently. It queried dealers for specific information on the number of lathes, grinders, drill presses and other machine tools available in their shops for light manufacturing.

The object of the study, which was prepared by Joseph W. Frazer, member of the OPM auto advisory committee, is to work out a plan by which large producers of armaments can award subcontracts to dealers for the manufacture of small parts. It is believed that it might be possible for several dealers to pool their facilities to handle subcontracts of considerable size.

Several foreign countries, particularly China, have kept their armies supplied by small shops which are widely scattered and less vulnerable to air attack.

Three Cities' Joint Airport

Three Michigan cities—Saginaw, Bay City and Midland—will co-operate in managing a new airport to be built with federal funds, adding to the list of more than 40 such jointly operated airports in the country.

The airport will be built by army engineers under supervision of the Civil Aeronautics authority, at an initial cost of $527,000. Half the land cost of $100,000 is assumed by Saginaw, which also will pay half the maintenance charges when the airport is finished. Bay City will pay 30 per cent of the maintenance costs and Midland 20 per cent.

The intercity action dates back to 1940, when the three cities requested state aid on individual airports. The joint project was suggested by the CAA, and each city passed an ordinance under the state enabling act permitting participation. A three-man commission consisting of the chief officials of Saginaw, Bay City and Midland, will operate the airport and will be responsible directly to the city councils.

Beavers Baffle Engineers

Ingham county, Michigan, road commission engineers, with the aid of a trapper, have solved a highway construction problem which has puzzled them for two years.

A family of beavers did it.

Alaiedon township was the location of the knotty road building problem The beavers had selected a timbered hideout along the poplar-lined branch of Mud creek. A troublesome sink hole developed at the point where the stream crosses a township road.

The problem was made more complex by the fact that the beavers had constructed a dam in the creek branch and kept the swamp thoroughly flooded. Engineers learned by tests that hard bottom was 60 feet from the surface of the old road.

Persisting in their efforts to build a firm road across the three-quarter-of-a-mile stretch of swamp, the county engineer obtained a permit from the state conservation department to trap the beavers. A trapper was employed and he caught three of the animals.

Magnesium for Duck Shot

Magnesium added to the lead used in duck shot may give wild ducks a chance for their lives if the hunter misses, the U. S. biological survey has announced. Paradoxically, the widespread use of this new type of ammunition would result in increasing the number of ducks.

Lead pellets of the kind now used get two chances at the ducks, survey scientists explain. The first is the hunter's honest chance to knock down a bird when he fires. The second puts no ducks in anybody's pot, but only kills the poor fowl by slow lead poisoning.

Shotgun pellets falling thick into hunted-over marshes where wild ducks feed are shoveled up as the ducks grub in the mud for food. They are retained in the gizzard like small pebbles, and as these are slowly rubbed down so the lead dissolves.

A Kernel of Corn Has Very Complex Structure

A kernel of corn is not just a sort of triangular bit of yellowish grain. It is a complex structure having five distinct parts, each of which stores a different material or mixture of materials The hull, or outer skin, is fiber. Next is a shallow layer of gluten, a substance rich in protein. On the sides and back of the kernel, inside the layer of gluten, a mixture of starch and gluten bulges in toward the center. Filling the upper portion of the kernel, and extending downward to partially surround the germ, is the white starchy part of the kernel. The germ itself is level with the flat "front" of the kernel. It contains protein, most of the oil and a large share of the minerals The five parts can be seen clearly in a kernel that is softened in water and cut open with a razor blade. From 15 to 20 per cent of the kernel is water, while 80 per cent of the remainder is starch and other carbohydrates, 10 per cent protein, 4.5 per cent oil, 3 5 per cent fiber and 2 per cent ash, or mineral content. Mother Nature has thus stored many of her chemurgic materials now being used by the modern miracle man, the chemist, to make "better things for better living."

Want Marriage Success? College Students Tell How

A selected group of 350 students at the Pennsylvania State college have just formulated a list of rules for increasing the number of successful marriages.

According to Dr. Clifford R Adams, assistant professor of psychology, the rules they agree upon are.

1 The couple should have saved at least 10 per cent of their expected annual income before they marry, that is, if their income will be $1,800, they should have saved $180.

2 Both the man and the woman should have certificates indicating proficiency in some vocation.

3 No remarriage should be permitted for a person with a record of two or more divorces.

4 Pronounced neurotics, dipsomaniacs, drug addicts, insane or feeble-minded persons, those with a criminal record of three or more offenses (excluding traffic violations), and those with venereal diseases should not be allowed to marry.

5 Candidates for marriage should be able to show a certificate from a course in home management and child care.

6 The couple should have birth-spacing information.

Charcoal Being Used Again

The use of charcoal in making light-weight alloys for aircraft construction has resulted in a substantial increase in the production of charcoal in Canada.

Before the war charcoal was used in Canada principally for kindling fires and as a fuel for charcoal cookers. On this continent charcoal was at one time employed in the manufacture of steel but has been largely replaced in that industry by metallurgical coke. In several parts of Europe, in Australia, and in other countries where the price of gasoline is high, charcoal has been used extensively in recent years as a source of producer gas to replace gasoline in the operation of internal combustion engines for buses, tractors, trucks and motor cars. With further reduction of supplies of gasoline such use may assume importance in Canada.

Charcoal may be made from any species of wood but in Canada it is generally made from the heavy hardwoods—maple, beech, and yellow birch.

Pennsylvania Big Game State

The nation's population of big game has been estimated at 5,964,000 animals. This was a 2 per cent increase over 1939 estimates.

The leading big game animals were white-tailed deer, with an estimated population of 3,526,000. Mule deer came second with 1,523,000 and Columbian black-tailed deer third with 323,600 Elk were in fourth place with 207,000, and prong-horned antelope fifth with 176,600. Black bear ranked sixth with 160,900.

Of the 15 groups and races catalogued, woodland caribou were in last place with 15 individuals, all in Minnesota, and grizzly bear second lowest with a population of 1,250 in six states.

Pennsylvania was cited as the leading big game state with 777,300 animals of five species. Michigan was a close second with 743,500. Others in the "big ten" were California with 535,800; Wisconsin, 406,000; Colorado, 313,300; Oregon, 306,700; Texas, 295,000; New York, 251,000; and Utah, 210,000. Idaho took eleventh place with 205,700.

Trailers Helping Uncle Sam

More and more trailer camps of a new type are springing up daily near defense industrial plants. Camps, not of vacationing families but camps filled with families whose men are keeping Uncle Sam's production wheels going and whose women are busy making homes even though they be in miniature. They are discovering that their homes, though small, can be very attractive.

The up-to-date trailer contains everything the modern housekeeper desires or requires. Every square foot is utilized to the best advantage and put to some practical use.

Alfalfa and bromegrass make a good pasture or hay combination It can be used for hay for a year or two and then converted into an excellent pasture, crops men at Iowa State College say

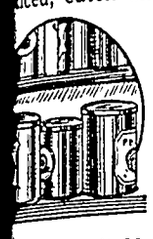
Fresh-From-the-Vine Grapes Make Clear, Bright Jelly!
(See Recipes Below.)

Meals—With Zest

Does meal after meal slip by unnoticed, eaten only because it does away with hunger? Do your meals pull their punches so to speak—look good, have proper balance, contrast in texture, etc., but still seem to lack something vital?



A dinner, lunch or breakfast that lacks a sense of completeness is like a ham sandwich without mustard, meat without seasoning, fish without a tart sauce, a pie without flaky crust. The small things that are big things for menus are the relishes, pickles, jams and jellies, which brings me to today's topic.

Relishes such as pickles, jellies, preserves and preserves can supply that sense of completeness to a meal when you use them with a thought to flavor affinity.

For chicken try strawberry or plum jam. Goose calls for spiced crab apple jam or apple jelly. Orange and cherry jam or relish are tops with bland duck. Spiced grape jam or gooseberry jams are "musts" with beef just as mint or crabapple jelly are musts with lamb. Pair off that golden brown ham with plum jelly or horseradish mixed with grape jelly. Veal needs currant or blackberry jam.

If you can't get quince jelly, try cranberry jelly with pork. Liver will be extra good with tomato relish.

Think of all the plate lunches and sandwiches you are going to serve the year 'round for lunches, snacks and pack-up boxes. You'll need these:

Bread and Butter Pickles.
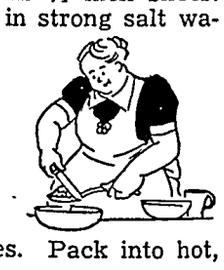
(Makes 8 pints)
12 large cucumbers
4 onions, sliced
4 cups sugar
1 quart vinegar
3 cups water
4 teaspoons celery seed
4 teaspoons mustard seed
2 teaspoons tumeric

Cut cucumbers in ¼ inch slices. Soak with onions in strong salt water for 4 hours. Combine remaining ingredients and bring to a boil. Add strained cucumber and onion slices. Bring to a boil again and boil 5 minutes. Pack into hot, sterilized jars.



Concord grapes are plentiful in the fall and make delicious jelly. You can substitute corn syrup in this one:

Concord Grape Jelly.
(Makes 11 medium glasses)
4 cups juice
7½ cups sugar
½ bottle fruit pectin

You will need about 3 pounds of grapes for four cups of juice. Wash and stem grapes and crush grapes. Add just enough water to keep from scorching, bring to a boil and simmer 5 minutes. Strain juice through cheesecloth. Measure out 4 cups. Measure sugar and mix with juice. Bring to a boil over hottest fire, stirring constantly. Bring to a full, rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, and pour into hot, sterilized jelly glasses. Paraffin at once.

Note: 2 cups of light corn syrup may be substituted in this recipe for two cups of sugar. Use 5½ cups of sugar and 2 cups light corn syrup in the recipe for Concord Grape jelly.

Peach and Plum Jam.
(Makes 8 small glasses)
1 pound blue plums
1½ pounds peaches
1 box powdered fruit pectin
4½ cups sugar
Or
2 cups light corn syrup
2½ cups sugar

Peel and pit peaches. Chop finely. Pit plums and chop until fine. Add powdered pectin (or pectin, sugar and corn syrup.) Mix well and bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute. Remove from heat and skim. Pour into hot, sterilized glasses and seal.

Quinces come into their own in the fall and if you're fond of them, plan to put up some:

Quince Honey.
(Makes 6 small glasses)
1½ pounds quinces
2½ cups water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 cups sugar

Wash, pare and core quinces. Add water to peelings and cook 30 minutes. Grate quinces very thin, or slice thinly. Weigh pulp and use 1 pound. Add lemon juice and strained liquid from peelings. Cook until tender, add sugar, and cook until two drops fall from spoon at same time, or when a drop jells easily on a saucer. Pour into sterile glasses and seal.

Nothing compares to the sweet, spicy, home-like smell of the making of chili sauce:

Chili Sauce.
(Makes 5 quarts)
1 gallon chopped, peeled tomatoes
1 cup chopped onions
1½ cups chopped green peppers
1 cup vinegar
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons salt
1½ teaspoons ground allspice
2 tablespoons cinnamon
1½ teaspoons cloves

Tie spices loosely in cheesecloth. Boil with vegetables until mixture is reduced to half its original quantity, stirring all the while to prevent scorching. Add vinegar, salt, sugar and boil rapidly for 5 minutes. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal immediately.

Pickled Peaches.
(Makes 8 pints)
3 cups honey
3 cups vinegar
2 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon whole cloves
2 sticks cinnamon
5 quarts peaches

Heat honey, vinegar, water and salt. Scald peaches, remove skins and insert cloves. Place a few in the boiling syrup, add cinnamon and cook until peaches are tender, and acquire a slightly transparent look. Pack in sterilized jars, cover with boiling syrup and seal.

What are your food problems? Cake making? Bread making? Pickles, jams, jellies? Children's lunches? Miss Lynn Chambers will be glad to give you expert advice on your particular problem, if you write her explaining what you want to know, at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Please enclose a stamped, addressed envelope for your reply.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Cantaloupe supplies for this year will be lighter because of curtailed production, but watch your markets for the "peaks" of the season as supplies come in from California, Arizona, Georgia and South Carolina.

Recently a group of prepared cereals have had their whole grain nutritive values restored or are now made from whole grains so watch labels when doing your buying.

The peach crop this year will be like last year—one of the best, according to present indications. Heavy shipments have already started coming in and production will climb up to about 50 million bushels—a new high.

Broilers and fryers will be abundant during these next few months, so don't miss out on good fried chicken or crisply browned and broiled chicken. Young chickens are abundant now because of increased war poultry production.

Canned foods will come in fewer sizes this fall and winter in the effort to cut down on use of tin.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D D
Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for September 6

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission

THE ALCOHOL PROBLEM: PAST AND PRESENT

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 13 13; 19 23-25; Deuteronomy 32 31-33, Amos 6 1-7
GOLDEN TEXT—The way of the ungodly shall perish —Psalm 1 6.

The necessity for using to the limit every resource—man power and material—in this time of national crisis should make every American doubly alert to the devastation and loss which has come (and is coming in increasing measure) to us as a result of the sale of intoxicants.

This is no time (nor was there ever a time) when "men should put their enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains, that we should with joy, pleasure, revel and applause transform ourselves into beasts! To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast!" (Shakespeare)

Christians—and especially Sunday school teachers—should use this lesson to drive home anew the great lesson of moral accountability, of the importance of man's choice of a way of life, and the certainty of judgment.

I. Man is Morally Responsible (Gen 13 13, 19 23-25).

Life is not just a careless drifting from day to day, from pleasure to pleasure, from sin to sin. Man was created in the likeness and image of God, which means that he is a personal being, knowing right from wrong and possessing the power of choice Sodom and Gomorrah drew upon themselves the judgment of God because of their determination to persist in horrible wickedness. What happened to those cities, terrible as it was, is but a prophecy of even greater judgment to come (Luke 10·10-12).

If man chooses to do right, he may count on all the resources of the omnipotent God to uphold him. But if he chooses to go in the way of sin, he must look forward to the judgment of God. It is important to remember that

II. He Chooses His Own Way of Life (Deut 32 31-33).

Moses contrasts the Rock—Jehovah—in whom his people trusted, and the corrupt standards of their heathen neighbors, of Sodom and Gomorrah, but note it well, each one made his own choice.

One greater than Moses, our Lord Himself (Matt. 7·13, 14), spoke of the two ways, and noted with sadness that many go down the broad road to destruction and but few walk in the narrow way of life.

It is a vital matter that we teach our boys and girls the great and noble spiritual standards of Christianity; bring into their lives the power of God through faith in Christ that they may choose well for themselves and be able to lead a bewildered war-shocked world in the right way.

The need of humanity is great now, but it will be even greater in a post-war world of broken homes, broken lives and broken hearts. We must be ready to minister in the name of Christ.

III. Neglect and Ignorance Are No Excuse (Amos 6 1-7).

Surprise attack is always doubly effective "Remember Pearl Harbor" Yes, and remember man's defeat in spiritual things.

Satan would like to lull us to sleep with the assurance that all is well. The heart of man is prone to cherish optimistic thoughts; to magnify that which encourages him to take his ease; to keep away the fear of reality by sweet music, good food, and flowing bowl of wine.

The people of Amos' day, to whom this message was given, had come to the point where prosperity had made them at ease, when they should have been actively alert; foolishly serene, when they should have been vigilant and ready for battle.

Who can say that the same is not in all too large a measure true of the people of our own beloved America. Many elements enter into that dangerous situation, but not the least of them is our increasing use of intoxicants. It may shock some to learn that the per capita use of alcoholic beverages has increased greatly throughout the country. The appalling fact is that the city of Washington, D C., which should in these days set an example of sobriety and sanity, has led the nation in the increase of the use of strong drink.

That way is the way of captivity (v. 7) unless we repent—and that right soon. America needs to awaken to the dangers which threaten its precious liberty—and, we repeat, the liquor question is not the least of these problems. We must win a victory over it soon, or we may find that it has won the victory over us —which may God in His mercy forbid!

What Causes Your Constipation?

The super-refined foods we eat these days too often do not give us enough "bulk food" And medical science tells us that lack of sufficient "bulk" is one of the commonest causes of constipation!

If that is your trouble, harsh cathartics and violent purges are, at best, only temporary remedies. How much better to get at the cause and correct it!

Why not make sure that you are getting the "bulk" you need by eating Kellogg's All-Bran? All-Bran is a delicious, crispy cereal that millions of folks rely on Eat All-Bran yourself—eat it daily—and drink plenty of water —not only to get regular but to keep regular. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, it's wise to see a doctor.

CENTRAL STATES' REDDY KILOWATT SAYS:

I am very busy these days doing everything I can to help win the war, but even so, I still have plenty of time to serve you. The best part is, I still work those same long hours for those same low wages and I know folks appreciate this. Why only yesterday I heard Hattie Housewife say: "Electricity is about the only thing I buy nowadays that hasn't jumped sky high, and belive me, I'm using it. With Johnny gone and my man working all the time I need something to keep the jitters away and plenty of light is the answer. I burn a light all night now. It only costs a penny or so and belive me it's a lot of comfort."

Hi Jergie

I've been on this sea-going chunk of steel several days now I've seen nothing but a school of porpoises, flying fish, a few albatross, and no small amount of water I can't say whether its smooth or rough, as it may be considered "divulging information of interest to the enemy!" But I can tell you it is blue, a beautiful blue (It seems to lose its beauty after you're on it for a while)

I know many of the folks there would like to know exactly where I'm going But due to strict censorship, all I can do it give you a very rough idea I'll be permanently based somewhere in the Southwestern Pacific, and I don't mean (censored)

We've been told the shortest letters go through fastest, so I'll let this resemble a post card and sign off until a later date. Keith.

Working With Civilian Defense

Red Cross Completes Plans for Any Emergency if Enemy Strikes

WASHINGTON.—IF ENEMY BOMBERS ROARED OVER AN average American community in a surprise night attack, emptying its bomb racks on the sleeping city to cause fires and explosions, maiming or killing men, women and children—how would the American Red Cross operate in such an emergency?

Traditional agent of the American people in disaster relief, the Red Cross would provide food, clothing and temporary shelter during the emergency period immediately following an enemy attack. As soon as the emergency had passed, state and local public welfare agencies would provide continued care for families on an individual basis in accordance with plans worked out by the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services (ODHWS), the war activities branch of the Federal Security administration.

During an emergency the civilian defense authorities will control all services under orders of the local commander of the Citizens' Defense corps, unless the army has assumed jurisdiction.

However, in natural disasters and in disasters caused by accident or sabotage, the responsibility of the American Red Cross remains the same as in peace time. The term "disaster" will continue to be applied to them, but for the duration, "civilian war aid" is the term to be used to define all forms of relief to civilians affected by enemy action.

National agreements which the American Red Cross has entered into with the OCD and the ODHWS recognizes the principle that civilian protection and civilian war aid are a public responsibility. Accordingly, the Red Cross will operate in harmony with whatever plans are laid down by these agencies nationally and State Defense councils and Citizens' Defense corps in the various communities.

While the scope of Red Cross participation in civilian war aid has been limited, the Red Cross emblem, long familiar in disaster relief work, will still be much in evidence. Red Cross personnel, facilities and resources will have a prominent part in the picture.

The degree and nature of Red Cross participation will vary considerably according to local conditions and the desires of defense authorities. For example, defense plans in a hazardous coastline community will be vastly different than in an inland community far removed from any apparent hazard.

If you are among the 3,500,000 Americans who have taken the Red Cross standard first aid training, you will have an opportunity to put your knowledge and skill to work as part of the Emergency Medical service set up by each Citizens' Defense corps.

A Chance to Help.

You may be asked to become members of stretcher teams or to give first aid to the injured, such as giving artificial respiration, stopping blood from spurting arteries, and care for traumatic shock. The Red Cross helps the Emergency Medical service by recruiting persons trained in first aid, and recruiting and training Volunteer Nurse's Aides to serve with Emergency Medical service units at base and casualty hospitals, casualty stations and first aid posts.

Local chapters of the Red Cross will have a representative in the control center, the operating headquarters of the local Defense corps from which all services are directed during bombing or other war emergencies affecting civilians. With information and instructions received from the commander or chief of the Emergency Medical service, the representative will be in a position to set in motion the chapter services which a particular situation demands.

Throughout the country, and especially in small towns, Red Cross chapters are improvising equipment for possible use in emergencies. Commercial vehicles are being converted into canteens, ambulances and transportation units. In some parts of the country small chapters are combining to form "flying squadrons" which place disaster and civilian war aid on entirely mobile basis.

In view of the Red Cross agreement with ODHWS, local chapters are laying special stress upon the possible feeding of large masses of people in bombed areas. For a small suburban community, Lawrence, N. Y., has an efficient setup. Its Canteen Corps, made up of members who have taken Red Cross nutrition and canteen courses, go into action immediately after the "all clear" signal. It can prepare two meals for 1,500 persons. Within an hour after the order has been received, the Motor Corps transports the meals to the feeding center in the vicinity of the disaster. There is a second group of canteen workers, made up of mothers with young children, who are called out several hours later. Besides the large supplies for 1,500 emergency meals now stored in unit headquarters, the local chapter will, if necessary, buy food from local stores.

Wherever mass feedings become necessary, the American Red Cross will be able to put into practice some lessons learned from the experiences of civilian relief workers in the bombed areas of Great Britain. Through an agreement with the American Restaurant association many persons may now be fed quickly and economically.

In some cases, a central kitchen and dining hall would be set up in an industrial cafeteria. The Worcester, Mass., chapter, for example, has provided for several mobile canteens to transport food from restaurants. Workers are to be fed at the scene of disaster, but victims at evacuation centers. Mobile canteen operations have been planned on a unit food load of 20 gallons of stew, bread, butter, coffee, milk and crackers for 200 persons at a time.

Red Cross chapters will handle inquiries concerning the safety of persons in the event of bombing or other enemy action. This is a logical Red Cross service.

Detailed plans are being worked out between local chapters and Defense Corps commanders and chiefs of the Emergency Medical service for use of Red Cross ambulance units, mobile canteen units and supplementary transportation when needed. Members of the Motor Corps often use their own cars.

In some cities business firms and industrial plants have formed reserve fleets of trucks and automobiles for use in possible enemy air raids. The Worcester, Mass., chapter has established so-called automotive parks in eight different sections of the city. Each park, centrally located for operations in its own neighborhood, serves as headquarters for the departure and return of the various motor services and personnel, including Red Cross Canteen corps, Motor corps, auxiliary ambulances and private cars and trucks forming part of the pool. These facilities will serve under direction of the Defense Corps Commander.

In case mass destruction of homes by enemy action makes large-scale evacuation necessary, Red Cross chapters will provide food, clothing and temporary group shelter which may be needed for evacuees.

Chapters are making surveys of possible group shelters. In larger communities they are generally churches, schools, clubs, hotels and lodge halls. In smaller towns arrangements are being made to use churches, schools, grange and lodge halls. The machinery for mass evacuations is being created by regional, state and local defense authorities and the facilities and resources of the Red Cross are being made available to them as needed.

When the furious fighting was taking place in the Philippines the Red Cross was there administering to the civilian population injured. This picture of two native Red Cross girls was taken by the army signal corps during the fighting on the island.

As They Sew

Thousands of women, such as those pictured here, in clubs and churches and Red Cross chapters throughout the land, are sewing and knitting for the war wounded throughout the world. Civilians, too in war hammered lands benefit from the activities of such groups.

Scenes such as this one—taken in England during a Red Cross nurse gas mask drill—might take place in this country, and with the same earnestness that they take place on the British Isle. Today, the Red Cross is preparing for any eventuality in case the enemy attempts to strike home here in the U. S.

Lasting Peace After War Aim of Scientific Institute

An international scientific institute of social scientists to guide Europe into lasting peace after this war is advocated by Prof. Florian Znaniecki of the University of Illinois, an internationally known sociologist who before the war was a leading savant of Poland.

"In this institute thousands of scientists of various nationalities—historians, anthropologists, sociologists, psychologists, economists, religionists, linguists, students of art, students of education—would concentrate on an objective investigation of all those forces which produce conflict as well as those which result in cultural collaboration and social solidarity," he explains.

On the basis of such studies, other scientists who, like engineers in the material field specialize in applied knowledge, would draw plans for cultural collaboration on a European scale. Active leaders in every field of culture would realize these plans.

"No post-war organization of Europe based on force and politics alone can stand," Professor Znaniecki believes. "There must be a cultural as well as a political unification of the continent.

"Tendencies of European culture groups to expand under the existing system of national states inevitably leads to wars. These conflicts can be counteracted by creative collaboration of various culture groups."

IMPROVED NAVAL POSITION

Behind the Solomon islands battle are some optimistic naval facts, entirely aside from the announcement of victory. These facts had to be very carefully considered even before U. S. naval chiefs started to invade the Solomons.

One of these naval facts is that the Japs have suffered very severe losses in cruisers. Although it has escaped public notice, U. S. forces have been bumping off this fast, important type of warship with deadly regularity, so that Jap cruiser strength is now cut at least in half, perhaps more.

Another known naval fact is that the Japs have lost approximately half of their airplane carriers. And with air power what it is today, this is the type of vessel they can least afford to lose.

On the American side of the picture is the fact that U. S. repairs of ships sunk or damaged at Pearl Harbor have been miraculously swift.

All this obviously was taken into consideration before the United States started a major engagement and the offensive in the South Pacific. For Admiral King had to calculate the risk of the Jap admirals rushing a large force to the Solomon islands.

Simultaneously he also had to figure the risk of a Jap attack on various other vital points—Midway, Alaska, Hawaii, even the continental United States.

Top admirals these days do not take chances. Not when the fate of a nation depends on them. Therefore, it requires only a mathematician to figure that the scale of American strength in the Pacific has turned. It reached its low ebb just after Pearl Harbor, when the navy was unable to do anything about the Philippines, Singapore, or Java.

But now the Battle of Midway has shown that Hawaii and the West coast can be defended by land-based planes. No Jap ship dares come near land-based planes without committing suicide.

This leaves a reinforced fleet to operate in the Pacific. Top naval men are not doing any crowing yet. But at least the naval picture seems to counterbalance some of the bad news from Russia—which is going to get a lot worse.

BURIED SILVER

Ten years ago, President Roosevelt and Cordell Hull held a series of discussions with the foreign ministers of Europe in preparation for the London Economic conference, at which one of the chief proposals of the United States was world use of silver.

At these conferences, the late Senator Key Pittman, of the great silver state of Nevada, droned through a regular 45 minute lecture on silver which American experts knew almost by heart and which put Hjalmar Schacht, German finance minister, to sleep. After Pittman had finished, the German minister woke up with a start, hastily brushed aside silver.

"We accept silver. Now this is what we want in return."

The London Economic conference was a dismal failure. But the United States had committed itself so completely to silver in these preliminary talks, that it undertook a silver program, which actually meant that the world sold its silver to us at an artificial price and we buried it in the ground at West Point, N. Y. It was a fine thing for Mexico, China and Canada and a great victory for Senator Pittman and the Rocky Mountain states. Also it resulted in the U. S. treasury accumulating two and a half billion ounces of silver—other than coin.

Today, however, there is a shortage of industrial silver. And yet the treasury will not open up the giant hoard of silver gathering mold at West Point.

Shortage Amid Plenty.

What has happened is this. About 5,000,000 ounces of silver monthly is being mined in the United States, which is ample to care for war needs, but not enough for ordinary commercial needs, especially for the silver industry of New England.

The silver industry, which makes knives, forks, and household ware, formerly used alloys and critical materials—all of which have now been dispensed with. However, silver is not a critical material. There is plenty mined for the war effort but not enough to supply the 80,000,000 ounces needed annually for the silver industry.

So New England silversmiths now ask that they be permitted to buy a mere 80,000,000 ounces out of the two and a half billion ounces which the treasury has buried.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

¶ Though the U. S. navy gave the royal run-around to the Sea Otter, Germany is now reported building exactly this type of shallow-draft, automobile-engined boat for use on the Danube, the Black and Caspian seas—against Russia.

¶ When the WPB made a survey of junk dealers it found 6,000,000 pounds of "scrap" silk stockings on hand. This is a "gold mine" for making silk bags to hold gunpowder for the navy.

THS ALL-PURPOSE COUPON BOOK

"Washington, D. C.—Th OPA is working on a ration book for all purposes. It will be a general utility book which can be used no matter what is rationed, if the idea works out."—News item.

You've got something there, mister.

A presto-and-there-you-have-it type of ration book would seem to be full of possibilities. For one thing it would enable a man to carry all the necessary coupons without a helper.

It should make the whole business more exciting. Elmer Twitchell looked into the matter yesterday.

"Is this a gag or is it serious?" he asked an OPA official.

"I'm too busy to be sure of anything but I think it is on the level," was the reply.

"You mean one book will do, no matter what the shortage is?"

"That's it."

"How long have your men been working on it?"

"About a month."

"And nobody has gone nuts yet?"

"Not so far, although a couple are beginning to act a little queer."

"Let me get this," pressed Elmer. "I get a ration book for sugar, roller skates, shingles or auto fuel, and if the OPA suddenly decides to ration beer openers, hair oil or liver I just use the same coupons out of the same book? Am I right or just dizzy?"

"Correct. This is to be the positively no waiting ration book, good at a moment's notice in all circumstances. Whatever happens you have the coupons for it in advance."

"This wouldn't by any chance be a plot for a new Olsen & Johnson show?" asked Mr. Twitchell suspiciously.

"I don't think so," insisted the OPA chief.

"But just how will a book with coupons for four gallons of gas be usable for two cans of house paint, a barrel of onions or a box of doorknobs?"

"Our experts will know."

"But how will the gas station man, paint salesman and vegetable dealer know?"

"Well, er, we may have to get out a book for him."

"Another book?"

"Yes, a book of interpretations. A sort of guide book to the all purpose ration book."

"But suppose this guide book isn't clear?"

"It will just mean another book, I suppose," said the OPA man hopelessly.

"Lock me up now," sighed Elmer. "I've been out of my cell long enough."

"Me, too," said the OPA man.

RECIPE FOR OLD AGE

("Exercise after 40 should be avoided."—Dr. Morris Fishbein.)

Are you two-score, mister?
Save that extra pep;
If you can avoid it
Take no extra step.

Do not lift a finger
After 40 years!
Exercise is silly,
So it now appears.

When you are not working
Sit quite still and think;
Lack of all exertions
Keeps men in the pink.

Golf? It's just plain silly—
Simply suicide;
Never walk a step, sir,
Where a man can ride.

Daily calisthenics?
Hikes around the park?
All these things but shorten
Life's three-score-ten mark.

Relax! Scorn all movement!
Long hence will you die;
You may live to 80—
BUT YOU'LL WONDER WHY!

Fifth Column in Argentine

By Herbert M. Clark

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with American Magazine)

Members of a powerful Axis organization, which is bustling today in Argentina, have a plan of South American conquest They are working to carry out by infiltration, by arming a militant fifth column, by propaganda, by sabotage, by espionage.

The only reason they are getting away with it is that Argentina, unlike other South American republics, has not broken off relations with the totalitarians, nor done anything effective to curb the activities of totalitarian agents.

Other South American nations have driven Axis agents underground and cut their communications with Berlin But in Argentina the agents find it easy to cable or telephone from Buenos Aires to Tokyo, Berlin, Madrid, or Rome Argentina today is even more vital to Axis plans than when Hitler first drafted those plans

In fact, that sharply pointed southern tip of South America which is Argentina has become a dagger aimed at the heart of the Americas. It is our greatest danger point in South America.

Militant Hitlerism.

Here the Nazis already have a military organization numbering about 65,000 Japanese and other Axis nationals, together with Argentine sympathizers, would swell this "army" to more than 100,000—greater than the entire Argentine army which numbers less than 90,000

This Nazi army is a camouflaged and hidden army Its members who have sworn allegiance to Der Fuehrer, are found in sports and social clubs, singing societies and charity organizations. Behind these false fronts, selected Nazi leaders have brought drill and organization and equipment to such perfection that the entire force could be mobilized within one hour by calling out motorized messengers.

This army is equipped with arms Government raids are infrequent and only a handful have been successful. But the few caches discovered have yielded hundreds of rifles, automatic rifles, and light and heavy machine guns, together with thousands of rounds of ammunition and crates of hand grenades, some produced locally in German metal shops and chemical plants.

Command was vested in General Gunther Niedenfuhr, military attache to the Nazi embassy in Argentina. He is out of action now however, for he was also accredited to Brazil, and was in Rio when the Vargas government severed relations with the totalitarians and set in motion the machinery which in April deported all Axis diplomatic personnel.

Strongly Organized.

I have not been able to identify Niedenfuhr's successor, but I know he left behind a general staff drawn from other military and naval attaches, from friendly elements in local armed forces, and from officers, especially of the German and Japanese army and navy, who have "retired to South America," and who now turn up as cooks and farm laborers, business men and dentists, tradesmen and sailors, and even priests.

Such is the Nazi strength, as compared with Argentina's defenses that a retired Argentine general, Ramon Molina, stated: "In case of invasion, Argentina would beyond doubt be forced to capitulate in very few days."

Local Leadership.

The people of Argentina would bring this Nazi fifth column to a dead stop if they could. But the government stands in the way. At least 85 per cent of the 13,000,000 people are actively opposed to the totalitarians. Unfortunately, the remaining 15 per cent, including the Nazis and the "nazionalists," include a disproportionate number of government officials.

Acting President Ramon Castillo is not pro-Nazi. But he is conservative, even reactionary, and his administration has certainly not been anti-Nazi. Each government department has its clique, small but effective, of men who are pro-Nazi and who occupy key positions.

The official policy, based on denial that any danger exists, is one of indifference, which lets the Germans and their Axis and Argentine colleagues go right on working.

The people of Argentina, however, are determined to fight any attempt to install a totalitarian regime, whether by internal uprising or invasion, or both together.

The Nazis, in their plans for invasion, expect assistance from at least parts of Argentina's armed forces. By the admission of their own officers, these forces would not offer much resistance.

While Mr. Winchell is on vacation, his column will be conducted by guest columnists.

Fifteen minutes later he was running down the Strand, waving a door knob in his hand and yelling: "Let me get at Hitler's aviators—let me get at his bums." "What happened?" asked a bobby. "They just blew a saloon right out of me hand!" cried the furious Cassidy.

Hitler ordered a captured general to be brought to Berchesgarten—"I wish to humiliate him!" Arriving, the prisoner was told by Adolf: "I will show you that the Nazi mind is superior to your Russian intellect. We will now hold a quiz program. And we'll make bets!" "I can't compete with you financially, Herr Hitler," said the visitor. "That's where the humiliation comes in," gleefully cried Adolf. "To every question I can't answer, I'll give you fifty dollars. To every one you can't answer, you give me twenty-five dollars—go ahead, ask the first question!" The Russian asked this one: "What goes up in the sky with 20 legs, makes ten somersaults, whistles four times and then comes down with only one leg?" Adolf thought a minute and cried: "I don't know—here's the fifty dollars!" "I don't know, either—here's twenty-five dollars back!" answered the Russ general.

A supposed moron was brought to a medico for examination. The doc asked this question: "If I cut off your left ear, what would happen to you?" "I wouldn't be able to hear." "Fine—now, if I then cut off your right ear, what would happen to you?" "Then I wouldn't be able to see." The physician was now puzzled and he asked: "If I cut off both your ears, why wouldn't you be able to see?" "Because then my hat would fall over my eyes."

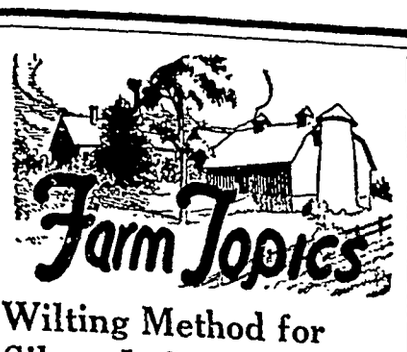
The third time he tried it the bruiser knocked Maxie down. Up rushed a cop: "Did he smash you?" "Yes," moaned Maxie, "and if he does it again I won't open the store!"



Wilting Method for Silage Is Suggested

Experiment, Extreme Care Needed to Make It Work

By C. W. BENDER

(Professor Dairy Husbandry, Rutgers University)

In view of the high price of molasses and the scarcity of phosphoric acid for preserving silage, the wilting method of ensiling legumes, grasses and cereals — a method requiring practically no preservatives—sounds good.

The wilting method will work, but it also takes experimental control and extreme care to make it work.

Moisture Content Excess.

Farmers experienced at making grass silage know that mold accumulations, caused by air pockets or air leakage in the silo, often occur even when the silo is filled with material having a moisture content of 72 to 78 per cent.

Yet materials with this amount of moisture pack more readily and develop more pressure than grasses with lower moisture content, and the wilting method calls for wilting down the green material to a moisture content of only 65 to 68 per cent. Thus there is a greater danger of mold when the wilting method is used.

Secondly, some type of apparatus is necessary to determine the exact moisture content of the green material.

How long it takes to wilt the material down to the proper moisture content cannot be determined in advance. One thing is certain: There will be many delays in filling the silo, thus increasing the danger of mold and high temperatures, both of which tend to destroy nutrients.

Fill Silo Three-Fourths.

The silo must be filled more than three-fourths full with wilted green material within two days. The material must be evenly distributed and well tramped. Filling should be continued on the third day, using high moisture grasses or legumes to which a preservative has been added so that sufficient pressure is generated to exclude the air from the partially wilted mass. Delays in filling beyond this period may ruin the silage, a fact which has been learned by many farmers.

Furthermore, the wilting of a green crop destroys carotene. The longer the period of wilt the more carotene is lost, an important consideration in producing milk of excellent quality.

Trap That Hornfly

Dairy cows will not produce at maximum when infested with hornflies.

The flies cause loss in milk production because they suck cows' blood, and their annoyance often causes cattle to refuse to graze. Hence, they do not get their fill of grass which is the best milk producer, and it takes a part of the feed which otherwise would go to production of milk to replace the blood.

Some investigators claim that during seasons of abundance hornflies are responsible for losses of one-quarter to one-half of the normal milk production. Moreover, annoyance by the flies during milking might lead to contamination of the milk with consequent lowering of its quality.

Sprays, which many dairymen use, will keep flies off cattle during milking and for an hour or more afterward. But this does not prevent loss in milk production. However, a cattle fly trap used as a gateway to and from water, feed, or other frequented places, has been found effective for the control of hornflies on many dairies, farms and ranches.

Nightly Walk

By R. H. WILKINSON

Associated Newspapers—WNU Features

ON OCCASION of my frequent walks through the woods about Monson and along the shores of Taggart Lake, I had met Thornton Miles once or twice, always alone, always striding along with head bent and hands clasped behind him as though in meditation

The folks in the town had told me of him. They didn't think he was exactly crazy, but they felt he was queer. Folks let him alone; they felt uncomfortable in his presence.

At first they had tried to make sport with him, tried to amuse themselves at his expense Small boys had flung taunts after his stooped and bent figure But long since, young and old alike had given up; they might have saved their breaths.

For some inexplicable reason I pitied him, though twice we had passed within a scant ten feet of each other and he had neither spoken nor looked in my direction I resolved to cultivate the man's acquaintance

During the week that followed my decision it rained, so it was not until the following Monday that I again encountered Thornton Miles I had spent the past six days indoors, laboring over a partly completed novel, and it felt good to be out once more I was in the best of spirits

Thornton Miles came along the path that skirts the northern edge of Taggart Lake, and at sight of him I remembered my resolve. I slowed my pace, waiting for him to come up, and when he was several feet away I said pleasantly, "Good evening, sir."

He did not stop or look in my direction, but continued walking with his head lowered. And so I repeated my greeting, this time louder.

"Good evening. This is certainly fine weather we're having."

He was almost up to me and unless I had stepped to one side we would have collided. Something must have attracted his attention—possibly my shadow fell across his path. He stopped abruptly and lifted his head.

"She's dead," he replied mildly. "Or they think she is."

"Eh?—Oh, I beg your pardon."

He would have passed me by, and I was sure he had not heard my voice. Acting wholly on impulse I fell into step beside him. "It seems good to see the sun once more after so long a rain," I said. Unconsciously I spoke loudly, and he glanced at me as if startled, then looked down again

"It makes no difference to me," he said, "whether the sun shines or not."

His answer not only surprised me, but left me wondering, recalling what the townspeople had said about his queerness. Yet I was more than ever intrigued.

"Do you mean," I asked him, "that you walk along here every evening whether it rains or not?"

"Of course," he said, with faint resentment in his tones.

"But—but I should think you'd be afraid of catching cold."

"Cold?" He looked at me in astonishment. "Why, stranger, don't you know you'll never catch cold if you don't think about it?"

"I suppose you're right," I said, wondering what to say next. We strode along in silence for a few minutes.

"Do you always walk—alone?" I asked, fearing that too prolonged a silence might make him melancholy once more.

But apparently he had been listening "Sometimes alone," he said, "and sometimes not"

So that was it. Somewhere along the lake here he was in the habit of meeting someone. The thought was not without its humorous aspects. First, Thornton Miles was old and decrepit, hardly a fit subject to participate in heavy romance. And secondly, he had so completely fooled the townsfolk that it was ludicrous.

I was about to excuse myself and leave him alone, not wishing to intrude upon his rendezvous, when he said unexpectedly: "Margaret usually walks with me. Tonight she did not come."

I sensed that he wished to talk. "Margaret?" I asked.

"My wife."

"Oh." I chewed over this awhile. Why would a man walk out into the woods on a stormy night to hold a tryst with his own wife? "She—isn't living at home?" I inquired.

"She's dead," he replied mildly. "Or they think she is."

I swallowed and looked around. The sun was dropping behind Pine Mountain. The stillness of evening had settled over the land. Somewhere on the lake I heard a loon call It was a lonesome sound and I felt a slight chill.

Thornton Miles stopped abruptly and looked at me. It was the first time I'd seen his eyes and sight of them gave me a queer sensation.

"They think she's dead," he repeated "And they think I'm queer. Look here, stranger, why do you walk in the woods alone? I've seen you a dozen times."

The question startled me. So he had seen me, after all! I looked around again "Why," I said, "I just like to get out in the open. I'm somewhat of a naturalist, I guess. I—I like to be alone with nature"

"And no one thinks you're queer?"

"Why, no," I laughed. "That is, I hope they don't. You don't call a man queer, simply because he walks alone in the woods."

"Exactly," he said "Yet they think I'm queer"

"But—but—" I stammered "You said—you weren't alone"

"Nobody knows about Margaret. I've told no one but you. I thought you might understand, because you walk alone, too."

I lighted a cigarette. The taste of the smoke was good It was something I knew and could explain. "Tell me about—Margaret," I said I wanted to understand.

"There's nothing to tell. She died a year ago. We used to walk along the shore here of evenings together. We walk together now. Margaret and I" He paused and looked past me toward the lake. I had an uncomfortable feeling there was someone there. "She always leaves me there—at the point."

I did not turn. I would not admit but what the world was the same, or yield to the impulse of fear.

"But why haven't you tried to explain this to—your neighbors?" I asked.

He gestured helplessly. "They'd laugh. Some of them would pity me. They'd call me crazy. They'd put me away. Even you think I'm lonesome. And yet you walk alone, and you're not lonesome; you do not even feel alone."

This was an argument for which I could find no answer. Yet I knew we were different. His solitude and mine were not the same. He was living in a world beyond my comprehension; I existed among things that were real, a world that you could see and feel and touch; something easily understood and explainable. I tried to grasp his point of view, and only partly succeeded.

Soon I left him, followed the shore of the lake back toward the village where there were buildings and lights and people, things with which I was familiar; things I accepted and did not need explaining. And yet, sitting on the porch of my boarding house that night and looking across the slope where several hundred people were jammed in a compact little hall, swaying and swinging to the strains of an orchestra, I could not bring myself to admit that Thornton Miles was queer.

Soldiers in Battle Carry Anti-Infection Crystals

To guard against infection, every American soldier going into a theater of operations will be provided with a package of crystalline sulfanilamide to sprinkle on wounds, the war department revealed. This is an addition to sulfanilamide tablets for internal use.

Five grams of sulfanilamide, the most effective chemical agent to prevent infection known to modern medical science, is contained in a newly developed envelope package with a shaker top to be carried in each soldier's first aid packet.

The envelope is marked "for external use only" and carries instructions to sprinkle the sulfanilamide evenly over a wound before applying a first aid dressing.

Medical officers explained that the soluble sulfanilamide provides a strong local concentrate of the chemical agent which is highly bactericidal, killing the germs which cause infection.

The crystalline form of sulfanilamide was selected for this use after tests had revealed that when the chemical is finely powdered it tends to cake in the container and so may not be sprinkled evenly

In addition to this envelope of sulfanilamide, each first aid packet also contains a special spill-proof metal box containing 12 sulfanilamide tablets for internal use.

Personnel of each unit to which the drug is issued receive instructions as to its proper use from the attached medical officer, and careful checks are made periodically to verify its possession by each soldier.

Hungry Hummingbird

Hummingbirds have to eat about every ten minutes during the daytime because the energy from their food is consumed by the rapid beating of their wings as fast as it is produced. In New York recently, six hummers were taken on a 50-minute taxi drive, without food, from a pier to the Bronx zoo, with the result that one died and the other five passed into a coma from starvation.

WHAT FOOLS WE MORTALS BE!

Shakespeare said a mouthful when he penned those lines, or did he?

Anyway, while watching the birds in our back yard the other day this writer concluded that the human race is about the dumbest group of creatures on earth

First we noted that the martin house was vacant. With days getting cooler the martins had already departed for their winter quarters in South America

Overhead a flock of black birds were flying southward

We saw several birds that were strangers to us They had spent the summer further north, perhaps near a cool lake in Canada They were making a brief stop in our yard before continuing south.

The birds are really smart The varieties that like cool weather in the summer fly north for a few months and then move south to enjoy the temperature they like in the fall and winter.

Other birds that enjoy our cold, crisp winter will soon be with us again to furnish some cheer on dull winter days.

And, we humans are so dumb that we stay in one place all year and suffer the hardships of weather we do not enjoy.

The birds have really "got something there"

NEW FARM MACHINERY IN THE FARMER'S GROVE

Ira Overholt, manager of the local implement store, gave this writer a different slant on the machinery problem now facing the farmer who wants to buy new machinery and farm equipment, but it just cannot be done Why?

Because there are tons, thousands of tons of scrap metal right in the farmers' groves and around the yards that has not yet been salvaged Some of the old iron may be partly hidden under the ground or covered over with weeds and brush, but it is there It's metal already processed and ready to be remade into a new machine.

Mr. Overholt puts it this way "Remember an old rusty, worn-out binder will make a new binder that old discarded plow will make a new plow, that battered-up old mower, hidden by weeds, will make a brand-new mower"

We wonder if the farmers have thought of it in that light?

And we fellows in town can do our part, too that old lawn mower, old rakes, shovels, spades and bits of old iron here and there will make a machine gun . . . and that machine gun may be the one that helps this war!

Music is provided by the Dorsey swingsters, with Skelton singing both "Poor You" and "I'll Take Tallulah." In addition to the stars are Bert Lahr and Virginia O'Brien with twenty-seven of Hollywood's most glamorous chorus girls heading the dance ensemble.

Meteorites Are Result Of Planets Exploding

Our solar system had two additional planets until about 100,000,000 years ago. They exploded about that time, scattering their material through space, and the earth is now collecting samples of what they were made of in the form of meteorites. The meteorites are the pieces of stone or iron, or both together, that reach the earth unconsumed when a "shooting star" passes through the atmosphere.

Dr. William D. Urry of the department of physical chemistry, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, informed the American Association for the Advancement of Science at its recent summer meeting that he had calculated the age of 25 meteorites by measuring their content of uranium and helium and found that the ages ranged from 100,000,000 to 2,900,000,000 years, with most of them over 1,000,000,000 years.

Using various astrophysical arguments the conclusion is reached, said Dr. Urry, that these meteorites are the debris of two planets of our own solar system that came to grief within the last 100,000,000 years.

The asteroids, extremely small planets, which number several thousand and go round the sun in orbits between those of Mars and Jupiter, are believed to be the remains of a former large planet. Some astronomers have sought to arrange the asteroids into groups having common properties, and one believed he detected three groups with something in common in the elements of their orbits, indicating that there originally may have been three planets in this space.

Parasite Wasp Shows It Knows a Thing or Two

Female insects of at least one group can regulate the sex of their offspring. Entomologists of the United States department of agriculture find that a parasitic wasp brought here from the Orient 15 years ago to help control the Japanese beetle varies the treatment of her eggs according to the size of the host on which she lays them. She withholds the sperms that insure a female hatch from eggs deposited on the relatively small worms—beetle larvae—that have moulted only once to enter the stage known as the second instar. Nearly all the young wasps from these eggs are males. The hatch from eggs laid on the larger, third-instar larvae, however, is preponderantly female.

To prove that the female wasp (Tiphia popilliavora) fixes the sex of her progeny when she deposits her eggs, the entomologists transferred eggs laid on second-instar larvae to third-instar larvae and those laid on third-instar larvae to second-instar larvae. Mostly males hatched out on the third-instar hosts and mostly females on the second-instar hosts.

War and Womens Clothing

What effect will the exigencies of war have on the American woman's wardrobe? For one thing, women will undoubtedly wear simpler, more tailored costumes, believes Mrs. Louise Pinkney Sooy, University of California associate professor of fine arts and instructor in costume appreciation for the University's Extension division. "Another result that is already becoming apparent is the simplification or the elimination of costume accessories. For years we have dwelt upon the importance of correctly matched, impeccable accessories for a costume. Now suddenly, with the new simplicity wrought by wartime activities and lack of materials, we find that they can more or less readily be dispensed with. No longer will we insist upon the matching gloves, bag, shoes, and hat, with severe attention to detail."

Pots, Pans

A private at famed Kelly Field recently learned that all generals don't wear stars.

On orders from his first sergeant, the dazed private walked into headquarters and proudly strode up to the sergeant major.

"I am to report to General Mess at once," he said with an embarrassed importance. The sergeant major looked at the young man and then with a smile in his eyes, humbly told him he could find the "general" in the main dining room of the new barracks.

With even more dignity and proudness, the private made his way to the dining hall, only to see his castle tumble into a litter of pots and pans.

He was to start a week's tour of kitchen police, the dining hall and kitchen being called "General Mess."

Cotton Research

Botanists at the University of Texas are engaged in a form of research which may, they hope, result in vast benefits to cotton growers. This department has over 20,000 cotton plants, and an effort is being made, through cross breeding, to produce cotton with superior fiber and perhaps resistant to root rot and other diseases. They are also working along lines which they hope will result in finding a cotton which requires a minimum of moisture. Surveys of national textile mills have been made and the type of machinery used noted with a view of devising improvements or new machines which will produce finer goods at less cost.

Hall of Statuary Has Famous Personages' Bust

The national hall of statuary in the Capitol building at Washington, D. C., was formerly the hall of the United States house of representatives. It was established by congress July 2, 1864. Each state was invited to contribute a marble or bronze statue of its most distinguished deceased citizen. In place are: Alabama, Gen. Joe Wheeler; Arkansas, Uriah M. Rose; Arizona, John Campbell Greenway; California, Junipero Serra; Connecticut, Roger Sherman; Delaware, Caesar Rodney; Florida, John Gorrie; Georgia, Alexander H. Stephens; Idaho, George L. Shoup; Illinois, Frances E. Willard; Indiana, Gen. Lew Wallace; Iowa, S. J. Kirkwood; Kansas, John J. Ingalls; Kentucky, Henry Clay; Maine, Hannibal Hamlin; Maryland, Charles Carroll; Massachusetts, Samuel Adams; Michigan, Lewis Cass; Minnesota, Henry M. Rice; Mississippi, Jefferson Davis; Missouri, Thomas H. Benton; New Hampshire, Daniel Webster; New Jersey, Richard Stockton; New York, Robert R. Livingston; North Carolina, Zebulon B. Vance; Ohio, William Allen; Oklahoma, Sequoyah; Pennsylvania, Robert Fulton; Rhode Island, Roger Williams; South Carolina, John C. Calhoun; Tennessee, John Sevier; Texas, Samuel Houston; Vermont, Ethan Allen; Virginia, Robert E. Lee; West Virginia, Francis H. Pierpont; Wisconsin, Robert M. LaFollette. Statues which were formerly in statuary hall have been placed in other parts of the Capitol.

Old Indian Training Being Used for Cadets

The American Indian has contributed an idea which army physical education instructors at Kelly Field's giant replacement center have borrowed and made a necessary step in the training program of the future flying officers of the U. S. air corps.

One day a week these aviation cadets jog around a 2½ mile course in a gait known as the "Indian Trot." After clicking off a few hundred yards in a race-horse pace, the instructor slows his charges to a welcome walk, but the length of the run is gradually increased until at the end of the allotted five weeks each fledgling is expected to click off the course at a fast pace.

This run—a takeback to the days when Indian chieftains stressed fitness for their young warriors—is only a cog in the fitness program. After assembly at 9:15 a. m., the cadet or student goes through a 10-minute warming-up exercise to loosen his muscles. For the next 15 minutes he is put through a brisk coordination drill. Streamed up now and rarin' to go, the future airmen are divided into teams for volley ball, touch football and basketball. Others compete in high jumping, tossing the shot, and broad jumping events.

These calisthenics and the games that follow last approximately one hour and 15 minutes, five days a week—just a few of the things that "keeps 'em flying."

Iconoclast

The perfect antithesis of an iconoclast—that's what du Pont Cornelius is, and literally. An iconoclast is a fellow who goes around breaking icons. Cornelius, young artist on the University of Pittsburgh library staff, builds them up, using a bizarre assortment of equipment ranging from an insecticide to cottage cheese. He has just finished restoring a group of 18 highly valuable centuries-old Rumanian icons, or sacred images, which the Rumanian government gave to Pitt for eventual incorporation in one of the nationalist rooms at the Cathedral of Learning. These portrait images of the saints, stylized peasant-Byzantine paintings executed on wood in egg tempera and gold leaf, were included in the Rumanian pavilion exhibit at the New York World's fair, but when they arrived at the university in December of 1940 they were in bad shape.

World of Color Varies

The world of color varies widely over the animal kingdom. Many lower animals see objects in varying shades of gray. Dogs, it is believed, have little or no color vision. Some zoologists say that fish cannot distinguish colors. However, certain insects have eyes that are sensitive to light rays in the infra-red and ultra-violet fields that are invisible to human eyes. Even in human eyes there is considerable variation in color vision, continues the institute, adding that in the United States there are several million persons who are color-blind. Such persons have worlds of color that are different from those of their companions.

Salt Does the Work

Tests with burning magnesium, in solid form and in shavings, showed that salt was highly efficient as a smothering agent. Relatively small quantities of salt sufficed to bring the intense magnesium fire under control by smothering it. When water was thrown on the metal buried in the salt the fire recommenced, proving that potential residual fire had been smothered by salt.

Other chemicals added to salt with the idea of increasing its efficiency as an extinguishing agent proved practically worthless.

ONCE IN A LIFETIME

Many growers of garden "produce have reported strange doubles" of vegetables, but from Colfax comes the story that Bill Wade has produced a Siamese-twin muskmelon Mr Wade has made a specialty of growing melons for many years but this was his first instance of growing the delicacy in double quantity and quality.

LONGEST MARRIED LIFE ENDS

The nation's longest married partnership ended recently at Lucas, Iowa, with the death of Mrs George M Goben, 96 Mr Goben is the same age They were married eighty years ago Except for intervisits between Lucas and Clarke counties, they left Lucas county only twice during the long married life, once to be honored at the State fair in Des Moines, and at a Des Moines theatre in 1939, and to Oregon in 1900.

This Should Settle Your Doubts on Fence Posts

Which lasts longer? Round or split fence posts? is a question frequently asked of the United States forest service.

When fence posts are untreated it is not a question of selecting round or splits posts, say scientists of the forest service. Several years' research at the forest products laboratory in Wisconsin show that generally it is the amount and kind of heartwood that really determines how long a post lasts.

Such trees as the Osage orange, cedar, black locust, or chestnut make good fence posts because they have plenty of durable heartwood. Douglas fir and southern yellow pine make fairly good posts but the heartwood is not so lasting. On the other hand, the amount of heartwood in the cottonwood, basswood, spruce, and hemlock is not important as neither sapwood nor heartwood is lasting They make poor posts either split or round

From a practical standpoint an untreated split post may be better than an untreated round post If the round post has a great deal of sapwood around the heartwood, then the staples may not reach the heartwood Split posts may be set so that the staples may be driven directly into the heartwood where they will hold long after the sapwood has rotted away.

Rural Folk Should Try The Spirit of Scientists

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," is a policy U S. department of agriculture scientists have found essential in seeking and testing new chemicals for use against insect pests The maxim applies in several ways Try first one part of a plant and then another. The leaves and flowers of the weed, devil's shoestring, are worthless, but the roots yield rotenone, an effective poison.

Try a poison, first on one insect, and then on others, Roark advises the chemists and entomologists who are working on these poison problems If nicotine is used on houseflies in the same way that pyrethrum sprays are used, the only effect is to make the flies walk backward, yet nicotine is highly effective against aphids, and farmers and gardeners use about 1,000,000 pounds of nicotine alkaloid a year If nicotine had been tested only against houseflies it would have been discarded.

Again, says Roark, test the materials with various methods of extraction, and with various methods of application Rotenone is almost insoluble in alcohol, but highly soluble in chloroform Discovery of the possibilities of devil's shoestring was delayed because early investigators did not use the right solvent.

Oregon Grow Rubber?

Promising rubber-producing plants that might possibly be adapted for growing in Oregon will be tested there as soon as they are available, reported G R Hyslop, head of the Plant Industries division, Oregon State college. Professor Hyslop recently returned from Washington, D C, where he conferred with federal officials on this subject. Interest in such plants was increased recently with the announcement by the National Farm Chemurgic council that a form of dandelion known as Kok-sagyz is grown in Russia as a source of rubber The suggestion was made that this plant could be grown in the Midwest and possibly on the Coast In Oregon arrangements have been made to have certain milky juice plants that grow readily assayed for their rubber as soon as plants are available. At certain stages in the lives of these plants the rubber content is rather low but as maturity is approached some of these shorter-lived plants show an increase in rubber content that may be of economic importance, says Professor Hyslop. A number of new milky juice annuals and perennials will be sent there for testing.

New Style Cast Iron Sinks

Fitting today's low cost market of military, naval and defense housing, plumbing manufacturers have designed new styles of enameled cast iron flat-rim sinks.

These new sinks range in length from 24 to 60 inches. All are 21 inches wide for building into metal or wood cabinets. The length of the sink is determined by the style. The 60-inch model has two basins and two drainboards, the 24-inch fixture is a single compartment flat rim model for building in. These new low price sinks made their debut with two other types the single compartment double drainboard style, and the single compartment single drainboard.

Through to China

A new mining machine, which theoretically could bore a hole to the center of the earth or tunnel clear through, was reported to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical engineers.

It works like a burrowing insect. With only one man driving, it goes ahead under its own power. It already has bored down 1,125 feet in California, through much hard rock.

The "bug" is metal. It has jaws and body, each about 15 feet long and five feet in diameter. The body houses an electric motor and "legs." The legs are screw jacks to hold position against the sides of the hole being drilled.

The 'Plain People' Are Also Scientific Farmers

The somber-clad "Plain People" of Lancaster county, whose farming methods have produced a "garden spot of the world," are to adopt new scientific measures to preserve their land from erosion.

In the past, the Mennonites and other sects of the "Plain People," had believed their land solid and indestructible, but recent tests by the department of agriculture have revealed that their rich, fertile soil was washing away from the fields into creeks and rivers

Specialists from the department tested woodland areas where trees guard the soil completely They compared their findings with test soil from sloping cornfields and the results showed several inches less soil on the cornfields than in the woods

Erosion control engineers checked dams on the historic Pequea creek, where the first colony of Mennonite farmers cleared land early in the Eighteenth century They found huge silt deposits which proved to be remains of topsoil that for many decades had produced the rich corn, tobacco and other crops

After watching neighboring farmers adapt their practices to soil and water conservation needs by the use of "round" farming, the "Plain People" are gradually using these methods in their own fields.

Leaders of the sects believe the farmers are being convinced that such a practice is an integral part of their age-old philosophy of "good farming on good lands"

Old-Time Rain Barrel Soon to Get 'Work-Out'

Soap goes farther in soft water than in hard, so now that war threatens to reduce supplies of soap-making vegetable oils from abroad, the old-time rain barrel may regain its place under the farmhouse eaves in hardwater regions.

The bureau of agricultural chemistry and engineering points out that water softeners such as lye, washing soda, trisodium phosphate, or borax may supplement the rain barrel to reduce soap required for hardwater washing of dishes, but they caution against using too much of these as an excess is hard on hands and clothes

Rosin, long common in yellow bars of laundry soap, may be used effectively to replace a part of the usual oil content in hand and face soaps, so chemists of the department have compared rosin soaps in hand-washing tests They find that these soaps are germicidally more active than corresponding non-rosin soaps made from vegetable oils For a long time rosin was used only for soap in the form of bars or cakes, but soaps containing rosin are now becoming available in flake form.

Much soap is wasted, says the bureau, because it is not permitted to dry thoroughly before use, or because it is kept in a wet dish or left longer than necessary in washing water. It is real economy to remove wrappers and let the bars of soap dry out before using

Consider Exposures

One precaution often overlooked in exterior painting is that weathering of old paint jobs, which varies with exposure, is not always uniform on all four sides of a building and corresponding allowances must be made in thinning the paint For example, in the northwest farming states paint wears best on the north side, fails slightly faster on the east side and considerably faster on the south and west sides Therefore, the painter will use the most turpentine and the least oil for thinning the first coat applied to the north side, less turpentine and a little more oil on the east side, and more oil and less turpentine on the south and west sides where the paint has failed to a greater degree.

Tear Gas Gets Them

Forty-five husky aviation cadets had a taste of gangster life at Kelly Field's enormous pilot replacement center recently Reeling and blinded—easy captives all—these future flying officers of the U. S army air corps "surrendered" to their flight commander after being tear gassed. Upon entering a huge army tent, the group was ordered to remove gas masks; a lighted tear gas candle did the rest. In two minutes, war time, the scramble for fresh air started. "Don't rub your eyes," their commander ordered "Face the wind and you'll be all right in a few minutes" Tear gas drill is only one phase of schooling which the fledgling undergoes during his stay in the replacement center.

Store Room Into Study

A hopeless-looking cellar store room was remade into an attractive study by clearing it of stored accumulations, cutting a large window to let in sun and air, and using plenty of gay color. Recessed shelves were built in and painted a rich red On the window frame, door, window boxes and cornices, the same color was repeated. Sunny yellow paint was used on the cement side walls which had previously been treated with a proper cement filler. The beamed ceiling was painted white to "raise" it and the floor was covered in blue linoleum. Red and white ticking made attractive window hangings, couch cover ruffle and pillows. The cover itself was plain red.

Turn a Meal Into a Banquet With Blueberry Muffins
(See Recipes Below.)

Prepare for Week-Ends

zy days with first signs of fall he air, wilted appetites and the whole family home for the week-end are a heavy drain on the homemaker. If she expects to spend any time with her family, Madame Housemust scurry around and plan a aredness campaign which will k her refrigerator with foods can be pulled—like the tradial bunny out of the hat—and keep her reputation as the "best around here."

's a mistaken notion that the n dish has to be an elaborate and heavy affair that sends the ess to the head of her table ltering after hours of prepara. A much better idea would be ave a cool, tempting Chicken-n Mousse such as I've planned you today.

ash the vegetables and store n in the cold compartment and 're ready to toss together in a minutes, crisp, and chewy, coatwith a flavorful dressing, in a d supreme. If the family really its heart set on "something hot" g out some bran muffins, all ist and tasty with blueberries. se take but a short time to bake.

our table should be bright and with oranges and yellows, reds, browns to add warm notes to porch supper or lunch—indoors out. Let your imagination run with the dry leaves, bright ber-, sprays from the wayside or 's bountiful fruits.

emember, you can do more for r table by arranging Concord pes tastefully with a few golden rs, blush red les on rich wn leaves or well polished ter, copper or ss vessels than e, expensive ers that your ily does not w how to appreciate. Then, of rse, if you have a few yellow or p red chrysanthemums in your garden, let them fall gracefully and out among their own leaves a burnished bowl, and you leave hing to be desired.

ere's the mousse which you can e as a main dish. Make it the ht before and it's already to e just with unmolding:

Chicken-Ham Mousse.
(Serves 6)

egg yolks, slightly beaten
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups chicken broth
1½ cups ground, cooked chicken
1½ cups ground, cooked ham
¼ cup salad dressing minced scallion
¼ cup whipped cream package lemon-flavored gelatin

dd salt to egg yolks, then broth. ok over boiling water, stirring conntly until mixture coats a spoon.

This Week's Menu

*Chicken-Ham Mousse
*All-Bran Blueberry Muffins
Butter
*Julienne Salad
*Whipped Cream Sugarless Cake
*Recipes Given.

Pour over gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool. Fold in remaining ingredients. Place strips of green pepper, sliced olives, sliced hard-cooked eggs on bottom of oiled mold. Pour in mousse. Let chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce and garnish with romaine, endive and tomato wedges.

Dispositions will all be the merrier when you serve these bran-blueberry muffins because the B-vitamins, often called morale builders, in the bran and the magnesium in the blueberries, which is reputed to create kindlier feelings toward your fellow men, really get together and do their best for the system.

All-Bran Blueberry Muffins.
(Makes 12 small muffins)
2 tablespoons shortening
¼ cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup all-bran
¾ cup milk
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ cup fresh blueberries

Cream shortening and sugar until fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Stir in all-bran and milk and let soak until all moisture is taken up. Sift dry ingredients and add blueberries. Add to first mixture and stir just until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin tins until two-thirds full and bake in a moderately hot (400-degree) oven about 30 minutes.

Greens tossed together with mellow french dressing are attention-getters:

Julienne Salad Bowl.
(Serves 6)

1 cup cabbage
1 cup carrots
½ cup green pepper
¼ cup red radishes
Garlic
Curly endive or shredded lettuce

Shred all the vegetables fine. Arrange mounds of them in a bowl, and toss french dressing over them. Rub the bowl in which they are served with garlic.

A main dish that will go well with the Julienne Salad is this Baked Bean dish:

Baked Bean Rarebit.

1 can baked beans
¼ pound American cheese, grated
3 slices bacon, fried crisp
½ green pepper sliced

Mix beans, green pepper and crumbled bacon with grated cheese and pour into a casserole. Bake in a moderate oven 35-40 minutes.

A cake that's a tasty sugar saver is this one.

Whipped Cream Sugarless Cake.
2¼ cups sifted cake flour
2¼ teaspoons double acting baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or shortening
1 cup light corn syrup
2 eggs, unbeaten
½ cup orange juice
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
1 cup cream, whipped

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift dry ingredients together three times. Cream shortening, add orange rind, and then syrup beating well after each addition. Add ¼ of flour and beat until smooth and well blended. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each. Add remaining flour in thirds alternately with orange juice, beating after each addition for best results. Bake in two greased 8-inch layer pans in a moderate (375-degree) oven 30 minutes. Cool. Spread whipped cream between and on top of layers.

Star Dust

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

AT NINE O'CLOCK on the night of Tuesday, September 1, every theater in the land is expected to stop its program and stage a "Salute to Our Heroes"; it's planned as one of the features of the treasury's billion-dollar war bond and stamp drive. Patriotic airs will be played as a color guard marches down the aisle, a one-minute speech will be made, the audience will give three cheers and then sing the national anthem. If every movie theater is filled, 11,000,000 people will participate.

Bobby Breen, once famous as a child singing star, who retired from the screen in 1939 at the age of 13, is coming back to it. In Republic's "Johnny Doughboy" he will play himself, a passe movie star, appearing with Jane Withers and Patrick Brook.

During the past year Ginny Simms has been working for RKO, under the usual six-month contract, with options. There's been no big publicity build-up. But recently she signed as the singing mistress of ceremonies for the new "Johnny Presents" radio show, starting September 8—immediately she was cast for three important films, and two other studios that wanted to borrow her were refused!

Orson Welles has given us another superb picture; "The Magnificent Ambersons" rates right along with "Citizen Kane." He makes a story really come to life. And he has done us all a service in bringing Dolores Costello back to the screen.

Dorothy Lamour has a brand-new makeup for "White Cargo," but it sounds like one of those things that one would rather do without. She wears five successive layers of a fluid foundation that combines cream with powder; each is applied all over her body with a sponge and allowed to dry before the next is applied. Then she's sprayed with a film containing gold dust!

"The War Against Mrs. Hadley" has been selected by the Kate Smith radio hour for a nation-wide salute on September 25. It features Edward Arnold, Fay Bainter, Spring Byington, Richard Ney, Jean Rogers and Van Johnson. Quite a way to launch a picture, as the Kate Smith hour is broadcast over 104 stations, and is said to attract more than 30,000,000 listeners.

Susan Hayward can thank her stars that she's a good screamer. Few actresses can scream convincingly, but Susan let out such a good yelp when testing for "Reap the Wild Wind" that C. B. DeMille promptly signed her up for the second feminine lead. As a result of her performance, those in the know are predicting stardom for the pretty little redhead within a year.

Joan Davis can thank broadcasting for furthering her movie career. Though she's such a clever comedienne, her roles just seemed to be getting smaller and smaller. Then Rudy Vallee asked her to guest star on his program a few times, and she was such a hit that he made her a regular. Whereupon the film studios began to wake up to what they'd been missing, and she's in demand once more.

Lesley Woods, who stars in Columbia's "Joyce Jordan" every afternoon, likes to remember when she and Tyrone Power were on the payroll of the Motion Picture Exhibit at the Century of Progress Exposition in 1938. She says they stood around and tried to look like movie stars and ate ham sandwiches.

ODDS AND ENDS—When Jacquiline White reported on the set of "Skyway to Glory" she was handed a telegram wishing her good luck, signed "Uncle Frank" —meaning Frank Knox, secretary of the navy . . Dave Elman, the "Hobby Lobby" man of radio, has been so busy that he hasn't been able to catch up with his own hobby for months; he's a stamp collector . . . Meyer Davis heads a committee of bandleaders to collect musical instruments for American prisoners of war —the Y. M. C. A. will distribute them . . William Powell and Hedy Lamarr teamed so well in "Crossroads" that they'll be starred in "Starlight," a story of marital complications.

JOSEPH SOLD INTO SLAVERY

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 37 23-36.
GOLDEN TEXT—Love envieth not.—I Corinthians 13 4, R V

Does it pay to trust God? Is He really concerned about the affairs of men? Does He know the trials and the heartaches of His children? These are the crying questions of today, and they find their answer in God's dealings with men of the past. The story of Joseph has many interesting and instructive phases, but perhaps the most important just now is the truth of our lesson, "The Lord saith . . . them that honor me I will honor."

We first find Joseph as he learns that

I. Jealousy Bears Bitter Fruit (vv. 23-30).

Joseph was his father's favorite and was shown that favoritism in many ways, but it was perhaps most fully expressed in the coat of many colors. This was a luxurious long robe with sleeves, indicating that he was a gentleman and not to do ordinary work of one who wore the sleeveless, knee-length tunic. His brothers deeply resented this evidence of the father's favor.

The dreams which Joseph rather innocently yet perhaps unwisely told to his brothers and his honest report of their wicked behavior fanned the flame of jealousy into a consuming fire which threatened his life. But God, through Joseph's brother Judah and through the opportunity they had to make money out of selling him into slavery, kept him for His own purposes.

May we not learn that the darkest hour may be the time of God's deep interest and directing power. The only way strong men can be developed is by suffering hardness and trial. "God wants iron saints, and since there is no way of imparting iron to the moral nature than by letting His people suffer, He lets them suffer (Heb. 12:11)" (Meyer).

Parents should also learn here the dangers of favoritism among children. It is one of the most destructive of evil influences that can enter a home. It hurts the child who is favored, alienates the other children, and it destroys confidence in parents and respect for their authority. Let's have none of it!

II. Deceit Attempts to Conceal Sin (vv. 31-35).

One of the tragic things about sin is that a wicked act does not stand alone but leads into another sin to cover the first. In the case of Joseph's brethren, their sin against him was covered by deceit. They lied to the father and maintained that lie for years, even though they saw that their aged father was brokenhearted. How callous sin makes the heart of a man!

Yet the very fact that they lied to cover their sin indicates that they were ashamed to admit that they had fallen so low. James Strahan well says: "Evil never dares to be sincere. It always borrows the colors and wears the garb of innocence. It has a whole lifetime of hard labor in keeping up appearances. Hypocrisy is the tribute which all bad men have to pay to the ideal of goodness."

III. God Overrules Evil for Good (v. 36).

It was God's plan that Joseph should come to his greatest usefulness in his place of authority in Egypt, so He directed the sale of the young slave into the home of Potiphar, a leading officer of Pharaoh.

The story of Joseph's life in Potiphar's house is one of unusual interest. Faithfulness to duty, loyalty to God and truth led to shifting experiences of imprisonment and of favor, but ultimately he came out into the place of leadership in the government of Egypt. In this place God marvelously blessed and used him.

Since the matter of the relation of men to government is so much before us these days, it will be well to note that Scripture holds a very exalted view of the public servant. Paul says we are to "be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God" (Rom. 13:1). The Bible clearly teaches that every governmental agency and every public servant, from the policeman on the beat to the President in the White House, is only permitted to exercise authority over his fellowmen because God has ordained that there should be such government. Clear it is that every right-thinking official of state and nation should be humble, teachable, discreet, and wise in the exercise of his power, and God-fearing in the discharge of his responsibility.

Our lesson provides unusual opportunity for the teaching of proper family relationships, the right attitude toward government, as well as the blessed assurance and confidence which we may have who have intrusted our lives into the hands of God.

True Greatness

He is truly great that is great in charity. He is truly great that is little in himself, and marketh no account of any height of honor. And he is truly learned that doeth the will of God, and forsaketh his own will.—Thomas a Kempis.

Mr. Chu's Name Is Not One to Be Sneezed At!

At a United China Relief dinner Mr. Kah Chu, prominent businessman from Foochow, China, was scheduled to make a speech. Before that event began the master of ceremonies came over, very solicitously asked Mr. Chu how to pronounce his name. Mr. Chu smiled, suggested:

"If you will remember 'kerchoo,' I think the association will help you get it right."

The toastmaster thanked him, rose a few minutes later to introduce the speaker.

"This evening," he said, "we are very proud to present Mr. . ."

He fumbled around in his subconscience a moment for the association, then came out triumphantly with:

". . . Mr. Sneeze."

SAILOR "BING" REECE WRITES FROM CORPUS CHRISTI

U S Naval Hospital
Corpus Christi Texas
Thursday Sept 10

Dear Jergie-

Just a line to keep in touch with old friends I am now stationed at the worlds largest Naval Air Station, and I can believe everything I have heard Rex Jr told about Texing

We have an excellent station here with movies bowling Ship Service Centers and other recreations

The climate is not too hot but it is so wet here that it is not too healthy a climate

The fishing here is excellent and the mosquitoes are sensational But all in all it could be much worse

The town of Corpus Christi is overrun with sailors and the natives more or less resent it but most of the boys do all right in town

I enjoy reading the occasional copies of The Klemme Times that have been forwarded to me Seems like another world Life in the Navy is good though, more simple than civilian life and pays just as well, but you have to forgo the pleasures of your own home

Perhaps this thing will wash up sooner than we expect and we can all return

Let me know the news Best regards

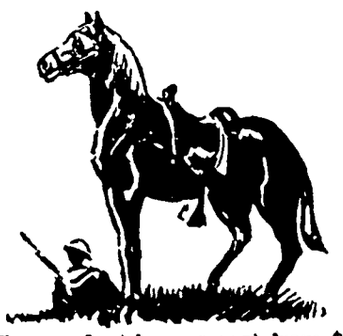
Hitler found out that his high powered mechanized and motorized army bogged down in the snow and mud of the Russian Winter. Although our Army is largely mechanized the cavalry horse is still a highly essential factor in this mounted division and in the Field Artillery. The Army also maintains remount farms where many cavalry horses are bred and raised.



These select horses cost from $100 to $165 and our crack cavalrymen are expert riders and carry on the traditions which have followed the cavalry from the earliest days of the Army. Constipation! Why Not Get and Keep "Regular"?

One of the commonest causes of constipation is simply this: Modern diets, superrefined, too often give us too little "bulk food." In such cases, dosing with cathartics and purges gives only temporary relief — the trouble comes back again and again. The way to more lasting relief is to get at the underlying cause and correct it.

You can do this by eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN daily. This delicious, toasty cereal supplies the needed "bulk." It acts pleasantly, works principally on the contents of the colon, helping you to have easy and normal elimination. In many cases, eating ALL-BRAN regularly and drinking plenty of water brings lasting freedom from constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not benefited by this simple treatment, see your doctor.

500,000 High School Youths Will Receive Pre-Flight Training

Nation to Get Jump Over Axis by Readying Students For Future Aviation Career

It's an ironical twist of fate that the most far-reaching change in our modern educational system was set in motion by a war.

As September rolls around, public, private and parochial high schools throughout the nation will have radically altered their curricula to include instruction in pre-flight training under the auspices of the Air Training Corps of America, working in conjunction with the Civil Aeronautics administration and the U. S. office of education.

Educators themselves readily admit that the war, with the attention it has focused on aviation, must be credited in large measure for the speed and efficiency with which ATCA's program has been launched, although the program's peacetime objectives are considered equally important.

Studying With New Interest.

Regardless of cause, this September some 500,000 boys who voluntarily are enrolling in ATCA units will be studying algebra, geometry, physics, and other subjects with a new interest. They'll be enthusiastic about subjects they once considered "dry" because these studies will be taught in terms of aviation.

During five, or more, hours each week, ATCA members will study subjects in pre-flight training such as air navigation, communications, aerodynamics, meteorology, safety, and the structure and design of engines.

And if there are those who doubt the enthusiasm with which boys are taking these courses, they need only visit one of the schools where the ATCA courses already have been introduced. There these youngsters can be seen tackling the fundamental problems of aviation with an eagerness that is surprising.

They build their own model planes to scale, following specifications provided by the army and navy. These planes perform a useful function in the classes on spotting, where ATCA members learn how to distinguish one type from another at a casual glance and from any angle

New Style School Arguments.

The visitor will see these boys arguing over a problem in plane design—discussing where stress and strain will affect the craft—as though the chart on the wall were a real bomber and they were going to take off in it themselves.

In classes on communications the pupils will be taking down the dots and dashes of the Morse code with the same zeal they might put into remembering the signals for an off-tackle play on the football field.

In classes on engine structure, in physics, in algebra, in whatever these future fliers now are studying in their pre-flight courses, the same degree of youthful eagerness is apparent everywhere.

TRYING HARD

On the drill field, where members of ATCA units learn marching formations and take callisthenics to build them up physically, these lads show the same earnest attitude. They're trying hard every minute, so that sometime they can earn the right to fly a plane for the army or navy, or become professional fliers in civilian life.

This attribute of the Air Training courses in secondary schools, as much as the fact that the new studies have called for a complete overhauling of the curricula, is the reason that educators are quick to acknowledge that the system of teaching is going through the most radical change it ever has seen.

And They Like It!

They find it adding to their own enthusiasm to be met with such a ready response on the part of their pupils. When "x plus y" can be something to do with a pursuit plane and "a times b" has something to do with increasing the already terrific speed of a giant bomber, it's something which both teacher and pupil find exciting.

ATCA members present a dashing appearance in their uniforms especially designed for the corps. Jackets, shirts and trousers of the uniform are all in a matching tone of gray-blue. Ties are navy blue and buttons on the jacket are silver-toned. The caps have a piping of bright red and the same color appears again in the single stripe on each sleeve cuff. The red and white ATCA insignia is attached to the upper left sleeve.

Considering the spirit it has injected into the system of teaching, it is not surprising that ATCA courses are finding a ready welcome in the schools.

As for the army and navy—they, too, are all for it. They have long recognized that the best professional flier is the one who has been trained from youth. They realize the importance of the program in filling the lack that has existed for providing training in the fundamentals of aviation.

Objectives of ATCA have been endorsed by Robert A. Lovett, assistant secretary of war for air, and by Robert Hinckley, assistant secretary of commerce and founder of the Citizens Pilot training program.

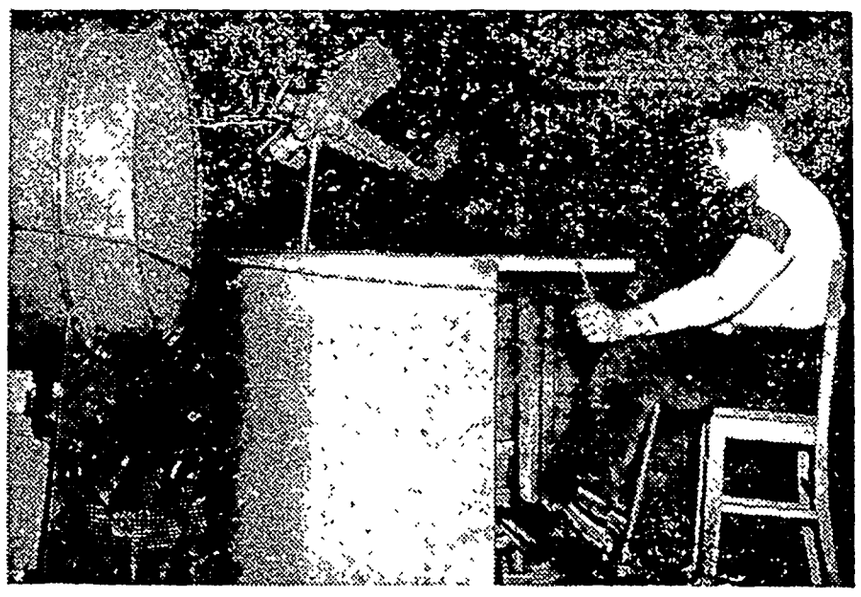
Sponsoring the work of the ATCA are some of the outstanding men and women in the country, including Bernard Baruch, James A. Farley, Alfred E. Smith, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, chairman of the Pan-American games committee; C. R. Smith, ex president of American airlines; Robert Hinckley, assistant secretary of commerce, and Mrs. Colin Kelly, widow of the American air hero.

That's the story of ATCA.

It's one of those things created during war which is not necessarily a part of war. It will, educators feel confident, live long after the war is over, and the ways of peace returned again, because it is inextricably tied up with aviation—and aviation itself has many long and vigorous years stretching ahead of it.

Model Builder

This ATCA student is building his own model plane from army and navy specifications. Such practice gives youth throughout the U. S. first-hand knowledge of planes they hope some day to fly.



The theory of flight becomes a real thing to this student as, stick in hand, he controls the model plane while the wind tunnel, extreme left, whips a stiff breeze in the "flier's" face. This is another part of the course given in the pre-flight ATCA training throughout the nation. This lad some day may become an expert aviator in the U. S. army or navy.

End of War Will Mark Aviation's Golden Age

America invented the airplane—yet the greatest single threat to our security today is the plane itself.

Having created the means by which man could fly, America failed miserably to recognize the significance of its own invention. It remained for other nations to grasp the airplane's enormous possibilities—to visualize it as a gigantic instrument of peace and war.

It remained for other nations to sense the possibilities of training—not just a small segment—but all its youth, to be air-minded and airwise.

Americans have been caught napping. But, if a determined group of American citizens have their way, this will not, cannot, happen again. These determined citizens have united to form the Air Training Corps of America.

Wings for America at Peace.

No informed person will deny that the end of this war will mark the true beginning of the Aviation age.

There will be new markets to be won, new lands to be developed. And in this post-war race for trade, aviation will play a major role. In America and throughout the world, the highways of commerce will be in the air. In transportation, in a thousand as yet undreamed-of facets of our daily life, men trained in aviation will be the leaders of tomorrow. And the nation which molds these leaders will be itself a leader.

In training its youth for aviation, America is assuring its sons a rich opportunity, and is at the same time, taking steps to insure its own future.

Wings for America at War.

Every decent American hopes that boys now in high school will never have to go to war.

But every thinking American realizes that they may have to fight before this war is won. And make no mistake about it, this war will be won by trained, professional airmen over that "last battlefield," wherever it may be. These airmen, grim though the idea is, must be young. For the air warfare of today, with its 40,000-foot altitudes and 400 m.p.h. speeds, demands youth—trained youth. No one else has a fighting chance.

This is the lesson brought us from England, a lesson dearly learned by the heroic RAF in the Battle of Britain. England itself has already profited from this lesson, and has set up its own Air Training corps under the air ministry. So far, England's Air Training corps has graduated 75,000 boys into the Royal Air force.

Helpful to Canadians.

The idea, transplanted to Canada, has resulted in the training of 26,000 boys—and has not yet hit its full stride. It is already considered an indispensable part of the Royal Canadian Air force training program. It is saving the best part of a year—precious time when time is all-important—in preparing airmen for combat duty. It has materially reduced training casualties.

Not all of these boys, of course, become pilots. One of the important benefits of this training is the fact that it "screens" the boys into the particular job in air or ground crew for which they are best qualified.

Furthermore, it gives them the essential psychological conditioning that their own job, whatever it may be, is all-important.

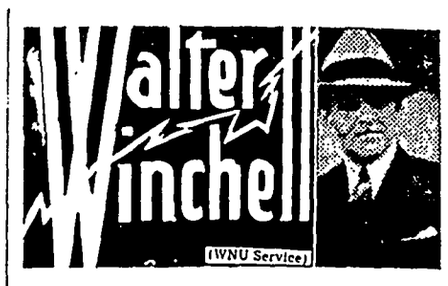
Naturally, an important part of the program is a carefully worked out course of training to promote physical fitness, to make the youth of America strong, hardened and ready for the tasks that lie ahead.

Members of the Air Training Corps of America will also receive basic training in the manual of arms and military drill, and will be schooled in the highest ideals of discipline and patriotism.

ATCA's Role in the War Effort.

In undertaking to set up pre-flight squadrons in the nation's high schools, the Air Training Corps of America is co-ordinating its work with that of other organizations interested in the progress of aviation.

The Civil Aeronautics administration, working with and through educators who have a thorough grounding in aviation and aviation problems, have done a splendid job of preparing practical, easily understood textbooks in the various phases of pre-flight training.



During Mr. Winchell's absence on vacation his column is being conducted by guest columnists.

CAPITOL HILL

By LEON HENDERSON

Head of Office of Price Administration.

Senator Barkley and Speaker Rayburn both came as congressmen with the Wilson administration in 1912—Recently they jovially debated rank. Barkley, because "B" is alphabetically higher than "R," was named to committee memberships ahead of Rayburn. But Sam claims precedence now because if he should die the President would attend his funeral, but would not be obligated to do so if Alben passed on . . .

Senator Barkley, as perpetual keynoter, claims to be an authority on key words—At the 1932 Chicago Democratic convention he says it was "beer"—In Philadelphia, 1936, it was "New Deal"—At Chicago again in 1940 it was "Roosevelt" . . .

Our tomorrows look brighter because of a growing group of young Southern congressmen, such as Hale Boggs, Al Gore, Wilbur Mills, and Mike Monroney, to mention only a handful . . .

I wonder if the American public will ever realize the debt they owe to Senator Prentiss Brown of Michigan.

WASHINGTON VIGNETTE

Recently Don Nelson and I acknowledged tribute to Scotch grandmothers for their training in discipline—Sidney Weinberg thought we overdid it—In a bridge game later, when Sidney set me two tricks, he gleed, "Your Scotch grandmother is no help in bridge against a Brooklyn ward leader like my dad was."

I interview my share of rubber substitute inventors, as do all WPB members, because I believe in miracles—I ought to, I married one. But one long haired scientist took the cake: "These other fellows make synthetic, Mr. Henderson, my process makes REAL rubber" . . .

One of my rationing staff heard complaints daily for two weeks from traveling business men — "Two weeks with the traveling salesmen," he reported, "and not a single new risque joke" . . .

The solution of our transportation problem requires a miracle-worker, and Joe Eastman is the guy who can do it.

THINGS I NEVER KNEW TILL NOW

That, according to the squawks there are more landlords than tenants—it couldn't be . . . That there really are a high percentage of statesmen in congress . . . That it's amazing what you can get for nothing nowadays—It would cost us millions to get the services that our rationing boards are giving us for nothing and it wouldn't be as good . . . That a staff of 30,000 can get one into disproportionately more trouble than a staff of ten . . . That Claude Wickard is really a top-notch corn-hog producer . . That the average height of three of my deputies is 6 feet 5 inches—if they were laid end to end the lawyers say a lot of people would cheer—and the deputies say that if all the lawyers were laid end to end they'd reach no conclusion . . . How fast a $1 a year man can become a temporary bureaucrat . . That Maria Alencastro at the Brazilian embassy would be a star on any radio program . . . That Senate Sec. Ed Halsey was such a peacemaker, pacemaker, and life saver . . . That 16 per cent of the people had no Gallup opinion on OPA—since it sometimes seems like everyone has written to me—and the mail was 77 per cent favorable like Gallup indicates either, some days.

THOUGHTS WHILE STROLLING ON CONN. AVE. AT MIDNIGHT

What this country needs is a good five-cent nickel . . . I wonder where I can get a good second-hand tire for Lube . . . I wonder whether our rent division can keep me from being dispossessed . . . It's good to see Marvin McIntyre with so much zing again . . . I expect Sidney Hillman to zing again. Wouldn't it be fun if Harold Ickes was in the senate . . . If OPA can only get by the canning season and the elections . . . Wait till our new pursuit job ties in with the Zero . . Sure was funny about the male tenant from Pittsburgh who reported on Form CCD-2 that he "shared a bathtub with his landlady" . . . I wonder what ever became of the NRA visitors who wanted a floor under prices . . It isn't true that Don Nelson and General Somervell phfft—they've phfft, phfft, phfft—and always made up. . . . Big men . . . I wonder if the Mayos will check up on Charlie Michaelson's no-trump play while he's there . . . I miss Pat Boland . . Dick Lansburgh . . . General Johnson . . . What some of these wage debates need is Jerry Frank and Sumner Pike . . . I wonder where the Peoria Chamber of Commerce found my Australian hat—I gave it to Sir Clive Baillieu and I dared him to wear it . . . Who trained victory-gardener Leon, Junior, age four, to ask me not to ration seeds . . . My candidate for the United Nations beauty contest, Mrs. Soong.

Budget Stretchers

hat can I serve as a main course won't take too many dishes? What can I give my large family that isn't too expensive? These are the two queries often asked by my readers. The answer to both questions is simple—a casserole. Easy to e, easy to serve, economical casseroles solve the main dish blem almost perfectly.

lmost? Yes, I say almost advis-, because if the family ever be- es aware of your ulterior mo- s in serving casseroles, their in- est in them becomes less, less finally non-existent.

lake your casserole so delectable so distinctive in flavor and no will ever realize that it's packed h economy and you have a one- n meal that's perfection plus.

Never overwork the casserole by ing to use up all the leftovers lin- refrigerator and pantry shelves. rer swamp the flavors of the food you strike a false note and con- e the sense of taste. Use good d and season with discrimination. ur result will be a real success.

Here are some new ideas I've mpiled for you. Most of them of food you have used often enough they're old favorites, but in new ss! You'll like:

Rice and Chicken Casserole.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups rice
2 cups milk
1½ tablespoons butter
2 eggs
2½ cups diced, cooked chicken

Boil rice in salted water until ten- r. Stir in butter, milk and eggs. ut a layer of this into a casserole, en chicken, more rice, etc. Bake a moderate (350-degree) oven un- well browned.

Every now and then you've heard e talk about food affinities. Here's nother I'd like to add to the list:

Lamb and Lima Bean Pie.
(Serves 6)

2 pounds lamb neck, shanks or shoulder
1 pound dry lima beans
Salt, pepper
Celery salt

Soak lima beans overnight. Drain nd place in a heavy kettle. Have mb cut in 2-inch eces. Add to ans, season and over with water. ransfer to cas- role and top ith pimiento bis- uit rings and ake in a moder- ely hot oven 20 25 minutes.

To make pimiento biscuit rings: dd ⅓ cup coarsely chopped pimi- nto to baking powder biscuit recipe. You'll get your carbohydrates, roteins along with vitamins and inerals in this economical, hunger- tisfying dish good for family din- er or informal buffet entertaining.

American Goulash.
(Serves 6)

Tomato Juice — Saltines
*Rice and Chicken Casserole
*Grapefruit-Cranberry Salad

Sliced Melon
Beverage
*Recipe Given.

2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
3 cups tomatoes
1 can tomato soup
Buttered crumbs

Cook macaroni in boiling, salted water, about 20 minutes, or until tender. Drain. Brown meat and onions in fat. Add macaroni, seasonings, tomatoes and soup. Pour into greased baking dish and sprinkle with buttered crumbs. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate (350-degree) oven.

An economy meat cut that is getting itself talked about plenty because of its simply wonderful flavor is this:

Ribs of Beef With Vegetables.
(Serves 6)

3½ pounds of short ribs
1 large onion, sliced
2 cups tomatoes
Salt, pepper
6 onions
6 potatoes
3 parsnips

Season short ribs with salt and pepper. Put in skillet with fat and brown quickly. Place in an iron skillet or roasting pan and add onions and tomatoes. Let bake in a moderate oven for 1¼ hours, tightly covered. Add whole carrots which have been scraped, parsnips, peeled, and potatoes peeled but left whole. Cook another hour or until vegetables are tender. Add boiling water if necessary during the last hour of cooking.

Second day service of chicken is beautifully simplified if you do up the bird in crusty cylindrical croquettes, and dish them up together with golden carrot strips and either canned or frozen asparagus and you have a one-plate meal that is bound to inspire the family's appetite:

Chicken Croquettes.
(Makes 10 croquettes)

2 cups cooked, ground chicken
1 cup thick white sauce
2 teaspoons chopped parsley
Flour
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon milk
3 cups oven-popped rice cereal
Salt, pepper

Prepare white sauce using ½ cup chicken stock and ½ cup milk. Add to chicken and parsley and chill thoroughly. Shape into pyramids or cylinders. Roll cereal to fine crumbs. Dip croquettes first in the flour, then in egg (to which milk has been added) and in rolled crumbs. Fry in deep, hot fat (365 degrees) for 2 to 5 minutes or until golden brown.

A crispy, citrus salad goes well with casserole dishes. Suggestion of the week which will take top honors in the hall of fame is this one made with grapefruit, oranges and cranberries for color. Its dressing is unusual in that it combines honey with mayonnaise, and cranberries.

Grapefruit and Cranberry Salad.
(Serves 4)

1 large grapefruit
2 large oranges
Lettuce
½ cup ground, raw cranberries
2 tablespoons honey
½ cup mayonnaise

Peel and section oranges and grapefruit. Arrange alternately on lettuce. Mix cranberries with honey. Let stand ½ hour. Combine with mayonnaise. Serve over salad.

Lynn Says:

Store Food Wisely: There are no "Finders Keepers" but you may be the "Loser Weeper" if you do not store those vegetables properly.

Scientific experiments show that lettuce may lose 40 per cent of its vitamin C if kept at room temperature. Refrigerator recommended!

Spinach, left standing on pantry shelf, will be drained of its vitamin C by about one-third. Canned string beans lose about one-third of their vitamin C if they stand in a bowl at room temperature for six hours.

Short cooking time is recommended, too. Cabbage, for instance, loses 69 per cent of the elusive vitamin C and 72 per cent of its calcium and 50 per cent of its other minerals when these valuable nutrients go up in steam.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

THAT'S quite something in murder mysteries that 20th Century-Fox is cooking up, with Bryan Fox in charge. Instead of having only one famous sleuth, it's going to have practically all of them! Philo Vance leads off, but when he gets stuck he's aided by Michael Shane, the Falcon, Bulldog Drummond and various others. They can't borrow William Powell to be the Thin Man, so they'll just use his voice. George Sanders will play the Falcon. And Mr. Moto, the Japanese sleuth, will participate from an internment camp.

"The Show Boat" is returning to stage, screen and probably radio. Its to be revived on Broadway this fall, and Metro has purchased the screen rights from Universal, so for the third time movie-goers will have an opportunity to see it and hear its lovely music.

Katharine Cornell, one of the first ladies of the stage, has at last agreed to appear in a motion picture. Producers have been imploring her to do so for years; now she's consented. You'll see her in "Stage Door Canteen," the profits of which will go to service organizations. It will be produced in cooperation with the American Theater Wing. Katharine Hepburn, Gertrude Lawrence, Helen Hayes, Ray Bolger, Kay Kyser and Edgar Bergen will also participate; all will appear as themselves, working as they do at the Canteen.

Harry Sherman's "Lost Canyon," a Bill Boyd picture, ran into a snag the other day. There are scenes requiring cowboys to spend some time in a barn, amid about 100 bales of alfalfa. All was set, when the sneezing ruined the dialogue; seems some of the cowboys were alergic to alfalfa, and it was a case of abandoning either it or the cowboys. So a hurry call for non-hayfeverish cowboys was sent out.

It's a new wife for "Tarzan" in "Tarzan Triumphs," namely Frances Gifford. Maureen O'Sullivan, who has co-starred with Johnny Weismuller in the Tarzan series for eight years, relinquishes the role in favor of family duties.

If you have formed the habit of tuning your radio to the adventures of the Goldberg family, you know that "Sammy's" going into the army. But did you know that Alfred Ryder, who has been portraying "Sammy" for 13 years, is also being inducted? The radio character is merely following Ryder's career. Ryder stepped into the role when the show first went on the air.

Martin Block says that laziness pays, since it makes you look for short cuts. Eight years ago he was an announcer on a small station, writing his own scripts, and making $30 a week. He learned that he could avoid typing the commercials by ad libbing them. That style was more convincing than the first one, and today he's drawing down $4,000 weekly, thanks to it. He's now master of ceremonies on "The Hit Parade."

The largest stampede scenes to be photographed in technicolor have been completed by Columbia Studios in Utah for the new superwestern, "The Desperadoes." More than 1,000 unbroken horses were used. Such famous scenes as Robinson's canyon, home of the cliff dwellers, and Johnson's canyon, noted for its beauty of color, were used as backgrounds.

The sheik's tent from which Bing Crosby and Bob Hope rescue Dorothy Lamour and Dona Drake in "Road to Morocco" is the one DeMille used back in 1923 in "The Ten Commandments" . . . Nan Grey, star of radio's "Those We Love," is the wife of Jackie Westrope, a jockey, so her friends are always urging her to fondle their horses—and she's scared to death of horses . . . The Washington Merry-Go-Round

U. S. GENERAL IN ACTION

Maj. Gen. Charles L. Scott, U. S. tank expert just back from Libya, is not talking about it in his lectures to American armored forces, but he did more than almost anyone to stem the onrush of Von Rommel's tanks when they broke through the British lines and started their mad dash to Alexandria.

General Scott was in Egypt helping out with the American tanks which had been sent to the British. And he happened to be in the thick of it during that part of Rommel's attack when the British seemed most disorganized.

So Scott, though an American, jumped into the battle, actually took over temporary command, and organized a counter-attack. All the details can't be told yet, but when they are it will be a great story.

WHY GIRLS LEAVE WASHINGTON

Many young girls who left home to come to Washington are now leaving Washington to go home. They thought it would be thrilling to work in the capital in wartime, but they are sadly disillusioned.

Clerks and junior stenographers simply don't make enough money to live on. A labor department survey indicates that a single person must earn $1,470 a year to live in Washington, at present rent and food costs. Yet there are two Civil Service ratings below that figure—$1,260 and $1,440, for clerical and stenographic jobs.

Young girls like Washington at first. It's something to write home about—living right in sight of the great Capitol dome, passing in front of the White House every day.

But the thrill wears off when the boss works them 12 hours a day in a war office, when their feet get tired standing in crowded buses, and when they can't sleep comfortably four in a room.

Norah Booth personnel expert in OPA, knows these cases by the score. A girl from Nashville, Tenn., came to Washington last June, thrilled to the eyebrows. Now she is leaving.

"I don't know what's the matter with me," she told Miss Booth. "I'm all jumpy. I guess you call it nerves. It was fun being here at first, but you have to work so hard and pay so much for a room! I'm tired of worrying whether I'll have enough money next week for a new pair of stockings. I'm going home!"

HOW TO WRITE TO SOLDIERS

The army is far from satisfied with the way its V-mail (photo letter) service to troops overseas is going. Despite the big advantages of V-mail in the speed and transmission as well as guarantee against loss, the general public hasn't taken to it.

This is partly due to a misunderstanding of the technique of the service and partly to the fact that V-mail blanks have been available only at larger post offices. However, the army is planning to extend the service soon to every post office and rural route in the country. At the same time, an educational program will be launched.

Actually, it is much simpler to send a letter by V-mail than the regular way, since you don't have to bother with envelope or stamps. All you do is write your message, with your address and that of the receiver, on a blank form, and fold and seal it. The sealed form goes to a port of embarkation, where it is put through a machine and photographed on a small micro-film roll.

Later the roll is printed and developed in a reproducing station at its overseas destination. The photo-letter is then placed in an envelope and delivered. Since the filming and developing are performed mechanically in the dark, senders of V-mail are assured absolute privacy.

Also, they get faster delivery. The army gives priority to V-mail because of a one-third saving in cargo space. The army postal service estimates that 22 sacks of V-mail are equal to 37 sacks of regular mail. However, the chief consideration to senders is that V-mail is guaranteed against loss. The original V-form is preserved for refilming, in case a mail cargo is lost at sea.

Negative 'Maiden'

The word "maiden" is applied to many subjects besides an unmarried woman, points out Collier's. The adjective is used to designate a city that has never been taken, a plant that has never been pruned, a field that has never been plowed, a sword that has never been used, a male or female race horse that has never won an event and, in England, a session of a criminal court at which there are no prisoners for trial.

Harold Jost, of Toledo, Ohio, came Friday morning to spend ten days or more visiting with his father, Henry F. Jost and family. Harold recently underwent a major operation and is here recuperating. Harold and his concern are in war work, building machines for the army and navy for their testing laboratories.

When the stewards went to the Methodist church Wednesday evening to hold a meeting they found the kitchen nearly flooded with water, and water pouring from the ceiling. The next day a plumber located the leak in a connection which had rusted through. Some damage was done and the kitchen will need refinishing.

Quite a few farmers have been building concrete feeding platforms lately, while others expect to build them this fall. Farms where we have noted this modern improvement are the Edwin Josten, Alfred Schlei and J A. Chambers farms. Jim Larson lives on the Schlei farm west of town and Roy Jacobs lives on the Chambers farm southeast of town.

Corning firemen were willing to do what they could to fight a fire, but they couldn't find it. They could see the smoke, so they started traveling down the road but still could not find the fire. After traveling around awhile, they then phoned the Corning telephone office but no help could be given as to the location of the blaze. All returned to Corning and went back to their regular jobs. The next time they hope whoever calls them gives more explicit directions.

The Best Possible Time

YOU CAN'T BEAT THIS TIME OF THE YEAR FOR

Concrete Work

FOUNDATION REPAIRS, a FEEDING FLOOR for the barn yard, a SIDEWALK for the house, a cement DRIVEWAY for the double crib, a NEW FLOOR for the milk house - - - so goes the list of concrete work that will mean so much this winter and next spring and for years to come.

THERE ARE NO RESTRICTIONS on concrete. Cost of cement has not changed Our products remain at the same low prices that they have sold at for the past 10 years.

Higher returns for farm products make cement work more reasonable than ever, and this is the most favorable time to dot it.

OUR CONCRETE BLOCKS are the best building unit that money can buy and the LOWEST IN COST.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

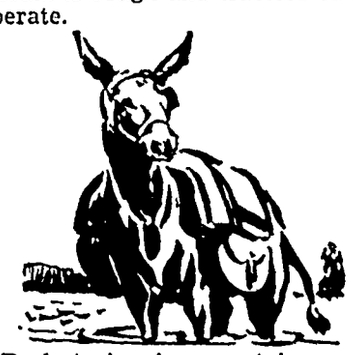
Tractors and motors will never wholly replace the Army Mule as a factor in the mobile units of our army. The Army Mule is a tradition and the "mule skinner" is a breed unto himself. Army Mules are used by the Field Artillery and the Cavalry in areas where the terrain is rough and tractors cannot operate.



Pack trains in mountainous sectors are often necessary and here the mule, slow but sure-footed, plays an important role. Our Army buys thousands of mules paying from $175 to $190 for each. The mule eats less, carries more, and some declare is smarter than the horse. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps helps pay for these Army Mules. Invest at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay day. U. S. Treasury Department

Madagascar's Capture

By Gordon Gaskill

I was the first American correspondent to reach Madagascar after its capture, having traveled from Cairo 7,000 miles in seven days by plane, train and warship. I was especially eager to be there, because for two years Madagascar had been a gigantic question mark. There had been whispered rumors of alarming things like Axis raiders using bases there, strong new armaments, a Japanese military mission. I wanted to find out which was truth and which was myth.

Now I've talked to attacking British and defending French, to civilians, natives and imprisoned De-Gaullists. And now I can tell you what's been happening on the fourth greatest island in the world.

Although the rumored Japanese military mission never materialized, plenty of evidence was turned up to show that the Japanese were, in fact, the one great peril to the island. Just after the British took possession, a native chief reported the presence of a pair of Japs. They were tracked down and cornered, resisted capture, and were killed. Papers on the bodies showed that both were officers of the Japanese navy.

Japanese Attack.

Three days later came even better proof that the island was within reach of the enemy, when a Japanese submarine entered the harbor of Diego-Suarez—which is, incidentally, one of the finest in the world—and attacked British warships there.

In the harbor the British found two Italian ships and one German vessel. But they were unarmed merchantmen who had fled there from Mogadiscio when the British took Italian Somaliland more than a year ago.

The Germans had given the French no trouble. They came ashore only to buy provisions, and were always "very correct." The Italians weren't so wise. They had been strutting about like conquerors, for had not their mighty Duce defeated France almost singlehanded? This proved a diplomatic error. A group of French sailors looked at one another, spat on their hands, and went into action, each choosing his man. When the fight finished, five Italians were in the hospital, where one died.

When the British attacked, both the Germans and Italians offered to help the defenders, but the French coolly refused. In accepted Axis fashion, the Italians promptly scuttled both their ships. The Germans tried to, but their ship was in dry dock and sank only a few feet. To finish her off, the Germans put three time bombs inside, but the British arrived too quickly and sent the crew back aboard. The perspiring Germans hastily got rid of the bombs

The British attack was a complete surprise. On the eve of the assault, when the British fleet was closing in almost within eyesight, the unsuspecting French watched a football game between a submarine crew and a sporting club.

The action was one of the best planned and best executed of the entire war. The British came in by the back door—a series of beaches and bays across an island 20 miles away. One such bay was covered by large French guns whose crews had received written orders saying "No night time firing, because it is impossible for anyone to enter the bay in the dark."

Shoals, reefs and mine fields guarded the bay, yet the British used such superb navigation, and swept the mines so silently, that when dawn broke, the ships lay in the bay, with most of their forces already ashore

A body of Commandos crept up to the great coastal guns and captured them without firing a shot.

Also at dawn, British planes dropped pamphlets on a French airdrome ordering the French to mass in the center of the field if they wished to surrender. A Scottish colonel led a bayonet charge, armed only with a walking stick. While the French were occupied with the back-door attack, a single destroyer made a daring dash into the front door and landed marines on the town wharf. This diversion hastened the French collapse.

The French fought stubbornly, but they were hopelessly outnumbered in men and material, and it was all over within a hundred hours. The defenders received generous treatment and all the honors of war.

Fully armed and with flags flying, they marched past the British commanders and stacked their arms.

The British occupation proceeded smoothly. Most French officers were quickly released on parole, which none violated. British officers attended a High Mass for the French dead, and the next day the French attended a similar British service.

PRIVATE PURKEY INTERVIEWS A 'WAVE'

(Home on a short furlough, Oscar, unknown to Harriet, who is in the WAACs, saw his girl-friend Minerva, who has signed up in the women's naval auxiliary.)

Oscar—So you're a WAVE! What's the idea?

Minerva—I didn't want to be just a ripple or a backwash, like your friend Harriet.

Oscar—I heard you joined the navy to get smarter uniforms than they have in the women's army. The WAVEs can profit by mistakes made by the WAACs.

Minerva—Do you think this war is a style show?

Oscar—You make me wonder.

Oscar—Can you splice a rope?

Minerva—What do you think I'm ioining, a rodeo?

Oscar—Can you box a compass?

Minerva—No, but I can wrap up a clock.

Oscar—Did you ever port your helm?

Minerva—No profanity please!

Oscar—Did you ever stow a skiff?

Minerva—Stop lisping!

Oscar—I'm serious, Min. What is a starboard tack?

Minerva— You've got me there; I'm no carpenter.

Oscar—Gee, Min, you're awful ignorant.

Minerva — Otherwise why would I be standing here talking to you?

Oscar—Say, lissen, why are you girls going to train for the navy at Smith college away up in Northampton?

Minerva—Because we thought it would sound funny to train sailors at Vassar.

Oscar—I see your uniforms are to be by Mainbocher of Paris.

Minerva—Isn't that wonderful?

Oscar—It's better than by Mike Todd of Star and Garter. What will the regular navy think of that after all these years in the original John Paul Jones sailor suits?

Minerva—A woman sailor is expected to look better than a man.

Oscar—What difference does it make when she falls overboard?

Minerva—Lissen, is this a date or a quiz program?

Oscar— Okay, admiral. I'll stow the question.

Minerva—Thanks, Colonel!

'BALLADE ON FEASTS AND FORAGINGS'

When gourmets to the board propel
Their paunchy selves for tasty fare,
Most nostrils quiver at the smell
Of food that master chefs prepare;
But if you wish that you were there,
Hold on—Lucullan tables lack
The virtues found when you prepare
The pleasures of a midnight snack.

At witching hour, when all is well,
A hungry man steals down the stair
Into the cook's own citadel,
To gather morsels extra rare
And strip unguarded cupboards bare;
Then to the bedroom creeping back,
Thus adding to adventure's flair
The pleasures of a midnight snack.

Prince, would you forget your thinning hair,
Your troubles state and cardiac?
Then try, for liberty from care,
The pleasures of a midnight snack.

JUDAH: AN EXAMPLE OF SELF-SACRIFICE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44 18-34.

GOLDEN TEXT—Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.—I John 3 16.

The family is still the fundamental unit of society, and is therefore of more importance than the church, the state, or the social order of which it is a vital part. Every force which encourages the breakdown of the sacred relationships of the home and family is set for the destruction of society itself.

Men have too often chosen to go the way of the flesh, and therefore they have disregarded God's plan and purpose. But marriage is just as sacred as ever in His sight; the home is to be kept for Him, and brotherly love still finds a high place among the virtues of real men.

Today's lesson is a continuation of the story of Joseph's life. As we study it we must bear in mind Joseph's dealings with his brethren, who as yet did not recognize him as the one they had sold into captivity. He was bringing them kindly but definitely to the point of real repentance, so that he could show himself gracious to them.

To do so he had brought disaster upon them. Being happily on their way homeward with a new supply of food, they were overtaken and proved to be thieves, and Benjamin, the beloved of their father Jacob, stood condemned by their own words, to death.

In that crisis the mouths of the others seemed closed, but Judah, who had really saved Joseph's life (Gen 37 26, 27) and who had apparently come to himself as a man of essential goodness, pleaded for Benjamin's life. That plea presented a truly sacrificial brotherly love, as he manifested

I. Courage (v. 18).

Easy rests the yoke of family life as long as all is joyful and prosperous. But when adversity strikes, when sorrow comes, or sickness, or sin, then the true test of devotion is at hand.

It was a brave and manly thing for Judah to stand before the one whom he knew only as the man who was "even as Pharaoh." The circumstances were all against him. He expected the flaming anger of the offended ruler. His brethren had collapsed in despair. It was one of those dark hours which come to every family when someone must demonstrate true love by being strong-hearted and steady.

II. Intelligence (vv. 19-29).

Crises call for more than a cheerful smile or an encouraging word, much as they may mean in such an hour. We must be prepared by our close contact with our loved ones to speak and act with vigor and assurance.

Judah's plea is a masterpiece of argumentation and appeal, demonstrating that he was not only well-informed about his family and its problems, but ready to use his knowledge skillfully and effectively.

III. Self-Denial (vv. 30-33).

One step deeper goes the devotion of this man to his father and his brother. He had done no wrong that merited punishment, but evidently his brother Benjamin had been guilty. Had he been of the spirit of Cain he would have said, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and let him answer for himself. Why should Judah suffer for another? Why should he allow himself to be imprisoned in a strange land to save his father from sorrow and his brother from what seemed to be the just reward for his deeds?

Thus reasons the man of the world, but such is not the language of the true brother, who says, "Let thy servant abide instead of the lad as a bondman."

IV. Love (v. 34).

Love for father and brother underlies all of the courage, conviction and self-sacrifice of a man like Judah. In his younger years, and possibly under the influence of his brothers, he had failed in that respect, but now his real devotion to his brother was evident.

That affection was a real, powerful, and beautiful thing, and yet it is but a faint prefiguring of the affection of the One who "sticketh closer than a brother," who "though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich" (Prov. 18: 24; II Cor. 8:9).

Let us improve the opportunity to review our relations with our own family, to determine whether there is aught that we in intelligent and courageous self-sacrifice should do for our own.

Porter Knew Where To Get Quicker Service

The young lovers were trying to find some quiet, secluded spot for a long embrace. But everywhere they went there were people, people, people. And the girl was shy.

Suddenly the man had a bright idea. Triumphantly he led her to the railway station and, standing beside the door of a railway carriage as though seeing her off, kissed her fondly.

After the couple had repeated the experiment at four or five different platforms, a sympathetic porter strolled up and whispered to the young man:

"Take 'er rahnd to the bus stop, mate. They goes ev'ry three minutes from there."

NEW EFFECTIVE HAY FEVER RELIEF

Hay fever, which annually causes more sneezes, more inflamed noses and more red, streaming eyes than any other scourge, may have its final big fling this September, all because a Pennsylvania electrical engineer was served a dish of corn meal mush which was entirely too salty.

The engineer, sneezing, and with all other hay fever manifestations, stopped at a hotel where he was served a dish of mush which he considered sending back as it was much too salty. Finally he ate it, however; the hay fever attack lessened, ultimately ceased. Next day he had three meals, all oversalted, and experienced his most comfortable time in years in the "hay fever season."

His analytical mind quickly grasped the possibility that the saline substance in his food was responsible for his relief.

About this time, Dr. E. E. Selleck, a graduate of Columbia University, met the engineer, made notes, and when he returned to his home, began experiments. Today Dr. Selleck declares he has found a certain means of relief for hay fever and is supported in his contention by other medical experts, and a nationally known chemical manufacturing concern, the Hollings-Smith Company, at Orangeburg, New York, has taken over making the remedy, which is called Nakamo Bell.

Describing the experiments, Dr. Selleck said, "After I was sure I had found a means of quickly relieving hay fever through the chloride group, I tested it in the most practical way I knew. I held a three day clinic, to which many hay fever sufferers responded, from ages ranging from 10 to 60 years. Each person was given two tablets with a little water. Some relief came to all within ten minutes. Reports on these cases during the ensuing weeks showed practically a complete cessation of symptoms."

Rice?

No, Thank You, Mr. Hirohito!

NOT as a steady diet. You've done pretty well on rice, but can you keep on doing it? What about Midway and the Coral Sea? Ever hear of Doolittle? MacArthur? Chennault?

What about the Solomon Islands? You can't get around it—those U. S. boys are better, man for man. And they're not sun-worshippers, either—just plain free men, well-fed and fighting mad. Sure it takes a lot of food to keep them going, but we've got what you haven't got, Hirohito . . . an army of free women fighting the home front because they know the need to fight! Not with guns. Not everyone can make shells or build airplanes. It takes an American woman just half of a split second to see where she fits in; the empty shelves at the grocery were enough of a hint for her. 50% more home-canning is our goal, and it's just like making bombs for Tokyo. No one in America will ever live on rice. We'll have fruits and fruit juices, vegetables and meats—home-canned for a few cents a jar.

Can you beat it, Mr. Hirohito? A war won—by women?

HUNT SAFELY THIS YEAR

The Right And Wrong Ways Of Carrying Firearms In The Field

Iowans are assured of the best hunting year for a long time The rabbit and squirrel seasons are now open The upland game bird and duck season opens shortly Some 200,000 licensed shooters will take to the fields to enjoy the sport and excitement of the chase in 1942. Because of their own or someone else's carelessness, some of these hunters will be killed, and some will be crippled This statement is a cold-blooded fact, and everyone who hunts must use extreme care that he is not one of the actors in an outdoor tragedy. The most important principle of safe gun handling is "Always point the firearm so that, in case of accidental discharge, there is no danger of injury to anyone"

In the interest of making and keeping shooting a safe sport, the Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturer's Institute has published the following . .

TEN COMMANDMENTS OF SAFETY

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun. This is the cardinal rule of gun safety.
2. Carry only empty guns, taken down or encased, into your automobile, camp or home.
3. Always be sure that the barrel and action are clear of obstruction
4. Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle even if you stumble.
5. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger.
6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot.
7. Never leave your gun unattended unless you unload it first.
8. Never climb a tree or a fence with a loaded gun.
9. Never shoot at a flat, hard surface or the surface of water.
10. Do not mix gunpowder and alcohol.

American Housewife's Part in The War Is an Important One

Keeping Her Family Well In Wartime Is Her Special Task.

By JANET CUPLER
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

One of Uncle Sam's best soldiers is the American housewife. Her uniform is a kitchen apron, her ammunition a bright smile and the capable hands with which she does the proverbial million and one things that make hers a 64-hour, seven-day week.

She is usually content with the only reward she really wants—the love and gratitude of a happy, healthy family. But once in a while you hear her say, "I feel so guilty. I'm not doing anything to help win the war. Of course I keep house and save scrap and buy war bonds, but I'd like to feel that I'm doing something definite, like joining the WACCs or working in a defense factory."

We can't all join the WAACs. And we can't all work in defense factories. But we can do an important job right in our own homes. The war will finally be won only with the help of the American housewife, and the better job she does, the sooner she will be able to rejoice in the victory she helped to win.

When government reports recently showed that only about one-third of the families in the United States have diets that are adequate to maintain health, it became apparent that one of the important factors in winning the war would be proper nutrition (the right food as well as the right amount of it), for, although our soldiers are the best fed in the world, the men and women who keep them equipped, those employed in our war industries, are sometimes very badly fed indeed. A survey conducted among employees of one large aircraft company revealed that about half showed definite signs of vitamin deficiency. Healthy workers are good workers, and it is up to the American housewife to see that the members of her family are properly fed.

Women in rural communities, faced with a shortage of farm labor, are learning to care for poultry and livestock. Rural health programs include the study of nutrition.

WHAT TO BUY

Proper nutrition begins with the food you buy. Although there is much to be learned about those mysterious substances called vitamins, the fact is that we need them, as well as minerals, fats, proteins and carbohydrates. A balanced diet must include them all. The amount of food each person requires depends largely upon how active he is. One who sits all day will, of course, require proportionately less food, particularly of the muscle and tissue building and energy producing types, than one who is doing hard physical labor.

Each normal person, however, needs — every day — some milk; whole grain or "enriched" bread or cereal; green or yellow vegetables; oranges, or other citrus fruit, or tomatoes; meat, fish, or poultry; eggs (at least three or four a week); butter or other fats rich in vitamins; and a limited amount of sweets. These foods can always be supplemented with additional vegetables and fruits. Experts also recommend that peas, dried beans, nuts and peanut butter be included from time to time.

Under normal circumstances it is best to use all fresh foods, especially vegetables, as soon as possible. Long exposure to the air deprives them of some of their value. But today, with gas rationed in many parts of the country and with the housewife eager to do her part by saving her tires, she may find it necessary to do her marketing only once or twice a week.

Don't spurn the lowly peanut! On the way to your table by way of the peanut butter jar, these peanuts are rich in food value. Experts recommend that peanut butter be included regularly in your diet.

HOW TO KEEP IT

Then proper refrigeration becomes more important than ever. But putting foods in the right place in the refrigerator is just as important as keeping them there at all. They must be kept cold, but not too cold. And they must have the proper amount of humidity, neither too much nor too little.

Frozen foods need extreme cold with no humidity. Vegetables and greens need mild cold with lots of humidity. Milk, butter, staples and prepared dishes other than frozen ones need only mild cold. Meat requires a slightly lower temperature than vegetables, and more humidity.

In general, 40 degrees is considered a safe temperature for most foods. At that temperature the growth of bacteria is usually retarded. Cold air travels downward, so the coldest places in your refrigerator will be the freezing chamber and the spot directly under it. Put frozen foods in the freezing chamber, meat and fish directly under it. Milk and cream and other beverages to be chilled should be placed on the shelf next to the freezing chamber.

Staples, butter and left-overs will keep satisfactorily in the middle section, as they require moderate cold but no special care. Vegetables, too, and most fruits can be kept there, but they require more humidity. Some refrigerators have special compartments for them, but if yours does not, one of the vegetable bags or a covered dish will do.

Canned foods that will not be used right away, salad dressing and pickles need not, and bananas must not, be put in the refrigerator. On the other hand, bread, coffee, shelled nuts and chocolate keep better there.

SPARE THAT VITAMIN

Even when she buys the proper foods and plans her meals to include them, the housewife's job has only begun. Vitamins are perishable. Minerals can be washed away. By improper preparation and cooking she can lose much of the value for which she so carefully paid at the market.

Here are some suggestions that will help you get the most from the food you buy:

Don't keep vegetables long at room temperature. Wash them and put them in the refrigerator.

Pare potatoes as thinly as possible. Scrub carrots with a brush instead of scraping them.

Don't shell peas until you are ready to cook them.

Don't soak vegetables in water for any length of time.

Cut carrots and other long vegetables lengthwise.

Cook frozen vegetables without thawing first. Some vitamin content is lost in thawing.

Don't handle vegetables any more than necessary.

Don't squeeze oranges until you are ready to use the juice.

Don't chop salad vegetables and greens until you are ready to use them.

Then add the dressing immediately after chopping them. The dressing acts as a protective covering and helps to prevent the destruction of valuable vitamins by exposure to the air.

Don't handle vegetables any more than necessary.

Don't use soda in cooking green vegetables. That lovely, vivid green color it gives them is a danger signal.

HOW TO COOK IT

Last year, impressed with the importance of proper cooking, Home Economics Institute of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company sponsored a program of research conducted by scientists to determine the exact amount of vitamins lost in improper cooking. Four typical vegetables were chosen—potatoes, carrots, fresh peas and broccoli—and the results of the tests demonstrated conclusively that water, heat and air, used improperly, can destroy as much as 33.7 per cent of the precious vitamins.

Water, heat and air are essential to cooking, and some vitamin content will be lost in all cooking, but the following procedure helps to reduce this loss to a minimum:

USE LITTLE OR NO WATER. Steaming is preferable to boiling, so use just enough water to produce steam. Wash leafy vegetables thoroughly just before cooking. The amount of moisture that clings to the leaves will be sufficient to produce steam.

START FAST, COOK QUICKLY. When the boiling point is reached, turn your fire down and let the vegetables simmer. Continuous boiling is destructive. Be sure the heat is evenly distributed. For this purpose a flat bottomed pan with straight sides is best.

COOK IN COVERED UTENSILS. The cover keeps the steam in, the air out. Be sure the cover fits tightly.

DON'T STIR. Again, this lets in additional air. If the heat is evenly distributed, stirring is unnecessary.

SAVE SCRAP

When you save scrap, kitchen grease, tin cans or paper, you are really helping to clothe our soldiers and send fighter planes to bomb the enemy. The grease you save is processed to secure glycerine, which is then used in the manufacture of TNT for shells. Waste paper can be used for shell containers; 25 pounds makes eight shell containers. One hand iron contains enough metal for two helmets. Fifty feet of garden hose will make four raincoats. Thirty-two toothpaste tubes contain the tin needed for a fighter plane.

Women all over the country are taking courses in nutrition, first aid and home nursing to fit them for the important task of keeping their families healthy. These women, part of a class of 20, are taking an examination in nutrition.

Are YOU a Good Housekeeper? Try This Test . . .

If you can answer "yes" to all these questions, you probably are. If you answer "no" to any of them, better make a note of it. Because it's patriotic to be careful of your household appliances. You may not be able to replace them for the duration . . .

DO YOU remember never to pour grease into the kitchen sink?

DO YOU always repair rips and tears in upholstery immediately?

DO YOU brush the crumbs out of your toaster before putting it away?

DO YOU remove stains from all clothes and linens before putting them in your washer?

DO YOU wipe the inside of your refrigerator every week with warm water and soda?

DO YOU have worn out washers replaced if your faucets drip?

DO YOU keep the bottom of your iron clean?

DO YOU empty the dust bag of your vacuum cleaner after each use?

DO YOU always remember to disconnect electric appliances carefully, without yanking on the cord?

DO YOU drain all the water from your washing machine after each use and remove all soap curds and lint?

DO YOU remove food spilled on your stove burners?

'INSIDE' ON ALEUTIANS

The inside story can now be told of why the Japs were able to land in the Aleutian islands and bomb the U. S. naval base at Dutch Harbor with so little opposition. As with most things in this war, the problem goes back to lack of foresight, and also, to some extent, lack of army-navy co-operation.

Not generally known is the fact that the navy in September, 1941, some two months before Pearl Harbor, refused to let the army build an air base on Umnak island to guard the navy's Dutch Harbor base.

What happened was that Senator Brewster of Maine, a member of the Truman committee and of the naval affairs committee, flew to Alaska last September with Brig. Gen. Arthur Wilson to ascertain whether Alaska needed further fortifications. At Kodiak they met Brig. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, commander of the army's forces, whose father, a famous Civil war commander, once helped to pay Ulysses S. Grant's way home from West Point and later surrendered to Grant in Tennessee.

General Buckner wanted to go on from Kodiak to Dutch Harbor with Senator Brewster, and although the navy was willing to supply an amphibian plane to the senator, they balked at having General Buckner go along, referred to him as a "hitch-hiker."

Finally, however, the party, including General Buckner, went on to Dutch Harbor and located an excellent site for a flying field on Umnak island Immediately upon their return, Senator Brewster arranged for a senate appropriation to build an air base at Umnak, while the war department prepared to proceed.

Navy Says No.

The war department also notified the navy of its move, since the army is charged with protecting the shore establishments of the navy. A few weeks later, however, word came back from the navy that it did not want the army to build an air base on Umnak island to protect Dutch Harbor.

When senators asked Vice Admiral Frederick J. Horne why, he replied: "The navy can protect Dutch Harbor."

This was in late September. Two months later, after Pearl Harbor, the navy frantically demanded an air base to protect Dutch Harbor, but it had to be started during the snow and ice of an Alaskan winter. Therefore the date of completion was July, 1942.

Probably the Japs knew this date. They have had fishing vessels cruising through the Aleutians off and on for some time. At any rate it was the first week in June, one month before the Umnak air base was finished, that the Japs struck.

And when they bombed Dutch Harbor, the navy's flying patrol boats there were helpless. Heavy and slow, they lacked protection from the army's fast pursuit planes, so speedy Jap Zero fighters made mincemeat of them.

Lack of a nearby army air base from which fighters and bombers could protect the rest of the Aleutians undoubtedly contributed also to the ease with which the Japs took Kiska harbor and the western Aleutians.

PERSISTENT LEON

The army doesn't seem to think that hard-hitting Leon Henderson, price-fixing boss of the OPA, is lethargic about wanting to put price ceilings on tanks, guns, trucks and other army material for which it is now paying top prices.

In a knock-down, drag-out session in the office of mild-mannered Undersecretary of War Patterson, Henderson banged on the table, told Patterson the army was paying too much, that he demanded the power to put price ceilings on army supplies.

"I'm going to keep after you on this till I get it," Henderson stormed. "When I was younger and I was courting a girl, I kept after her until I got her. And that's what's going to happen now."

¶ Frank Grillo, president of the United Rubber Workers, is one man who doesn't believe that labor leaders at home are more necessary than fighters at the front. He has resigned from the Rubber Workers and asked for his old job back in the army—not a cellophane commission (you can see through it but it protects from the draft). He wants to be a sergeant.

¶ The navy has wisely drafted some of J. Edgar Hoover's FBI sleuths to help train naval intelligence officers. They are doing a bang-up job.

¶ The Truman committee has persuaded the army to lend it Brig. Gen. Frank Lowe, a Maine Republican, as its executive officer.

We Must Plunge:

Our leaders have told us that as yet we are only ankle-deep in the war. No nation and no man can remain ankle-deep. They either plunge or get cold feet. This means that the sacrifice of civilians must match the bravery of our fighting forces.

A nation lives by the higher values of its soul. Not by the lower prices on its store counters. In 1942, sugar is a luxury and gasoline a comfort. But liberty and freedom are still American necessities. A cuff on your American trousers isn't worth a Japanese cuff on your American jaw.

Our problem at home is not our standard of living. Too many brave Americans have already set us a heroic standard by dying.

The Marines who land on Pacific beaches are in this war deeper than their ankles. And the skies above the channel cannot be protected by price ceilings. The men of Bataan divided their food, not profits. And there was no night-shift to relieve the defenders of Wake.

It will cost most of our wealth to win this war. But all our riches to lose it. We must give most of our privileges or lose all of our rights. Captain Colin Kelly made his choice. He went into this war not up to his ankes, but up to his heart. Because he knew what it meant to buy peace on his knees.

Notes of a New Yorker:

John Mason Brown, the dramatic critic, who went under the surgeon's blade to put himself in condition for a naval commission, will prove to be worthy of the navy . . . The navy need have no fears about his presence of mind, either . . . Once when Brown was delivering a lecture in New Orleans—he strolled up and down the rostrum, making gestures as he lectured . . . He strolled so far he walked off the platform—dumping himself into some laps . . . Returning to the platform calmly, albeit a bit bruised, he continued with: "To pick up the subject where we dropped it . . ."

Sallies in Our Alley: Gilbert Gabriel, the former dramatic critic, is now an officer in the army—somewhere in Alaska . . . Before being commissioned some intimates were requested to give the War Dep't the lowdown on Gil's character, fitness and so forth . . . "How are his morals?" was one query . . . "He is so moral," replied a chum, "he should be sent there as a missionary!" . . . One of the Broadway sportsmen was saying that the weather at Saratoga was never important to a gambler "because you can sleep like a top when you're winning" . . . "And," said a veteran, "when you're losing—you spin like one" . . . David O. Selznick asked Sam Goldwyn: "Why do you hire so many writers for one picture?" . . . "Because," said Sam, "from each writer I get a germ."

Zeppo Marx of the famed 4 Marx-men was the "kid brother" who was ordered into the act by their mother . . . Zeppo was too young to be trusted with valuable pieces of stage business or punch-lines—and so he merely tagged along, making faces or joining in the chorus . . . Of course, he was paid well . . . While Harpo, Chico and Groucho squandered their coin on their families, fun or at dice games—Zeppo kept salting his away . . . Eventually, he wearied of hamming it and suddenly popped up as a Hollywood agent — buying into a prospering agency . . . Later he opened his own and represented many movie stars . . . He's rich today . . . His brothers aren't . . . In his spare time Zeppo fussed with mechanical things at home—while the brothers made whoopee—and now and then he was laughed at for wasting his time at his "experiments" . . . So what? . . . Zeppo now owns a West coast defense plant!

Man About Town:

The Star-Spangled: Bing Crosby, rumored Washington-bound to enlist in the army, isn't eligible. He went there for orders on the Great Bond Drive . . . Ty Power, who will train for the gliders, proudly wearing the emblem of the marines as a boutonniere . . . Darryl Zanuck, who quit his 20th Century-Fox job (at $5,000 per week) considerably relieved. "I felt," he said, "that I was merely another actor—playing a part" . . . Hazel Scott, who clicked so big in Hollywood, getting a $1,000 bonus from MGM for her fortnight's work . . . Lieut. Burgess Meredith, Wm. Saroyan and G. O. Welles in the 1-2-3—dame hunters . . . Myrna Loy —The Myrna Lisa.

Sounds-in-the-Night: At Reuben's: "Horace Greeley said: 'Go West, Young Man!' and what did he do? He stayed in New York and got rich!" . . . At Mother Kelly's: "On Broadway they keep telling you to keep punching—hoping you'll knock yourself out" . . . At the Park Central Cocoanut Grove: "He was once caught in a truth" . . . At the Aquarium: "She was so lovesick she took the first pill that came along" . . . At Toots Shor's: "One of these days a check is gonna reach out and grab him!"

Heap High the Cookie Jar!
(See Recipes Below)

That Sweet Tooth

"Mom, may we have some cookies, please?"

That question asked in a childish voice with real pleading is going to be as daily as the sunrise and sunset these days as your younger members of the family feel the snap of fall in the air. School days with their demand on youthful energies will perk up summer's lagging appetite too!

Very few of you can say "no" to a request for cookies. Far from spoiling the appetite for dinner, a cookie or two with a glass of milk will help the child get gracefully through the late afternoon hours until dinner time.

Keeping the cookie jar full may have been your major problem in former years. This year it will be that plus making cookies with a ration of sugar. But you'll do it, I know, and these recipes will help you:

Oatmeal Crispies.
(Makes 4 dozen)

1 cup shortening
½ cup sugar
1 cup dark corn syrup
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup sour milk
2½ cups sifted flour
¾ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 cups oatmeal
2 cups raisins

Cream sugar and shortening. Add corn syrup. Blend. Add beaten eggs. Sift together dry ingredients. Add alternately with sour milk. Stir in oatmeal and raisins. Drop by spoonfuls on an oiled baking sheet. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 15 minutes.

Ginger Snaps.

1 cup molasses
3¼ cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup butter
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon soda
1½ tablespoons ginger

Heat molasses to boiling point and pour over fat. Add sifted dry ingredients to molasses and fat. Mix well and shape dough into a long, thin roll. Wrap in waxed paper and place in refrigerator to chill overnight.

Cut into thin slices with sharp knife and bake in a moderate oven until lightly browned. Remove from pan while hot and store in tightly covered container to keep crisp.

That son of yours may be grown-up now and in the service, but my guess is that some of those good, homemade cookies of yours will be mighty welcome to him at camp:

Honey Fruit Bars.
(Makes 3 dozen)

2 eggs
½ cup honey
½ cup sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ pound pitted dates, sliced
6 ounces mixed, candied fruits

Beat eggs and honey to blend. Add sifted dry ingredients and fruits and mix well. Turn into a greased, waxpaper lined pan. Bake in a moderate-to-slow (325-degree) oven for 45 minutes. Remove paper. Cool and cut into bars. Roll in powdered sugar if desired. Store in covered jar for several days to mellow.

Chocolate Chip Cookies.
(Makes 3½ dozen)

⅓ cup butter
½ cup honey
1 small egg
1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup semi-sweet chocolate chips
¼ cup nutmeats
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter and honey until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Sift dry ingredients twice, and add to butter mixture. Add vanilla and blend well. Fold in chocolate chips and nuts. Chill, then drop by spoonfuls on a greased cooky sheet. Bake at 375 degrees for 12 minutes.

Can you spare a cup and a quarter of sugar? I think you can if you know that you will spread that sugar over eight dozen cookies as in the following:

Vanilla Nut Ice Box Cookies.
(Makes 8 dozen cookies)

2 cups sifted cake flour
1½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons butter or shortening
¼ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1 cup granulated sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup chopped nuts
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt. Sift again. Cream butter and sugars gradually, creaming thoroughly. Add egg, nuts, vanilla and mix well. Add flour gradually, mixing well after each addition. Shape into rolls, 1½ inches in diameter and roll in waxed paper. Chill overnight or until firm enough to slice. Cut in ⅛-inch slices. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in a hot oven (425 degrees) 5 minutes or until light, golden brown.

A fruity, unusual pie is this one combining prunes and bananas with cornflakes and coconut. A sugar-saver, too:

American Prune Pie.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups cooked prunes
1½ cups whipping cream
½ cup honey
1 cup sliced bananas
Few grains salt
2 cups uncrushed corn flakes
½ cup shredded coconut
Baked pastry shell (9-inch)

Cut prunes from pits in small pieces. Whip cream. Measure one cup and blend with honey Add fruit and salt and stir to blend. Add cornflakes and blend lightly but thoroughly. Pour into baked pie shell and sprinkle with coconut. Top with remaining cream and serve soon after preparation.

Preserving Food: Eat and can whatever you can from your Victory garden. But you still may have some left, you say?

There are several methods to take care of the surplus. First, investigate to see whether your community has one of those storage lockers where you can rent space in the freezing locker. Cleanliness and speed are important factors in this type of storage Food must be well selected to warrant the expense of this type of preserving.

Drying at home is another excellent way and one of the oldest methods available. Driers can be bought for a reasonable sum and used to advantage for drying and storing fruits and vegetables.

Other foods such as root vegetables, pumpkins and squash have good keeping qualities if stored in their natural state under well regulated temperatures such as in attic or cellar. Dried beans, peas and cured onions may be stored in an attic. Squash and pumpkins require a relatively warm place with free circulation of air.

CASE 6223: Benedict Arnold. Subjected this man to exhaustive tests. He met them all with pose and patience. Very intelligent. Has remarkable self-confidence. Expresses self lucidly and seems well informed on everything. Is somewhat vain, a bit impetuous and rather fond of money and position, but on the whole a charming, highly intelligent person.

Conclusion: This man is clearly of exceptional character. We would not hesitate to trust him anywhere.

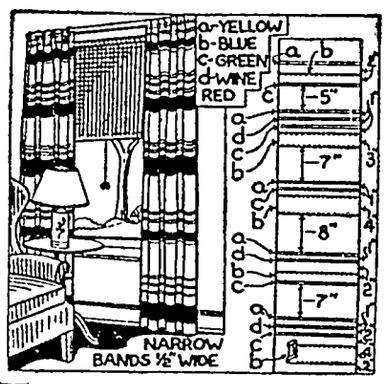
ON THE HOME FRONT

With RUTH WYETH SPEARS



THESE curtains were made of the long pieces of good material from each side of a pair of sheets that were worn in the center. They were dyed a soft cream; then wide strips of gingham and narrow ones of prepared bias trimming were stitched in place to make stripes. The chart shows the colors used and also gives the widths and spacing of stripes. In case you should want to use short lengths of goods for the foundation part, stitch these together with seams on the right side; then place contrasting strips over joinings. Colors used should repeat the colors in rugs, pictures, books or bric-a-brac.

Every man is born with the faculty of reason and the faculty of speech, but why should he be able to speak before he has anything to say?—Benjamin Whichcote.

Famous Signs

A few years ago on Broadway, New York, several large electric signs won distinction in unusual ways. One became famous because a king purchased a replica for his palace in the Orient, another because it regularly received fan mail from its countless admirers and another because it virtually stopped traffic each night at a certain hour while a number of living chorus girls "danced" up and down on its face to the music of their orchestra.—Collier's.

Talkin' to a fellow the other day, I couldn't help thinkin' that lots of folks claim they have an open mind when the fact o' the matter is it's only vacant.

Which reminds me that if you really think straight about vitamins, you'll see why I keep tellin' folks about KELLOGG'S PEP. An' that's because this swell cereal is extra-rich in the two vitamins most often short in ordinary meals —B_1 and D And believe me, PEP is a mighty slick-tasting cereal. Why don't you try it tomorrow?

Kellogg's Pep

A delicious cereal that supplies per serving (1 oz.): the full minimum daily need of vitamin D; 1/4 the daily need of vitamin B_1.

Kinds of Knowledge

Knowledge is of two kinds. We know a subject ourselves, or we know where we can find information upon it.—Samuel Johnson.

Potatoes?

A nourishing food, Mr. Hitler!

WE HAVE potatoes in America. We also have fruits, meats and green and yellow vegetables. For every crop you harvest with forced labor, we have a larger crop grown by men who work hard from dawn until dark because it's their land, their country. You've never met an American farmer—or his wife—have you, Mr. Hitler? Too bad. Otherwise you might have thought twice before you started this war.

Our cellars are used to store foods, not as bomb shelters. But our boys know the meaning of bombs. How did you like that first air raid, with not a single U. S. plane lost? Those boys didn't live on potatoes—they had meat, milk, fruits, vegetables . . . all the things we have at home. American food follows them to the corners of the earth.

How can we do it? American women are doing it—home-canning for the home front and saving money for War Bonds at the same time! Do you know how much of it they're doing? Well . . . what would you give for FOUR BILLION JARS of home-canned foods, Mr. Hitler?

BALL BROTHERS COMPANY
MUNCIE, INDIANA, U. S. A.

Can Successfully! Put some of those 4 billion jars on your shelves; they represent a dependable, low cost food supply for your family. But be sure your home-canned foods keep. Fill in the coupon on the printed leaflet from a carton of BALL Jars and mail it to us for a free copy of the BALL BLUE BOOK—complete canning instructions and more than 300 tested recipes. Ink Spots And Spatters

TEN REASONS

Warren Nelson publisher of the Enterprise at Thornton is one of those fellows who likes to fish, so it was quite natural that the following poem appeared in his good paper last week

Here are ten good reasons why fish don't bite—
The air's too cool or the sun's too bright
The lure's too shallow or the water's too deep
Your tackle's too costly or too darn cheap
If you get a nibble ad you want some more—
You're told to row to the other shore.
June's too early and August's too late
So fish are scarce on your dinner plate,
You try on days when it sprinkles rain,
And again you'll find you've fished in vain—
But in spite of all the why and the when and where,
You can bet your life we're going again!

TEN REASONS WHY I SWEAR

The following item is contributed to the Ink Spots by Postmaster John Day and we think it worthy of passing along Here 'tis:

1 It pleases Mother so much
2 It is a fine mark of manliness.
3. It proves I have self control.
4 It indicates how clearly my mind operates
5. It makes my conversation so pleasing to everybody.
6 It leaves no doubt in anyone's mind as to my good breeding
7 It impresses people that I have more than an ordinary education.
8 It is an unmistakable sign of culture and refinement.
9 It makes me a very desirable personality among women and children and in respectable society.
10 It is my way of honoring God, who said 'Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain'

AH, ME!

A permanent's so tedious —
Top afire, bottom numb . . .
Coat dryer, kin to Sahara,
Where you're alone, deaf and dumb

But little matter trivia,
So say any of us girls,
When you hear HIM whisper softly
How I love your silken curls!"
(From Marie's Beauty Shop)

JOHNNY GETS A BICYCLE

Little 12-year old Johnny became proud of his accomplishments on a trick bicycle rider so one day he decided to show off to his mother and as he blithely rode by the house with both hands above his head he proudly yelled to his dear mother at the window "Look, ma, no hands" The next time around he put his feet on the handle bars he called out "Look, ma, no feet" On the next trip around he grinned at his mother broadly and yelled: "Look, ma, no teeth!"

TWO MORONS YARN

Two morons were out in the yard at night playing with a flashlight.

1st Moron "I'll bet I could climb up that beam of light."

2nd Moron: "I'll bet you can't."

1st Moron "I know I could."

2nd Moron: "Well, go ahead"

1st Moron: "Well, I would, but I am afraid that when I got half way up, you would turn it off."

And then there's the other one about the Moron who ran into the house and hid behind the door so he could scare himself when he came in.

A NEEDED IMPROVEMENT

After every Saturday night crowd in Klemme the next morning Main street is littered with an assortment of paper bags, candy wrappers, paper cartons, etc. that are very unsightly, and quite unnecessary, if a place were provided where this rubbish could be placed and we would suggest a couple of waste paper receptacles placed at convenient places on the street.

Marshall Buseman usually has to put in a couple of extra hours on Monday mornings to clean up the debris. If it happens to be windy then the paper is blown all over town.

get all of the waste paper, but we

Waste paper receptacles may not think most people would throw the empty pop-corn sacks and candy wrappers into a receptacle if one were placed in a convenient location.

Let's help to keep Klemme clean and attractive.

STREET IMPROVEMENT

A couple of weeks ago this column wondered where the city dads got the money to grade a few outlying streets.

We knew we would get a "rise" on that and Councilman Priebe gave us the information. He said that the work was done by the county and that the town did not spend any money on the work.

That should clear up the matter quite satisfactorily.

BOYS, IT'S POOR SPORTSMANSHIP, TOO

It has been called to the attention of this column that a couple of boys were shooting squirrels in the south part of town the other day

We like to see boys have a good time and we like to have them enjoy nature, but shooting squirrels in town is poor sportsmanship, and it is also a violation of the law to shoot rifles or shotguns within the city limits.

Town squirrels are quite tame and people like to have them around their yards, so do not molest them. Neither should you shoot at song birds as they are protected by law.

Boys, we want you to hunt, but we also want you to know how to handle your gun with care, and if you want to shoot squirrels, go out to the timber where you can really test your skill. We guarantee you will feel much better if you can outwit and bag a timber squirrel. Try it. Any sissy can shoot a town squirrel.

Hamburg Boy Scouts were sent to obtain a horse-power hay baler from the Ray Lytle farm as part of the scrap metal campaign They found a piece of machinery on the spot they thought the baler was to be and started to dismantle it. After the work had been started, they discussed the matter more and came to the conclusion that this might not be a baler Boys sent to scout around, found another piece of machinery a short distance away, then they did not know which to do their work on They later discovered that what they started cut on was a binder that the tenant was saving for spare parts, and that the latter machine was the baler However, it all ended well, as Tom Brown, the owner of the binder, donated it to the cause

Most of your friends know though, that the cigarette that gets first call with Army men is Camel. And Camel is the favorite with men in all branches of the service — Navy, Marines, Coast Guard, too. Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good heath is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

JOSEPH: AN EXAMPLE OF FORGIVENESS

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 45:1-15; 47:11, 12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to an... tenderhearted, forgiving one another, ...s God for Christ's sake hath forgiven ...Ephesians 4 32.

...rgiveness, opening the way for ...estoration of fellowship and the ...ing of kindness, brought the sto... ... Joseph and his brethren to a ...y ending. Under the good hand ...od the story which began with ...dy is brought to a conclusion ...essing.

...llowing the earnest plea of Ju... the heart of Joseph could no ...r withhold itself from the full ...ession of affection and devotion ...s family.

...Love Overcomes Fear (vv. 1-4).

...seph tenderly shielded the fam... ...roubles from the eyes and ears ...trangers by sending out the ...otians. It was the first step of ...deration which paved the way ...reconciliation. How often just ...opposite is done—airing family ...rs before the world, and humili... ... those who may be in the ...g, thus making it difficult for ... to admit their guilt.

...en, too, this was a moment too ...r and delicate to be seen by ...ders. The tears of a strong man ...Joseph mean a deep movement ...pirit—a solemn and often a sa... moment.

...should also be noted that the ...hers were afraid, and well they ...t be, because of their sin ...nst Joseph. After almost 50 ...s these unrepentant men found ...nselves face to face with the ...whom they had supposed they ...disposed of, and they knew their ...had found them out. It always ..., sooner or later, but inevitably.

...ow great and noble was the for... ...g love of Joseph; an example ...s, especially appropriate and ...ed in a world of hate and bit... ...ess.

... Grace Overrules Sin (vv. 5-8).

...e guilt of these men was none ...less and Joseph could not re... ...e it, but he encouraged them by ...wing how God had used their ... devices to work out His own ...i pleasure. He can make the ...th of man to praise Him (Ps. ...0).

...is worth stressing again that in ...very hour when the prospects ... Joseph's future usefulness ...med ruined, God was opening the ... to the greatest experiences of ...life and was preparing him to ...e the thousands whose lives ...e saved by his wisdom and abil... ...n the years of famine.

...othing is more important in the ... of a child of God than to be ...ded to His will, unmoved by cir... ...stances, abiding His time, re... ...nding to His guidance whether it ...by the opening or closing of ...s, prosperity or adversity. And ...en is the marvel of it all—even ...may be overruled by God's grace ... His own glory. That does not ...ie anyone to sin that grace may ...und (Rom. 6:1, 2), but it does ... encouragement to the one ... has fallen, that God can re... ...m the years that the locust have ...en (Joel 2:25).

...ur lesson also sets us an exam... ... of how true forgiveness acts, ...ething we need. So often when ...iveness is asked or granted ...e is an "I can forgive but I ...'t forget" attitude, which means ... while hostilities have ceased, ...least temporarily, there is no real ...ndship or the disposition to show ...dness. Is there any real forgive... ...s at all in such an attitude of ...rt and mind? We fear not.

...II. Kindness Provides the Best ...9-15; 47:11, 12).

... might have been enough to send ... and a kind greeting with the ...thers to their own land, but love ...s not seek the minimum expres... ... of its feeling. It asks not how ...e, but how much can I give or

...ringing his aged father and ...thers into the land of plenty was ... enough, Joseph also gave to ...m the "best of the land" (47:11). ... thoughtful consideration in send... ...for his father (Gen. 46:5-7) was ...t of the same piece of kindness.

...oseph puts to shame the modern ...rd-boiled" attitude toward needy ... aged members of the family. ... their eager and relentless pur... ... of fame or riches, many ignore ... trample upon the members of ...r own families. On Second Thought—What Does It Matter?

"Darling," he asked, as he drew his fiancee closer to him, "am I the first man you have ever kissed?"

"William," replied the girl, somewhat testily, "before we go any farther I would like to ask you a few questions. You are aware that my father is a millionaire something like ten times over, aren't you?"

"Y-yes."

"You understand that when he dies his fortune will be left to me?"

"Y-yes."

"You know that I have a quarter of a million in my name at the bank?"

"Y-yes."

"And own two and a half millions' worth of property?"

"Y-yes."

"That my diamonds are insured for a quarter of a million?"

"Y-yes."

"Then, for goodness' sake, talk sense! What difference would it make to you if I had been kissed by a thousand men before I met you?"

Hope or Regret

Do not anxiously hope for what is not yet come; do not vainly regret what is already past.—Chinese Proverb.

The Touch of a Friendly Hand

A gentleman went into a jeweler's shop and asked to be shown some precious stones. The shopkeeper brought forth a tray containing, among other stones, an opal. As it lay beside the others it appeared dull and altogether of little value.

Then the jeweler took it in his hand and held it for some moments, and again showed it to his customer. Now it shone and flashed with all the hues of the rainbow. It needed the warm touch of a human hand to bring out its color and beauty. There are human lives about us that seem cold and dull and lusterless. Perhaps because they need a helping hand from some of us!

EVERT BARZ WRITES FROM NAVAL TRAINING STATION

U. S. Naval Trainisg Station,
Great Lakes, Illinois,
Sept. 18, 1942

Dear Friends:

Well, here I am in the Navy and don't mind it so bad. I got quite homesick the first week but don't mind it so much now. I am getting better acquainted. Fifty percent of the men in my company are married and have children so I don't feel so bad when they get homesick too.

All of the men in this company are from Iowa, one hundred and twenty men. Something that might interest you is that there are three of the Mason City high school basketball team in my company: O'brien, Oulman and Plopper.

The chow is pretty good with plenty of beans. Last Sunday we had turkey, mashed potatoes, dressing, peas and ice cream. That was really a good meal.

The thing I hate the most is washing the clothes and rolling them to press them. That is what most of them are doing right now. I got a jump ahead of them and washed during chow. I wasn't hungry this noon so didn't eat.

We have plenty of marching and drilling since they cut our detention period down a week and we have to learn all that we supposed to in a week less, so they are really working us. First we weren't going to graduate until Oct. 22, but now it will be the 15th.

Hoping to see you on my nine day leave.

Your friend,
Evert Ernest Barz,

Iowa farmers, as well as those of the United States, will go into the next feeding year with less corn per head of livestock than a year ago, economists at Iowa State College assert.

TANKAGE

And MEAT & BONE Are Scarce!

• THOSE WHO ARE SUPPOSED TO KNOW tell us there is going to be a SCARCITY of MEAT PROTEINS most of the time during the next year, and that VEGETABLE PROTEINS are going to be PLENTIFUL.

• FEEDERS ARE BEING ENCOURAGED to use as much VEGETABLE PROTEIN as possible to supplement their grain ration

• MANY HOG FEEDERS DEPEND ON TANKAGE alone as a protein supplement in their hog feed.

• AUTHORITIES WHO KNOW TELL US THAT a blend of animal and vegetable proteins makes a better supplement than either alone.

Felco Hog Balancer

IS A BLEND OF TANKAGE, LINSEED MEAL, SOY BEAN MEAL and enough MINERAL added to supply the mineral requirements of the average hog.

• FELCO HOG BALANCER WILL DO A BETTER JOB than a straight tankage supplement and the cost is less.

Klemme Youth At Dutch Harbor At Time Of Jap Raid

WAYNE CHAMBERS SAW JAP BOMBERS APPROACHING

Bomb Fell Within Hundred Yards Of Wayne Chambers

Wayne Chambers son of Mr and Mrs John Chambers who reside south of Klemme is home for a visit after an absence of three years, the past year of which he has been in Alaska

Wayne is employed by the government and before going to Alaska was in the forest service in the west While in Alaska he was employed on surveying for military installations

Wayne was at Dutch Harbor, Alaska when the Japs flew in and began bombing When the alarm was sounded Chambers was still in bed but got out hurriedly to seek for a shelter While out in the open Wayne saw four Jap bombers flying toward him and bombs began to drop, one falling less than a hundred yards from his shelter. He was not injured, but said most of those injured were struck by bomb fragments when they stuck their heads out to see the excitement

Toward evening of the same day when the second flight of Japs arrived Chambers counted twenty-three bombers while he was running for shelter

Damage was not heavy and casualties fairly low Wayne says he does not care to have another experience like that, but thinks it unlikely the Japs will make another attempt as they are sure to get a very hot reception

Wayne will be home for a few more days before he reports back to Seattle for further duty.

FALL PICNIC SEASON BEGINS

Picture Shows Group Frying Steak In An Iowa State Park

The 1942 chicken dinner picnic season in the state parks is gasping for breath and wobbling on its last leg Like a vigorous new year, steak fries and weiner roasts have elbowed their way onto the grills of a thousand fireplaces in the parks. The frost has eliminated the mosquitoes, chiggers, spiders and wood ticks. The pungent odor of wood fire, the autumn bird calls, the kaleidoscopic leaf color, and the crisp, snappy temperature all add sensory plea ures to the fall outings. Iowa's state parks remain open throughout the winter, and although the attendance has declined greatly this year, early fall attendance is almost equal to that of last year. Conspicuous among the picnickers are men in uniform. Firewood is available at all parks, and visitors are urged to use it without waste At this time of the year particularly, fires must be watched carefully to prevent their getting out of hand and destroying the very attractions that make the parks so valuable.

Army Strives for Right Man on Right Spot

Fighting, Efficient Yanks First Aim of Personnel Officers

Sorting out and analyzing the occupational skills, hobbies, education and aptitudes of every man who enters the army and fitting him into an assignment where he can make his greatest contribution to the war effort is the job of more than 6,000 skilled personnel officers and men who were carefully selected and trained by the adjutant general's office of the war department and who are engaged in this most important of all personnel work in nearly every corner of the globe.

Unlike materiel, personnel is never static—it is always changing. A man entering the service today and classified as a mechanic or a potential machine gunner may next month or several months later display aptitudes which may make him a potential anti-aircraft gunner, a Diesel engine mechanic, a tank commander or an officer candidate.

Because some men fail to measure up to the first estimate of their abilities, and others demonstrate abilities far beyond anything that their civilian experience would indicate, the work of the classification and assignment officer has only begun when at the reception center the first duty or training assignment is recommended.

Various Test 'Sieves.'

Actual requirements of the various arms and services to provide filler and loss replacements for existing and new units are known and set up in requirement and replacement rate tables by the many civilian occupational categories that are required to make up our army and are furnished service command commanders in accordance with the selective service procurement allotment quota of each service command and also in accordance with the occurrence rate of procurement of each type of civilian occupation in each service command which experience has indicated. This provides the first sieve through which men are put when they enter the service.

A second is given them when they arrive at replacement training centers of the various arms and services. Here, their records of the interview and test grades attained are reviewed and they are placed in the type of training within their arm or service of assignment where it is believed they will do their best work.

It will be seen from this that while the objective of initial classification is to recommend a man for duty or training in an army job for which his civilian experience indicates he is best fitted, there are several contributing factors which may result in his being assigned to a duty entirely foreign, to his mind, to any experience he may have had. They include: a surplus of civilian occupations above army requirements; many civilian jobs having no army counterpart; a personnel history indicating leadership potentialities which the man himself possibly did not realize.

At the Reception Center.

Here classification and assignment begin. Here all men are interviewed and initially classified. Here their basic classification form is filled out. This card accompanies every man throughout his army career, and will be used in helping to find a job for him when he returns to civilian life. It summarizes his personal history, schooling, work experience, leadership ability, interests, hobbies, foreign languages, and previous military, ROTC or CCC experience. Additions and changes are made when necessary, insuring an up-to-date record of information throughout the man's service.

The right man in the right place—that's the idea. But the important purpose of the army's training program is to develop fighting soldiers such as this one: Lieut. James A. Harden, "Bayonet Expert of the 31st Division."

Many of the soldiers in the army today are highly trained technicians. Many of them, their technical "talents" being discovered by various tests after induction, are receiving such training as these young men who are learning the detail assembly of teletype machines, and how to remedy any defects found in them.

The first phase of classification is testing. Every man receives the army general classification test, which provides an index of his general ability to learn his duties. The score on this test and the corresponding army grade are recorded on the qualification card before the man is interviewed. The mechanical aptitude test is given to all recruits who can read and write English. The test has questions on pattern-picture matching, shop mechanics, and mechanical movements, comprehension, and information.

The second phase of initial classification is the interview. The interviewer is skilled in questioning, in drawing out desired information, and in recording it accurately.

After the Interview.

When the interview is over, the qualification card is checked for completeness, accuracy, and legibility. It is then referred to the classifier, who checks the man's civilian occupations and on the basis of the information on the card recommends his initial duty or training assignment either to a replacement training center or to a unit. This recommended assignment is not necessarily the man's main or even second-best civilian occupation, but is determined on the basis of a complete analysis of each individual which includes his occupation, education, hobbies, previous military training, intelligence, leadership, and other pertinent factors.

It is the practice to distribute men of various levels of educational and mental ability equally among the different arms and services so that the average level is equalized in all arms and services.

At Replacement Training Center.

Here, incoming trainees are assigned to the type of training which they may most readily absorb. The particular needs of the service, however, may make it impossible to assign every man to the specific type of training for which he was first recommended.

The first task is to make certain that each man's training will be in accord with his aptitudes, interests and experience. Various means are employed to insure training only qualified personnel. When the experience data on the soldier's qualification card are questionable, the soldier is re-interviewed; and if his particular ability is still uncertain, he receives a trade test for that field.

In the final matching of men and jobs, other factors beside the test scores and work experience are carefully considered. Full utilization is made of leadership, age, previous military experience, and any other experience with predictive value.

If Progress Isn't Satisfactory.

While the men are receiving these varied types of training at the Replacement Training center, the classification and assignment officer is continually informed about their progress so that any who are not progressing satisfactorily may be reclassified and reassigned to a different type of training.

This is especially important in connection with the training of specialists,. since these schools have limited space facilities and can be used to train only those men best qualified for the instruction. The classification officer is also kept informed when men in the Special Training units are ready to return to regular training, so that they may be transferred promptly.

Near the completion of their training, all enlisted men are reported to the adjutant general by the specification serial number of the military occupational specialty in which they will be qualified for assignment to a unit. The adjutant general then issues transfer orders for these men to report to various units and installations for which requisitions exist.

At units, replacements are assigned to duties on the basis of the information on their qualification cards.

For various reasons, men may often be reclassified. A specialist gains new skills in the process of training, a soldier of long service can no longer compete physically with younger men, a conscientious objector requests in writing to be assigned to a combat unit, or an enlisted man finds it difficult, because of physical deficiency or emotional instability, to adjust himself to an assignment.

Reassignments are also made to balance the available skills and mental abilities within the units and through the service. Unit commanders report shortages and any oversupply of military specialists so that transfers may be made to balance skills throughout the parent unit and the army.

Personnel Specialists.

The personnel technician is a classification officer charged with the administration of classification procedures and policies in the unit or installation to which he may be assigned. He must have had technical training and experience in personnel administration and must demonstrate organizing ability. With him rests responsibility for the administration of Classification Tests given to all enlisted men and for giving aptitude and individual tests when necessary.

He has on his staff the Personnel Consultant and enlisted men, also classified as Personnel Technicians, who help to maintain the smooth and efficient functioning of the classification program.

Through such classification and assignment, the army of the United States is endeavoring to use available manpower with one and only one object in view—the placement of each man in a job or duty where his strength, vigor, skill, aptitudes and intelligence may be utilized to strike the most telling blow against the enemies of our country.

Yanks Taught Language of Land Where They Are Stationed

It is planned to supply every troop unit with a set of foreign language recordings upon leaving for a destination where a foreign language is spoken.

It is estimated that after six or seven hearings of the records and a short period of applied study of the references, the average soldier should have memorized sufficient phrases to provide him with an adequate speaking vocabulary for his needs

Dr. Henry Lee Smith, former instructor of English at Brown university, Providence, R. I., and director of the radio program, "Where Are You From?" is in charge.

He points out that although the procedure is based on scientific analysis of principles of phonetics and phonemics, it is not intended as a basic conversational study of the foreign language. It was evolved only as an expedient for quickly and easily instructing American troops.

American troops embarking for a land where a foreign language is spoken will be taught an elementary speaking knowledge of that language through a new and simplified method of instruction featuring the use of phonograph records, it was announced by the war department.

The records are used in conjunction with reference pamphlets containing instructions in pronunciation and a glossary containing further information on the language.

DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

FOURTH TERM DATA

Not much has been said about it publicly, but already the question of the Fourth Term has come in for a lot of backstage discussion.

Republicans, worried about it, want to do everything possible to block it. And in the vicinity of the White House, some of those who would like to stay around indefinitely, want to do everything possible to encourage it.

But those closest to the President are convinced that there will be no Fourth Term. Even if he could get it, they say that this is the last thing Roosevelt wants.

Or even if there should be a tremendous demand on the part of the public against changing horses in midstream, they don't think the President would yield. His ideals for preservation of the democratic system are too deep-rooted, they say, for him to continue in office for what would be a total of 16 years.

However, the President does have one very definite political goal, and that is to retain control of congress during his two remaining years in office.

He remembers all too clearly, when he was assistant secretary of the navy, the chaos which the country faced when Woodrow Wilson lost control of the house of representatives. He also remembers the troubles faced by Herbert Hoover, Calvin Coolidge and his cousin Teddy Roosevelt when they faced a rebellious congress during their last two years in office.

So the President is out to win the house, and win it at all costs next November. To that end he will leave Washington—something he hasn't done since 1940—and take a swing through the Middle West some time in October.

JOBS TO REPUBLICANS

Some of FDR's political advisers, among them Democratic Chairman Ed Flynn, tell him privately that the battle to control the house in November will not be easy. One trouble is patronage.

Patronage is a word which may bring a bad smell to the public, but to the politician it is like the smell of raw meat to a circus lion. He will not perform without it.

Back in the early days of the New Deal, Jim Farley kept a little card index of how every congressman voted on important issues and what jobs he had received. When the congressman stopped voting right, he stopped getting jobs for his constituents. That system worked like a charm—for a while. But in recent years Roosevelt himself has given more and more jobs to Republicans, while Leon Henderson, the greatest job dispenser of war times, has placed everything in the hands of state governors, a large proportion of them Republicans.

So today, the President's political friends say that his definition of patronage is: "Something which you hold out to your friends, but use to reward your enemies."

And these friends have had the short end of the patronage stick for so long that, as November approaches, FDR is finding a lot of the old politicoes unwilling to go to bat for him, while the rewarded enemies won't stay put.

So the congressional elections are going to be tougher than a lot of people realize, and you will probably see certain seasoned political seadogs, among them Ed Flynn, resigning from the picture before many weeks are over.

Note: Patronage under the old congressional system had a lot of faults, but it was not half as bad as under the present dollar-a-year man system, where somebody gets a key WPB job or a cellophane commission merely because he is the friend of a big accounting firm or a partner of a Wall Street broker.

Jewish Years

The Jewish calendar has years of six different types, owing to the harmonious arrangement of festivals, etc., says Collier's. Thus a defective year has 353 days, a regular year 354 days and a perfect year 355 days; and a month is added to each when it is a leap year. Hence this new year, which is 5703 and began on September 12, 1942, will contain 383 days because it is a defective leap year.

Are You Needlessly Suffering Constipation?

Many people think that constipation is "one of those things" you must put up with. That the only thing you can do is take a purge or cathartic—and hope it doesn't come soon again. How foolish that is if you, like millions of others, have the ordinary kind of constipation that's due to lack of "bulk" in the diet.

Kellogg's All-Bran is probably just what you need! This crisp, delicious cereal has the "bulk"-forming properties your intestines need to function "regularly"! It gets at the cause of your trouble and corrects it — helps you get back to normal, easy elimination. Eat All-Bran regularly, drink plenty of water, and help free yourself from constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, it's wise to see a doctor.

THE PAPERS OF PRIVATE PURKEY

Dear Ma and Pop:

Well, it has now been almost two years since I said "No" to anybody. It is an unknown word in the army, in fact this is one place where a man can't even say, "I'll think it over." I know this will be hard for you to believe on account of when I was home it was so hard for you to get me to do anything.

I got to thinking last night about famous words and expreshuns that I don't use or hear no more and I made up a list Here it is.

"Wait a while"

"Do it yourself, can't you see I'm busy?"

"Take these eggs back and cook them over"

"You can't talk to me like that"

"Either you change the hours or I quit."

"Don't wake me up before noon"

"I haven't got time just now."

"Can't it go 'til later on?"

"You know I can't eat meat rare like this"

"Tell the tailor to have those two sports suits back this afternoon."

"Where's that new blue silk shirt of mine?"

"I won't be in tomorrow; I'm going to the ball game."

"You know I can't do any heavy lifting."

"Let's take a bus; I hate walking"

"Either I get more money or I'll go some place else."

"I know I was up late last night but look at all the time I've got to sleep today."

"I don't want any trouble with anybody." (Remember that one?)

"I'm checking out and going to the shore for a few days rest."

"This coffee is awful and tell the cook I said so"

"I'll take another portion."

"It's too hot; I'm quitting early today."

"Yeah. I heard you but I'm too tired."

"It's two blocks away and yet you want me to go back to the drugstore for you! You must think I'm a horse."

"This is soup. I ordered clam chowder."

"They can't do this to me."

"I wouldn't mind doing it if I had an auto."

"Send this suit back; it's a little loose in spots."

"I want a room all to myself."

"I don't mind being up late; I can sleep as late as I like tomorrow."

"If it's so important do it yourself"

"That barber will never cut my hair again."

Well, ma and dad, that's just a few and I can think of plenty more things that now are a dead language to me. But it is all for the best. If I ever get back to civilyun life I will be a new man. I will never refuse you anything and what a pleasure it wood be to be home now and not be asked to do nothing except tend the furnace, move the piano, help take down the porch screens, mow the lawn or run down to Feeglebaum's delicatessin store any time you asked me to.

I hope you are both fine. I am in the pink and I feel so good I may open a second front in person unassisted any day now. Ask Nellie Busby to write me.

All my love,
Oscar.

Colorful Velveteen Is Smart For 'Dating' or Classroom

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT IS a triumphant program that fashion seers are predicting for velveteen this fall and winter. Enchanting colors, sturdy texture, the dress-up appearance it always makes, together with its wearableness from the utilitarian standpoint, its adaptability to versatile styling for everyone from tiny tots to fashion-minded grownups, the fact that it is not affected by the priority rulings, and many more of its virtues that might be cited, all contribute to the glory and triumph of velveteen in the fabric realm today.

The wardrobe that does not make a goodly showing of gay and handsome velveteen fashions this fall and winter will be the exception rather than the rule So velveteen-conscious have style creators become they are vieing with each other to see who can turn out the most attractive velveteen fashions Nor does their enthusiasm end with the use of velveteen for dresses, coats and suits, for velveteen is also playing a stellar role in the accessory field

There's a big thrill awaiting you in the stunning accessory ensembles which milliners are displaying with utmost pride For a grand and glorious uplift to your fall suit or coat you'll find that a hat and bag two-some will come nothing short of proving ideal These velveteen sets are to be had in lush colors that carry flattery to the 'nth degree You can get a beret and underarm bag made of velveteen, or a chic "padre" hat over the brim of which sweeps a colorful pheasant feather. Later you will be seeing muff, bag and hat threesomes, so be on the lookout for these beguiling velveteen fantasies.

The styles pictured are utterly convincing as to the charm and the style prestige which makes velveteen one of the most to be desired fabrics that fashion has to offer this season.

There is an important style message in the dress to the left in the group illustrated above in that it is made of check-and-double-check velveteen. It's a lovable gown to wear to "dates" and really as practical to wear to class. This handsome check-printed velveteen does honor to the cotton textile theme, for that's what it is, one of those stunning cotton materials which are a persuasive argument in favor of adopting smart cottons for winter and fall as well as spring and summer wear. This classic shirtwaist model achieves a new look with its pegtop skirt that brings discreet and flattering fullness to the fore. Unusual blouse fastenings clip on and off like the buttons on a military uniform You can vision this dress in rich autumn green or brown or the new fuchsia tone, but there's no end to the colors available

Shown to the right in the above picture is a swank and practical "date" costume made of spruce green velveteen, with the new hipbone jacket length. The scallop treatment is most beguiling. Be it said also of this costume, as well as its two companion fashions, that they have been made to conform to the government fabric-saving program in every detail as issued direct from the Office of War Information. For downright practicality and the utmost chic and charm, here is a costume that will measure up perfectly to every requirement.

Another velveteen charmer is centered in the above illustration. It is just the sort that carries college girl appeal with its dirndl-front skirt, pockets and studded belt that is so smartly colorful. Speaking of schoolgirl fashions, there is nothing smarter or more practical than a velveteen jumper dress with which you can wear a different blouse every day if you so choose. Bright red velveteen is a first selection, or the new purple.

Fall Hats

Crowns of the new fall hats go soaring to dizzy skyscraper heights. The crown and brim of the hat at the top in the above illustration is of green stitched chenille cloth which is contrasted with the black felt brim edging and crown band. The bag is of the same green chenille cloth with a top fold of black felt.

There is a decided favor expressed for mushroom brims which are in direct contrast to the new towering-crowned, wide and dashing, nonchalant brims. The hat below is one of the newer mushrooms of stitched wool frise in a light shade of gold. The crown is braided chenille in gold, rust and black with a gold, rust and black feather whirling upward in a dramatic manner.

Lace Trims Many Pastel Sweaters

For entertainment and for enlightenment as to the newer style trends, you will find a stroll about in the knitted-wear departments and shops well worth while. All signs point to an outstanding season of individual-looking sweaters.

They are doing some clever stunts with sweaters, even going so far as to trim them with lace. You'll find black lace edging or applique on the pastel sweater very effective. Then there are the jewel-bespattered sweaters you will see at evening functions this winter. You will be intrigued with the sweater that displays a gorgeous butterfly alight on the shoulder of a black or pastel knitted background

Rich in promise is this new departure in sweater technique. One of the new effects widely employed is the use of brilliant jeweled buttons. Plastic buttons in colorful flower themes are also much in evidence on dressier sweaters.

Hat and Bag Ensembles Are Simply Irresistible

It is going to be a case of "must have" when you see the lovely and cunningly designed hat and bag sets made of superbly colorful velveteen which are so conspicuously present in this fall's millinery displays

You will find that these perfectly charming twosomes of bright velveteen are just what you have been looking for not only from the standpoint of flattery, for the hats in such beautiful colors "do something for you" at the same time that they add a new note of glamour to even the simplest suit or costume with which they are worn, but also for their practical qualities. These hat and bag ensembles can "take it."

FAITH IN CHRIST AS OUR PERSONAL SAVIOUR

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16.13-15; Romans 5: 1-11

GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Romans 5:1.

Salvation through Christ is the way, and the only way, into the Christian life; therefore, there could be no other subject more suitable than that of our lesson to begin our brief series of "Studies in the Christ Life."

Our lesson for today tells us first how one comes into a personal saving faith, and then gives Paul's statement of the result of saving faith in the changed life of the believer

I. The Opened Heart (Acts 16: 13-15).

Paul and his companions on their important errand for the Master, bearing the news of the gospel, had first known His guidance by hindrance, by the closed door; and then by the direction of the Spirit into the open door, revealed in the vision of the man of Macedonia.

Here in Philippi they found not only an open door, but an open heart, one which the Holy Spirit had made ready for the preaching of the Word of God. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Rom. 10:17).

Note that while Lydia was a woman of ability and culture, and a worshiper of God, yet she needed the message of redemption through faith in Christ.

Lydia evidenced the truth of her profession of faith by open testimony and by a desire for fellowship in putting forward the work of God (v. 15). Salvation is by faith apart from works, but a saving faith is always one which works.

II. The Transformed Life (Rom. 5:1-11).

This is one of the great passages of Scripture, rich in doctrinal instruction, presenting through Paul an illuminating discussion of justification by faith.

This lesson affords an opportunity for teachers to learn and present to classes much needed truth along the line of Bible doctrine. There is not enough teaching of this type. People seem to prefer a little devotional study, or the discussion of current events, possibly in the light of prophecy. These are good, but it is of first importance that Christians be informed regarding doctrine.

We find in this Scripture the glorious transformation of life which comes to the one who takes Christ as Saviour, as we note the seven results of God's justifying grace.

1. Peace (v. 1). The human heart craves spiritual peace and knows that it can be found only when sin has been dealt with and put away. For sin cannot be condoned or ignored. There must be justification, and that can come only through Jesus Christ our Lord.

2. Grace (v. 2). A peace with God brings the peace of God into our hearts. We have that peace because we have by faith come into the place of God's favor. No longer strangers or outsiders, we have come in ("have access") to His place of grace and favor.

3. Hope (vv. 2b, 5a). Our faith not only brings present peace, but causes us to see future glory. Such a hope puts us in a right attitude toward God, and the things of life, including tribulations (v. 3), are rightly valued and understood. Even our troubles become evidences of His love in which we may glory.

4. Love (vv. 5b-8). God's love which gave His Son to die for our sins becomes the "shed abroad" portion of every believer in Him. It was an unmeasurably great love, and it all centers in Calvary.

5. Saved From Wrath (v. 9). The wrath of God is minimized or denied in much modern theology, but it is nonetheless a very "real and awful affection of the divine nature." But the Christ who died for sinners will surely deliver the saints from the wrath of God against sin.

6. Reconciled (v. 10). The death of Christ, which justified man has accepted by faith, brought reconciliation. Atonement had been made for sin, and the One who died is alive again, a living Saviour.

7. Joy (v. 11). And why not? Such a revelation of what our redemption includes should make every believer in Christ rejoice in God. The One who is the sinner's judge is the believer's joy! That is the glorious transformation which takes place when one believes.

Some unbeliever who has read these lines thus far must by now be eager to have these things true in his life. Well, why not? "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31). Then read again those majestic and joyful words in Romans 5:1: "Therefore being justified by faith, we have"—yes, I have "peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

SEE

THE CORN YOU BUY

With hybrid corn, the important thing is NOT where the seed was grown, but how it performs where you plant it. The best way to compare varieties and decide which ones suit you the best is to see them growing side by side in a soil and climate similar to yours. That's why DeKalb has more than 3300 proving grounds or demonstration fields, scattered throughout the corn-growing areas.

Another reason why you should visit your DeKalb proving ground is to keep acquainted with the newest varieties that DeKalb is continually perfecting.

Be sure to visit the DeKalb proving ground in your neighborhood. Your DeKalb dealer will be glad to show you the varieties that you are interested in and what they will do for you on YOUR FARM.

The gaily enameled unit insignia you see on a soldier's lapels and overseas cap are reproductions of his regimental shield displayed in the center of the eagle on his regimental flag. It's a part of U. S. Army tradition. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel Cigarettes. It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is other sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

Feast for Fall Days—Baked Beans
(See Recipes Below.)

Pulling Purse Strings

Today, let's talk about budgets. ood budgets in particular, because they will be a major item in your life the next few months as prices slowly edge upwards, as the days slip into fall and winter and e summer bargains in foods be- me fewer and you have to do ore juggling with figures to give ur family the right food, at the st possible prices.

If you are Mrs. Average America, u will be more nutrition conscious is year than last, too. This will not only because nutrition news s sprinted into the limelight, but cause the demands of wartime liv- upon energy have become so eat that you will have to have ht foods to do your most and your st.

But, how can budgeting help you serve "right" meals, you ask. at s simple. Buy the right foods th your dollars and you can't help rving meals that are correctly bal- ced.

First, divide the food dollar into hs One-fifth, or 20 cents, should for vegetables and fruits. Use e next fifth for milk and cheese. e third of the fifths goes for the sis of your important meals— eats, eggs and fish.

Another fifth will be set aside for eads and cereals, while the very st 20 cents is allowed for acces- y items such as butter, fats, sug- , tea, coffee and spices.

General Guide.

The 20-cent rule is not a hard and st rule. It is only a general guide cause prices of the different oups of food vary from season to ason, from section to section. Use ur judgment in spending.

Perhaps you get milk from the lkman, vegetables from the ped- r who comes your back door ee times a ek, eggs from farm, and at from a fa- ite butcher. you may get your food n one place. ere is no one y to shop. Pick out what the best y is from the facilities available, be sure to investigate those fa- ties before you fall into one pat- n.

Shopping Carefully.

Conservation's an important note these times. And it's mighty im- tant in this fascinating business stocking up the pantry. If you n meals for, say three days, or ter still, a week in advance, you l not be trotting up to the store ce every day, or calling up your cer whose time is at a premium whose delivery facilities have n cut in the midst of cake bak- to tell him you simply must e vanilla. Make out lists, and n shop . . . for everything you d at one time.

hen the snap of autumn gets into air, use pumpkin, squash and cord grapes. When the drifts of w pile lightly against your door he weather gets at least uncom- ably cold, use root vegetables those canned goods in the can- cupboard. In spring, straw- ies, asparagus, and broilers uld grace your menu. What I mean, is, serve foods-in-season! It's more than economy, it's food at its best!

Cheese Bargains.

Right in line with buying what is most economical at present are the bargains you can find in cheese. Cheese is much more than something you put between slices of bread or the golden orange wedge you serve with pie or crackers. It is the most economical source of protein and as such can be used as an excellent meat substitute.

Easily digestible and easily blending with almost every kind of food, it makes even the simplest dish a distinctive one because of the flavor it imparts to it. And remember, you'll get not only protein when you use it, but those other essential diet necessities like phosphorus, calcium, iron, and vitamins B, D and G.

As American as apple pie, are the American cheese stocks which we now have on hand. You'll be kind to your budget if you make use of some of these ideas.

Cheese and Baked Beans.
(Serves 6)

1 large can baked beans
1 cup American cheese, grated
1 cup grated bread
1 tablespoon chopped green peppers
2 tablespoons chopped celery
1 teaspoon chopped onion

Place beans in baking dish. Then add all other ingredients and three slices lean bacon over top of dish. Bake 30 minutes at 250 degrees.

Tuna and Cheese Souffle.
(Serves 6)

1 cup scalded milk
1 cup soft bread crumbs
½ cup grated American cheese
1 cup flaked tuna
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
½ teaspoon salt
3 egg yolks
3 egg whites
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Combine milk with bread crumbs and grated cheese. Flake tuna and add lemon juice, pimiento, salt and well-beaten yolks. Beat egg white stiff but not dry and fold into mixture. Turn into a buttered casserole, set in a pan of water and bake in a moderately slow (325-degree) oven 40 minutes or until golden brown.

Sugar-saving apple recipes do delightful things to fall menus, and help you get the mellow, autumn note in meals. This revives eating interest:

Honey Apple Crisp
(Serves 6)

4 cups sliced apples
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup honey
½ cup flour
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter
¼ cup walnuts, if desired

Spread sliced apples in a shallow baking dish, sprinkle with sugar, lemon juice and pour honey over all. In a bowl mix flour, brown sugar and salt and work in butter to make crumbly mixture. Spread crumbs evenly over apples (and nuts) and bake in a moderate oven (370 degrees) for 30 to 40 minutes until apples are tender and crust crisply browned. Serve with plain or whipped cream.

What problems or recipes are most on your mind during these fall days? Explain your problem to Lynn Chambers and she will give you expert advice on it. Address your letters, enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope for your reply, to her as Miss Lynn Chambers, Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Best of bar- ins are found in American ddar cheese at the present e. Production for the first five nths of this year was over 50 cent greater than for that cor- ponding period last year.

Apples, absent from the mar- s and fruit stalls during the mmer, in greater quantities, coming into their own now. ples and honey are food affini- s and will help you with sugar ioned.

Fall's bounty will also include ash, grapes, and pumpkins ich add economy notes and fla- some touches to menus.

Walter Winchell

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Magic Lanterns: The cinema has gone to war, all the newcomers being armed to the teeth . . . "Wake Island" is one of the most meritorious of the battle stories. It sticks to the grim facts of the case, with no sugary heroics. It shows the marines are a tough and glorious outfit even with their backs to the wall Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston, MacDonald Carey, et al, snap it up . "The World at War" is a newsreel catalogue of all the outrages the easy-going world overlooked for a decade It shows the snatch of Manchuria as the first act of a Jap plan of stick-up that built up to the surprise of Pearl Harbor . "Across the Pacific" is hairy-chested meller of the spy school. Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor and Sidney Greenstreet, the aces of "The Maltese Falcon," are reunited here to give your spine another fast workout Here again the Japs perform their familiar role of sneaks . . . "Berlin Correspondent" means well, but it's as far-fetched as anything to come out of that town since Goebbels opened up his free service to the dopier U. S. newspapers.

The Wireless: Ambass. Grew didn't fool around with any pep talk in his report from Tokyo The Japs are tough, he warned, and won't quit till they're carried out The ambassador seemed a little gloomy about the way too many of us are pretending the war is no worse than a bad cold . . . Rex Stout deserves the biggest public. His propaganda spiels are tip-top. There is moxie in his voice as well as his wordage . . . The Goebbels gabble now being broadcast to the Nazis urges them to "forget how to be unbiased and just" and work up more hate for the enemy, especially the Britons. Telling Nazis how to be unjust is as unnecessary as telling skunks how to smell.

The Story Tellers: Frank Kingdon takes care of the isolationists who got patriotic after Pearl Harbor In "Dangers of a False Peace," in Free World, he points out they kept bleating "peace" and "ignored every voice that cried of our danger from those who kill and enslave civilians as well as soldiers" And there are those who are running for congress on a platform of that same ignorance! . . . Elsie McCormick reports "Boston's Fight Against Rumors" in the Mercury. It is very odd—very odd, indeed—that so many bits of chit-chat, calculated to disturb us in war time, can be traced back to the Nazi shortwavers . . . Pic's editorial, "Coughlin on Parade," is crowded with dynamite.

Clark Gable has been praised by the army and the press for doing it The Hard Way—nevertheless, Clark is receiving some nasty letters from females throughout the land . . Claiming that The Hard Way "isn't starting in as Corporal" . . . The fact is this· Any man entering the Officer Candidate School in Miami Beach is made a corporal at once. The army does this so that every man starts off equal . . . However, as soon as a man begins classes he loses the temporary rating assigned him at the induction and from then on, until his graduation, he is addressed simply as "Mr." . . In short, he is not Corporal Gable, but Mr. Gable . . . If and when he graduates he will come out a 2nd Lt. . . . In the last war, Gable probably doesn't recall, being a 2nd Looey was really doing it The Hard Way . . . The quip then went: "What's your idea of a good time, soldier?" . . . "My idea of a good time," was the retort, "is watching a boatload of 2nd Lieutenants sinking!"

Typewriter Ribbons: James Cozzens Gould: He had a mind that hit and ran and got away . . . Ann Hunt: Better to carry the torch of liberty and truth than have it come up and burn you from behind . . . Margaret Culkin Banning: The fire burnt out and slept in its own ashes . . . Correction: Kay Riley should have had the credit for: It's a wise bride who knows whether it's Cupid or Conscription . . . Austin O'Malley: It's twice as hard to crush a half truth than a whole lie . . . Time: Shoebrush-mustached Tom Dewey . . Margaret L. Runbeck: The baby opened her little pink mitten of a hand . . . R. L. Stevenson: She sat around sipping the conversation with her eyes . . . M. R. Eliot: She looks for trouble as if it paid her a salary . . . R. L. Martens: Criticism is what you get when you have everything else.

Eleven others from Rudy Vallee's orchestra are following him into the service . . . Petitions seeking 10,000 signatures are being circulated among sporting circles here in behalf of former boxer Ernie Haas, doing 20 years for murdering a Nazi attache. He wants his freedom to join the Canadian Commandos. He's Canuck . . . James True, the Washington "publicist" (as he prefers to call himself) who has been exploited in Time and elsewhere for his Fascist comments—has opened offices in midtown Manhattan.

Sail on Rum

Virtually every navy in the world gives its sailors a daily ration of rum, wine or some other alcoholic drink, an exception being the United States navy, in which the practice was abolished in 1862. However, the American boys may have as many as a dozen cups of coffee a day, although their average consumption is not more than six cups.

Fit for a King

The finest palace in India, a country famed for its palaces, is Government House, the home of the British viceroy in New Delhi, says Collier's. Costing $13,000,000 and requiring 15 years to build, this two-storied residence contains 340 rooms, 14 elevators, 227 columns, 35 loggias and 37 fountains.

SPAGHETTI?

What's Happened To Yours, Mussolini?

GONE to feed Nazi soldiers? Something's wrong with that picture, Mussolini. Maybe you did start out with ideals, but you got into bad company.

We have spaghetti in America—plenty of it. We send some abroad to the United Nations. We also send great quantities of tomato juice, fruits, vegetables, meats . . . and still have enough left for the home front.

Yes, it's a job. We've never tried to feed half the world before and some equipment is lacking. Our food-canning industry is taxed to the limit. But we have the finest women in the world, Mussolini; they're fighting this war with kettles and spoons, pressure cookers and home-canning jars . . . preserving food at home, each for her own family. You see, it not only means a low food cost and a balanced diet—it means that commercially-canned foods can be loaded on hundreds of "food ships" for our fighting sons and brothers.

That's typical of America, Mussolini—this nation of weaklings. Come over and learn a lesson.

EGGS
MAYBE your hens can do better than they now are, even though you think they are doing pretty good Maybe they can do better on the same feed and without giving them any extra care
We say this because we know it has been proved that, everything being equal, a flock that gets Dr Hess Poultry Pan-a-min in addition to its regular ration will outlay another flock of equal laying capacity
And the difference is a matter of laying trim Pan-a-min just keeps those egg machines in shape for heavy production. Pan-a-min keeps a bird healthy and hungry She feels like eating more feed and laying more eggs. Try it.

County-wide Scrap Metal Drive Will Be Monday, Oct. 12

HANCOCK COUNTY IS BELOW AVERAGE IN STATE

Everybody In County Asked To Cooperate In Getting Every Available Pound Of Scrap

A county-wide scrap metal salvage drive will be conducted Monday, October 12. The government has demanded that another campaign be made before winter sets in, and if plenty of scrap is not secured this fall, many steel mills will be forced to shut down this winter, causing costly delay in the war effort. This latest drive will be staged throughout the nation, with newspapers, county salvage chairmen, war board chairmen, civilian defense chairmen, American Legion commanders and their organizations cooperating.

While much scrap metal has already been collected in this county, men who have been around over the county say that there is yet much metal still to be gathered

Hancock County ranks far below the average of other counties in Iowa in the amount of scrap collected per person.

As a patriotic duty, everyone is urged to join in this last great scrap drive of the year— scrap metal can help to save the lives of fighting men— and comb fields, acts and buildings for scrap.

Plans for this big campaign have been completed. It is hoped to complete the drive in one day. The collection in the rural area will be conducted through the Triple A organization Twelve men have been named to do the job in each township— men whom the farmers all know and many of whom have boys in the fighting forces. These men are donating their time and many of them are donating their trucks

To facilitate the collection, farmers, and townspeople alike, must have their scrap collected and also broken down if necessary, ready to be loaded when canvassers arrive

Twelve men in each of the various townships have litterally been "drafted" for the rural drive, and have been notified through a letter sent cut and signed by J. M Townsend, county Triple A and War Board chairman; the Rev. W . Wolfram, County Civilian Defense chairman; and Robert Sinclair, County Salvage chairman

Call For Volunteers

Donations of trucks and help in this drive are urgently needed. Any person who will donate a truck, or who will donate his help next Monday, for the rural drive, should call his township salvage chairman whose name is printed below. Town people donating trucks or help may call Ira Overholt, Klemme salvage chairman.

Men chosen in the townships are as follows:

Amsterdam:

H. J Johnson, Chairman; Clarence L. Cook, James R. Darrah, Elmer Engstrom, Fred Gorton, E. P. Hall, Robert D. Hoadley, Wendell . Johnson, F. N. Knudsen, Omar . Maland, Bert Roskamp, M. L. Thompson.

Avery:

Floyd Franklin, Chairman; Henry Brede, Virgil Cook, A. E. Duthridge, F. H. Guth, M. C. James, Henry A Ludeke, T. C. Nelson, L. W. Wesenberg, Harry Ostendorf, John S. Henn, Elmer Arnold.

Bell:

C. J. Wille, Chairman; Herman Haack, Harvey A. Goll, Addis Greiman, W. H. Greiman, Paul Havlik, John E. Humphrey, Clark Lackore, Ed. H. Thiemann, Oscar Greiman, Albert Hippen, William J. Anderson.

At a meeting of the Klemme Civic Club held Monday evening, it was decided that all business places in Klemme will close Monday afternoon, Oct. 14 so that business men and employees can help in the big county-wide drive to collect scrap metal.

Drives will be conducted on the same day in all towns in Hancock county and business men plan to join in the scrap hunt until the job is done that day.

One important thing stressed in regard to the salvage drive is that scrap metal, no matter how small the amount may be in each case, should be gathered and ready for collection because the sum of many small amounts will be a great addition to the final total and will help to put Hancock county up with the totals from other counties.

Those who desire payment for their scrap metal will receive pay Those who desire to donate their

DUCK SEASON OPENS OCTOBER 15

Two Hunters In A Duck Blind Awaiting The Opening Hour

The 1942 migratory waterfowl hunting regulations are more liberal in regard to duck hunting and more stringent in regard to goose hunting Otherwise there are few changes in the regulations this year The 70-day duck season, with shooting hours from sunrise to sunet, compares favorably with last year's sunrise to 4:00 p .m. 60-day season. One other important change permits the hunter to take one wood duck each day. The 1942 regulations in brief are:

Season: October 15 to December 23, inclusive.

Shooting Hours: Sunrise to sunset daily.

Ducks: Daily bag limit 10; possession limit 20 Daily bag limit of redheads or buffleheads limited to 3 singly or in the aggregate, with 6 singly or in the aggregate in possession. Wood duck bag and possession limit, 1.

Geese: Daily bag limit, 2, plus an additional 4 blue geese. If blue geese only are taken, the daily limit is 6 Possession limit for geese is 4, plus 2 blue geese. If blue geese only are taken, the possession limit is 6.

Coot: Daily bag limit, 25; possession limit, 25.

All hunters over 16 are required to have a federal duck stamp, obtainable at U. S. post offices. Every hunter, regardless of age, must have a state hunting license in possession, except owners and tenants hunting on their own land.

Feeding and baiting of migratory waterfowl is prohibited, as is the use of live decoys. The three-shell limit on repeating shotguns remains in force.

The laws governing taking of migratory waterfowl are made by the federal government and [illegible] October 15th [illegible] day the gun

Occupation of Aleutian Islands by Japanese Constitutes Serious Menace to Entire U. S.

Battle of Kiska Island, Main Jap Stronghold, Unique in Warfare

By CHARLES A. SINGLER
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

The Aleutian islands, or Catherine Archipelago, are a bow-shaped chain of small islands in the North Pacific which point forever towards Japan. This geographical fact took on military significance after the Jap attack on Dutch Harbor last June.

The Aleutians extend west from Alaska toward Kamchatka peninsula for nearly a thousand miles. There are about 70 islands and 80 inlets, all of which are included in the territory of Alaska. The largest of these islands is Umnak; Unalaska is the port of entry for western Alaska, and the center of the fur trade.

Desolate, rocky, and forbidding, the Aleutians apparently are a continuation of the main Alaskan range. This is a land of snow-streaked volcanoes.

The climate resembles that of Iceland; mean temperature, July, 50 degrees; January, 35. Rainfall is heavy, and clouds and fogginess are almost constant. All summer long the fog lies thick over the land. During the winter, gales lash the seas.

Practically treeless, the islands are rich in berry-bearing shrubs. The Aleutian natives live in rude huts and spear fish. Indians and Eskimos in the interior live on reindeer, while the Aleuts, for the most part, make their living at fishing. It may be said with a full degree of certainty that this is one place in the world where the fishing is usually very good. There is no need for alibis.

Trouble Starts for Aleuts.

Things were going along nicely for the Aleuts up to the time of the Japanese invasion, and then their whole world began tumbling about their ears; the war had come to the Far North!

It was almost unthinkable, a few years ago, that this land of fog and solitude would some day become a land of incredible battles in the air and on the sea—that some day along these dangerous fog-bound coasts one of the world's greatest concentrations of cruisers would steam, without the benefit of destroyer smoke-screen and without air support, right up to the enemy's guns on Kiska island, and carry the war to Japan.

U. S. destroyers were in that battle line, too, but they didn't lay down any smoke screen. The Almighty had taken care of that.

The Aleutian islands came into the world spotlight last June when the Japs made their attack on Dutch Harbor from aircraft carriers. This was a hit and run attack, and the carriers disappeared in the mists.

As we now stand, the Japs are occupying Kiska, Attu and Aggatu. Kiska island is some 20 miles long, and is separated from Little Kiska by a narrow strait. Kiska appears to be the main Jap stronghold in this area. When the Japs moved in they renamed this island Narukami.

Narukami—or Kiska, as we prefer to call it—has had considerable attention from the U. S. navy since the Japs took possession under cover of Kiska's fogs. For, on the very same day the battle for the Solomon islands began at the other end of the world, a U. S. navy task force glided through the fog almost up to the very guns of the invaders and hurled 400 tons of steel and TNT into Jap shipping and shore installations in Kiska harbor, wreaking great havoc on Jap ammunition and oil dumps, and on her runways for land-based planes.

Battle of Kiska Unique.

The battle of Kiska was one of the few battles in this greatest of all wars where ships went to bat in the old-fashioned way, relying on the punch of their guns. The navy's drive right up to Kiska's enemy guns was nothing short of brazen and has few, if any, parallels in the history of naval warfare. It was a hit and run attack built on sheer nerve and courage, but it more than accomplished its objective. Pearl Harbor was a stab in the back. The Kiska attack was not an act of national treachery, but a bold frontal assault which should have been expected, but evidently was not. The Japs were as completely surprised as the U. S. forces were at Pearl Harbor.

American submarines, too, have done splendid work in the Aleutian area, having sent many Jap cargo vessels, transports and warships to the bottom.

The Jap invasion of the Aleutian islands is a constant threat to Alaska and American cities, and while the navy has done remarkable work up to the time, it may take a combined land and sea operation to get them out. When the occupation of the Aleutians first was made it was assumed that such occupation was merely a face-saving gesture to pacify the Son of Heaven in Tokyo for the bombing of the Japanese capital. But as the invasion persisted and grew in force this idea was abandoned, and the real danger to America in the presence of the Japs in the Aleutians became apparent.

10,000 Japs on Kiska.

It has been estimated that at least 10,000 Japs have occupied the island of Kiska alone. Many of these, no doubt, have been taken care of by the fleet's heavy guns and by the navy's big Catalina flying boats and the army's B-17 and B-24 bombers, that dare the dangers of fog and mountain to dump their loads of explosive on the venturesome Japs. The "Cats," condemned by some as slow, lumbering and outmoded, have been the hero planes in the defense of Alaska, searching out the Japs in hide-away islands, and spending endless gruelling hours on patrol duty. When the "Cats" and the Flying Fortresses go roaring through the "soup," as the fog is called in Alaska, there is hell to pay on Kiska.

However, trying to bomb the Japs out of the fog-covered Aleutians has cost the U. S. some brave fliers and some good bombers. It is a constant fight with the weather, and fogs and mountains have taken a bigger toll of our planes and fliers than have the Japs.

Some are of the opinion that the Japs may be holding Kiska to guarantee their position in northern waters, from which they take great quantities of fish with which to feed the empire of Japan. This view is not held by Sen. M. C. Wallgren (D) of Washington, member of the military affairs subcommittee that visited Alaska. Senator Wallgren claims that the Japs must be driven from the Aleutians before a North Pacific offensive can be launched. Wallgren said: "Occupation of three of the larger islands at the tip of the Aleutian chain puts the Japs squarely across our bridge to Russia."

The Japs must be persuaded with gunfire and bombs (the only language they understand) that the Aleutian islands are unhealthy for any but Aleuts and Americans, and this is being done as fast as feasible. At present the Japs menace Alaska, and Alaska is of strategic importance to the safety of continental United States. Alaska lies athwart any Jap invasion of this continent, and is the route by which America may most easily strike against Japan and pay off some old scores. And yet, the only way to get supplies and men to this vital area is by plane or boat.

America's Burma Road.

Very fortunately for Alaska and America, the Alaskan highway is now well under construction. This highway, the greatest wilderness undertaking in American history, will enable the U. S. to rush munitions to guard the bases that lie closest to Japan. Today 30,000 bull dozers and logging crews are hacking a wide swath into MacDonald's Wilderness, creating a corridor for troops and equipment to roll to the Far North. This highway will link the U. S. to its Arctic outpost, and will be of immense strategic importance.

We may all be grateful that Donald MacDonald, an elderly engineer, was so determined in his purpose to get a highway through to Alaska. As if gifted with prophetic vision, for 20 years MacDonald promoted the idea. To prove that his idea was sound and perfectly feasible he made a trip to Alaska on foot, at great personal danger. While an Alaskan highway commission was created some years ago, with MacDonald as one of its members, it was not until December 7, 1941, that anything was done about building the highway. The attack on Pearl Harbor brought into sharp relief the military importance of a highway to this northern U. S. outpost—and America's Burma Road was begun.

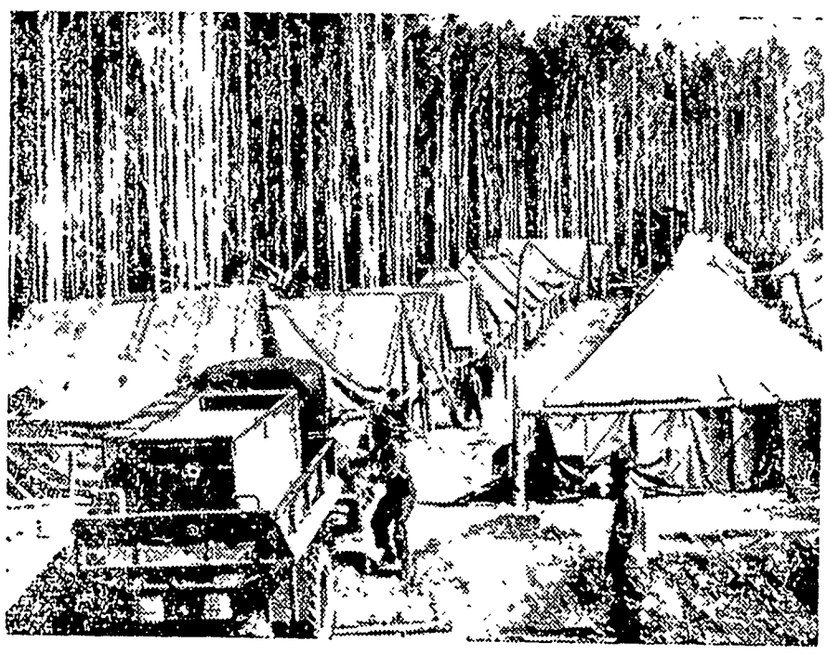
Work Proceeds Apace.

The highway was started at Dawson Creek, just across the British Columbia line from Alberta, and will extend along the east side of the Rockies. The work is now proceeding apace, the ring of the axe and the blast of dynamite now being familiar sounds in wilderness fastnesses which for centuries knew only the howl of the timber wolf and the crashing of the brush as the lordly moose went by.

Uncle Sam has a way of getting things done in a big way, when he rolls up his sleeves, and while this is a stupendous undertaking, it will not be so very long before the North American lifeline to Alaska will be an accomplished fact—one more gigantic stride in the direction of the conquest of ambitious Japan. When completed, soldiers and armored equipment will reach Fairbanks in 80 hours from Edmonton, Alberta.

This trip by ocean from Seattle, takes eight days to Anchorage and another day to Fairbanks. The cost of the highway will be $40,000,000—less than the cost of one battleship.

Brig. Gen. William Morris Hoge is in charge of the construction of the highway, which follows almost mile for mile the route MacDonald blazed through the forest fastnesses years ago. The men on the construction job are living much as our forefathers did, depending to a considerable extent upon their ability as hunters and fishermen. Surrounding forests provide both fuel and shelter.



Contractors camp along the Alaskan highway job. Camps are so located that the thick poplar growth serves as protection against winter storms. The camp area is graded to assure proper drainage.

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Magic Lanterns: The holdovers are breaking run records in the major temples, which makes the new list meager . . . The Two Bodies, also known as Betty Grable and Victor Mature, pour the glamour on "Footlight Serenade." This is a happy-go-lucky musical. The story voted for Rutherford B. Hayes, but the tunes and gags help it to hide its age. It is packed with likable troupers, including Jane Wyman, Jas. Gleason and John Payne . . . "Lady in a Jam" reveals Irene Dunne as a hare-brained heiress who winds up with a psychiatrist going "tck tck" at her, but he's making loonier noises on his own later, being in love. The flicker is of the old screwball school. Patric Knowles and Ralph Bellamy horse around in it . . . The current quip concerns the soldier in "This Is the Army," who felt that he wasn't doing enough toward the war effort. And so he sat through "Wake Island" twice.

The Wireless: The strut has gone out of the Jap radio. Its spielers are preparing the people for tough times. The earlier assurances were that beating the Americans was a breeze . . . The patter they write for M. Gross wouldn't be funny if he delivered it in baggy pants and fell on the seat of them every other word . . . The V for Victory series improves with every performance. It has acquired showmanship and gives it plenty . . . Charlie McCarthy returned to the airwaves feeling funnier than ever. Said it was so cold in Alaska "the inhabitants have to live some place else" . . . Roy Shield's crew, weaving the ditty, "I Get a Kick Out of You" (with velvety violins) formed a musical rainbow . . . Victor Borge, awarded the Comic of the Year prize last season, isn't to be renewed by his sponsor.

The Story Tellers: The most shocking charges against the Nazis are now being offered by the krauts themselves. In acts, not words. "The Black Book of Poland," a record of the German atrocities in that land, sounds like a report on the behavior of savage beasts . . . Rex Stout has compiled the pre-Pearl Harbor quotes of some of the brothers in congress, which will make a book called "The Illustrious Dunderheads." Frank Sullivan will quip the introduction, and Gropper's caricatures will make the squirming complete. A nice dab of fiction is "Mrs. Willoughby's Letters," by Mary Elizabeth Plummer in Atlantic Monthly. Incidentally, that monthly is on the hustle nowadays, going in heavy for promotion, trying to pull away, presumably, from the graybeard clientele . . . The Most Beautiful Girl on Broadway, according to Harry Thompson in Cosmopolitan, hails from Sioux City. She is Constance Moore.

The Front Pages: Proof that Vichy has accepted the brute philosophy of its Nazi masters was confirmed by the poignant headline in one ayem gazette: "Vichy to Jail Priests Aiding Jewish Children" . . . The Mirror's breezy interview with Special U. S. Prosecutor Oscar Ewing (he sent Pelley to prison for 15 years) revealed that his storm-troops sent Pelley $10 a month (700 of them) during one month before the trial. After his conviction they sent him about $150 daily . . . The most arresting news story locally was that one about the Very Rev. R. I. Gannon, president of Fordham, who publicly confessed that his pre-war isolationist views were wrong and "that President Roosevelt was right" . . . "If," he said, "the President had listened to me, China, Russia and Great Britain would now be prostrate and we should be facing our zero hour alone and unprepared."

Edward G. Robinson, the star, was coming out of Dinty Moore's 46th Street rendezvous when someone pointed out Detective Johnny Broderick passing by . . . "Oh," oh'd the famed film hero, "I once played Broderick on the screen. I'd love to meet him. I've heard so much about him."

A pal introduced them. "This is a real thrill," said the movie star. "But another thrill I'd enjoy would be to go with you when you and your colleagues are shooting it out with gangsters!"

"I don't think you'd enjoy that, Mr. Robinson," said Broderick. "When hoodlums shoot at cops they don't use blanks."

One of the more amusing Washington stories (unquestionably untrue) concerns Halifax and FDR . . . "Mr. President," the British ambassador is supposed to have said, "when I was viceroy of India, I felt that all of India would have understood me overnight had I wrapped myself in a sheet and sat on the floor with Gandhi."

"Then why didn't you?" asked the President.

"Because," blandly basso'd the Britisher, "India would have understood—but Britain—nevahhhh!"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

LITTLE BUSINESS CRUSADER

Donald Nelson's "get tough" policy gets increasingly unfortunate reverberations. Part of this is because Donald, nice as he is, and well liked as he is, just doesn't seem to have a knack for feeling the public pulse.

For instance, he should have known that the most popular man in Washington, as far as little business is concerned, is Guy Holcomb, head of the justice department's small business bureau. Yet Nelson reached into the justice department and demanded that the attorney general fire Holcomb. The reaction against Nelson has been bad.

Nelson had no jurisdiction over the justice department, and it is unusual for one executive to reach into the affairs of an outside office. However, Holcomb has been consistently critical of WPB's failure to award war contracts to little business; his cracks got on Nelson's nerves, and he demanded that the attorney general fire him. So to keep peace in the official family, Holcomb was "permitted to resign."

Actually, Holcomb was a hustling young business man from Atlanta, Ga., who knew nothing about red tape, spurned bureaucracy and went around saying exactly what he thought of people who seemed to be lying down on the job. Result: He made a lot of enemies, but he got an awful lot done for little business.

For instance, he discovered that only three companies in the entire United States got all the contracts for putting boilers in merchant ships.

ALASKAN ATTACKS

The senate military affairs committee got some encouraging news when it met behind closed doors to hear the report of a subcommittee which has returned from an inspection tour of our Alaskan fortifications.

For military reasons, the greater part of the report cannot be revealed. However, this much can be told:

The subcommittee, composed of Senators Happy Chandler of Kentucky, Mon Wallgren of Washington and Rufus Holman of Oregon, was unanimous in declaring that our aerial defenses in Alaska were strong enough to repel any attempted Jap invasion.

Remarkable progress has been made since Pearl Harbor in establishing new land and sea bases in the Alaskan area. The three senators also paid high tribute to the morale and skill of U. S. airmen, who are forced to fly in the worst kinds of weather conditions.

Though refusing to predict on how soon we can start an all-out air offensive to drive the Japs from their footholds in the Aleutians, the subcommittee reported that one obstacle which has been holding up such an offensive has now been licked.

Hitherto we have been unable to send protective convoys of fighting planes with bombers raiding Jap positions in the Aleutians, because our fighters do not have the flying range for the 1,000-mile round trip from the army base at Umnak island, nearest outpost to the Japs. However, this problem has been solved by the installation of "belly" gas tanks on fighters. They carry several hundred gallons of fuel and can be dropped after they are emptied.

The subcommittee also reported that interference with army and navy radio communications in the Alaskan area, caused by bad weather and the Aurora Borealis, was being largely circumvented by compass flying.

UNFOUNDED RUMOR DEPARTMENT

The Rumor: One of the Freuhauf brothers in Detroit, who manufacture trailers, gave his yacht to the navy, but before doing so said he wanted to take it on a farewell cruise. He had no sooner got a few hours offshore, however, when he received a peremptory demand from the navy to return, after which Harry Hopkins and his new bride took over the yacht and sailed away on their honeymoon.

The Truth: Harry Hopkins doesn't like yachting, gets seasick easily, spent his vacation in Connecticut. Harry Freuhauf, interviewed by this columnist on the telephone, said: "My brothr did turn his yacht over to the navy, but the arrangements were entirely amiable, and Harry Hopkins never was on it at any time or place. We have heard all sorts of rumors about this, but there is absolutely nothing to them."

POLITICAL ECONOMY

Hard-working Representative John H. Folger of North Carolina will go the limit for a constituent, but a recent request from a job-seeker in his district almost got him down.

"I have practiced economy all my life."

Bombs Fall on Kobe

By Gene Casey

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

Right now we're riding in the nose of an army bomber, listening in on the interphone, with the navigator-bombardier, Lieut. Howard Sessler of Arlington, Mass.

It's the morning of April 18, and we've just taken off from Shangri-La. The weather's clear, visibility unlimited. It's a little windy, though, and the seas, just 50 feet beneath us, are choppy.

There's nothing in sight, and then Lieut. Donald Smith, the pilot, spots something ahead that looks like a submarine surfacing. He calls into the interphone: "We're entering the danger zone, now. Keep on the alert. Surface vessel on our right-hand side."

Jap Fishermen Wave.

"I see it, sir," comes from Sergt. Edward Saylor in the rear gun turret.

We draw closer and it turns out to be a fishing boat with a square white sail. Then we see a lot of the boats. The Jap fishermen wave up at us with both hands. We can't tell whether they are afraid, or think we're friendly planes.

Lieut. Griff Williams, the co-pilot, sings out: "Oh-oh! There's the land."

It's Fujiyama, and Doc White, the flight surgeon, chips in: "We ought to be seeing some action pretty soon."

We're flying down along the coast now, towards Nagoya bay, and there looks to be a thousand Jap fishing boats out on the water.

Howard Sessler, up in the nose of the ship, finds his trigger finger getting itchy. He pleads with the pilot: "Here's a good chance to sink some of these ships. Fly over them and I'll give them a few bursts."

"Better not," Smitty's voice comes cool and calm over the interphone. "They may think we're friendly aircraft if we don't fire. This is supposed to be a surprise."

Sergeant Saylor coughs. "Guess I'll unbutton my collar," he announced. "Getting a little tight."

Sessler sees the first landmark, the brick lighthouse on the point at Nagoya bay. He calls into the interphone. "There's the lighthouse, Smitty. Here's where we turn in."

We Head for Kobe.

Smitty climbs to 4,000 feet to get over the mountains and heads due west for Kobe. The weather's still clear and it's not bumpy over the mountains.

Then everyone sees Kobe. It looks just like it does on the map. Sessler spots the flames from blast furnaces. "Those are the steel foundries straight ahead, Smitty," he says. "That's where we start our bombing run from."

Smitty's voice sounds grim over the interphone. "I see it. Give 'em hell!" He dives down to 1,500 feet and levels off. Sessler sings out. "Bomb bay doors open!"

He lets his first bombs go at the Kiwasaki aircraft factory. They burst and a shower of smaller incendiary bombs rain down. The plane is doing better than 300 miles an hour as the second train of bombs goes straight at a big machine shop.

We can't see much of what's happening below. We drop some more bombs on the dockyards and still more on another aircraft factory on the edge of Kobe bay. Doc White is flat on his stomach, looking out the camera door and taking pictures.

"Bombs away!" Sessler sings out. "Doors closed." The plane picks up a little speed after the bomb bay doors are shut.

Time to Be Going.

The anti-aircraft opens up. We can see some bursts too close for comfort, and the tracers going by. "About time to get out of here," observes Smitty. He dives out over the harbor and we skim along about ten feet above the surface, doing way over 300.

Doc White says, "Boy! I got pictures of everything! Sure hope I get 'em back okay."

We're just beginning to breathe a little more easily when Smitty catches sight of two Jap pursuit planes practicing dives at a Jap submarine.

He calls out to Saylor, "Two pursuit ships on our left. Don't think they see us. Oh—here they come!"

But he eases the throttles forward and in three minutes the planes are out of sight. He eases back on the throttle again, and we're breezing along.

Jap Destroyers Open Up.

We spot three Jap destroyers and don't pay much attention until they face to fire at us. Then Smitty circles around out of range and we head back to Shangri-La. "Next time," comments Howard Sessler, "we'll do ever more, I hope!"

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

AFTER all these years something new bobs up in the way of what Hollywood calls a "world premeer." On October 10, RKO theaters throughout the country will present "Here We Go Again," the new Fibber McGee and Molly picture, the cast of which includes Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Ginny Simms and the Great Gildersleeve. The hour is 9:30 a. m. The admission prices everywhere will be 35 cents for adults, 25 cents for children. The novel feature is that adults will be admitted only if accompanied by children!

Metro did all right with its most recent opening. "The War Against Mrs. Hadley" made its bow in Washington, D. C., and admission was by war bond only—the prices being called from $25 to $25,000 per seat, and all seats being reserved.

Albert Dekker, who's just finished playing a marine in "Wake Island," thinks it's rather amusing that the public believes him to be a foreigner, thanks to the kind of roles he usually plays in pictures. He's as American as they come; his father was a colonel in our army, and Dekker is a graduate of Bowdoin college.

"The Pride of the Yankees," Samuel Goldwyn's story of Lou Gehrig's life, goes on and on at the New York theater where it opened. House records fall one after the other, as people crowd in to see Gary Cooper and Theresa Wright in this very moving picturization of the career of the famous and beloved baseball player.

Orson Welles, who guest-starred on the Stage Door Canteen radio program recently, said that one of the most tempting offers he has had since his return from South America was David Selznick's that he play the part of "Rochester" in "Jane Eyre." Welles turned it down, is determined to let nothing interfere with any plans the office of Co-Ordinator of Inter-American Affairs may have for him.

"Over Land and Over Sea," a song composed by Alexander P. de Seversky and his wife and published five years ago, has been revised and dedicated to the American air forces. Seversky's "Victory Through Air Power" is being made into a feature by Walt Disney.

Alan Reed, star of the air's "Abie's Irish Rose," is head man at home since he brought his son the prize match cover of the boy's collection. It's the President's personal match cover—solid blue, with a gold sailboat with the F. forming the masthead, the D. the mainsail, and the R. the auxiliary sail.

Want to see how the FBI goes about rounding up spies? Then be sure to see the new "March of Time," called "The FBI Front." The film reveals the way in which Axis espionage activity was apparently permitted to go unchecked for a time, in order to amass as complete a file of evidence as possible against the day when the guilty ones were to be rounded up.

Few radio programs have attracted the attention and praise that have come to the Norman Corwin series "An American in England," broadcast over CBS from London. Corwin has been hailed as "the greatest American morale builder because he has pointed out the best in two great peoples."

ODDS AND ENDS—Metro reports that motion picture exhibitors believe that Van Heflin is the No. 1 star of tomorrow; "Seven Sweethearts" is his next picture . . . In "Nothing Ventured" you'll see Lana Turner as a girl soda jerker who masquerades as a debutante and falls in love with a clerk in a five-and-ten . . . Signe Hasso, Swedish actress making her American film debut in "Journey for Margaret," is said to possess all of the potential talent of her countrywoman, Greta Garbo . . . These Items Are Highlights of The College Girl's Wardrobe

NOW that a college girl's "yes" as to the fashion status of this and that has come to be regarded as an ultimatum it is interesting and illuminating to check up on her style preferences

The first thought that comes to mind is the enthusiasm with which fair collegiates have gone "all out" in favor of cottons for year-round wear The major recognition they are giving to smart cottons in assembling their back-to-school wardrobes this fall is really most significant Take for example the darling teddy-bear coat shown to the left in the above illustration This adorable model is made of a white fleece woven on a cotton backing and lined with gay multi-striped broadcloth which accents the cuffs and front closing, edges the pockets and forms the collar. College girls figure this to be a wise buy in that they'll be as warm as the teddy the fleece resembles when they wear a coat of this type, and being "comfy" as well as charming helps a lot when it comes to lustily cheering from one's vantage spot in the stadium. Take it from the college vote that here is a coat that says V-for-Victory in no uncertain terms.

Another decision among campus enthusiasts is that they will be needing plenty of snappy sweaters to keep them in comfort and in fashion at the same time. Maybe a college girl's clothes allowance isn't just what it used to be, what with her being the girl behind the boy behind the bombers, by buying up those war bonds The thing to do so as to keep pace with fashion's demands is to bring your last year's cardigan up to date by trimming it with oodles of chic buttons as the smart ones on the sweater to the right in the group illustrated in the above picture definitely declares.

Thrifty college girls who are doing everything to save for bonds have discovered, too, that it's patriotic to make sewing their hobby. Nowadays sewing is an easy road that leads to fashion success and, besides, it is considered smart these days to "make your own" With the aid of one of the new thermoplastic dress forms you can cut dress construction time in half by eliminating repeated try-ons. It's worth while knowing that your local sewing center can mold your form in half an hour And then, with the fashion short cuts they will teach you, you'll be all set to do a grand job at home sewing.

If you feel the urge to sew you might try your hand at a jerkin costume like that shown centered in the group pictured above. This is a style easily made, especially if you provide yourself at the start with a good pattern that makes simplicity its theme. College girls adore jerkin costumes, for with a different blouse they may be made appropriate to any occasion in a jiffy. Then, too, jerkins are so chic and so flattering and so youthful looking.

Brick red is the color of the fine wale corduroy that fashions this jerkin dress. The billowy blouse is a golden yellow, which goes to show how wholeheartedly campus dwellers have gone in for high color. A smart idea is to write your name in your own handwriting across the front of your jerkin blouse, just below the square neckline then fill it in with a signature stitch quickly on your sewing machine.

Dear to every collegiate heart is pretty lounging apparel like that pictured above in the inset. The "latest" as shown at the national wash apparel show recently held in Chicago is cuffless satin rayon pajamas done in blue for the pajamas and peach rayon satin for the quilted jacket. Please underscore the word "quilted," for there's a perfect craze for things quilted, from negligees to smart daytime jackets with hats and bags to match.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

With Velveteen

Velveteen is being combined with other fabrics this season in effective ways. When brown velveteen is paired with brown and beige hound's-tooth check woolen the answer is ultra smartness. That is exactly the case in regard to this charming jacket costume. A suggestion of the military appears in the double-breasted gold button fastening of the brown velvet jacket. The skirt is of the brown and beige check. The jacket edges and simulated pockets are overcast in beige yarn. The newest fashions feature considerable yarn stitching used as trimming. A little costume like this is ideal for early fall, with its warm colors and soft fabric.

Memo to a Modern: Buy Pretty Things

Here are a few fashion items that the modern girl might jot down in her notebook as "must haves." Sweaters with brushed surfaces, for shaggy effects are the thing this season Add corduroy separates to juggle as you please, also a swank corduroy coat and a corduroy suit in beige or green or bright red. A jumper dress of denim, gabardine or corduroy should be included, and any and everything quilted from a house robe to a hat and muff twosome.

The new "jive coat" which is a 30-inch topper is wanted in wool. A rabbit's hair or wool jersey dress with embroidery touches. Velveteen dirndl skirt. Gingham pajamas, neatly tailored and a gingham nightgown to match. Flannellette nightie for cold winter wear. Velvet date dress in a luscious color. Cotton gabardine raincoat. Necklace gaily painted acorns

And she will add dozens of little hair bows, flowers and fantasies. Spotted furred tuxedo cloth coat (hat to match). Something in the new purple or violet tones. Lace blouse to wear with afternoon velvet suit.

Cowl Neckline

Much attention is being given to creating flattering necklines. A "newsy" message from style centers is the revival of cowl neck treatments Very new and smart is the black frock that has a cowl drape about the neckline done in a contrast-color fabric. Often deep cavalier cuffs match the cowl. If collar and cuffs are detachable, one can make the black frock do double service. A cyclamen pink cowl on black is very effective.

THE PAPERS OF PRIVATE PURKEY

Dear Harriet:

I have not heard from you in a couple of weeks now. What is the matter? I know you are in the WAACs but you are so quiet I wonder if you are in the guardhouse. I can't sleep nights from worrying over whether you have talked back to Oveta Culp Hobby or somebody. Write me at once while my morale can still be saved

I just wrote a piece for Yank, the A.E.F. paper. It is about more of Purkey's Peace Plans. I have got to think up some new idea. I got a idea for Hitler's punishment, I would have him sentenced to paper the Great Wall of China using paste witch has been so diluted that it won't stick. Mussolini we can forget now. He is such a strain on Hitler that maybe we should give him a medal for a assist after the war and just use him for blowing up tires.

There is just one thing that will punish Japan enough That is to confiscate all cameras in the country and forbid any importants of them A Jap never suffers so much as when he is going around with no camera

Some of these Purkey Peace Plans which I sent to Yank are as follows.

1—A world commission to check up every ten days and see that nobody is working on any new plans for a new order anywhere.

2—Nobody on the losing side is to be allowed to write a book, start a secret society or get hold of a gavel.

3—The Peace Commission has got to pass a agreement for immediate action by force the minute anybody in Europe or Asia is found to be working on a new emblem.

4—All use of airplanes for bombing has got to be ruled out and in the case of Germany she has got to be stopped from even fooling around with boxkites, gliders and plane models.

5—The first delegate from any nation to a League of Nations meeting who gets up and starts using double talk instead of plain language whenever any member starts jumping on some small nation must be boiled in oil.

6—The United States must keep all its scrap iron at home just in case for the next 50 years and we can sell Japan nothing except waste rags to stuff in the extra slots witch the Japs have put in all army shoes for big toes.

7—Tokyo is to be renamed Midway Center.

8—Berlin is to be rechristened New Hyde Park.

9—Herman Goering is to be sentenced to spend his life as a free balloon.

10—I got a great idea about Goebbels. The Peace Conditions must make him keep talking. Nothing will sound funnier and do more to make Germany sorry.

I got some other things I wood like to see happen as a result of the war. I wish along with all the other freedoms it could free us from paper napkins, paper towels, musical auto horns, No Parking signs, James Caesar Petrillo, watered orange juice, photo finishes, new vitamins, long-winded radio commercials and girls who don't write their boy friends twice a week.

All my love,
Oscar.

An Unnatural Liking

Success is attained not by doing the things we like, but by liking the things we have to do.

Perhaps the reason romance lasted longer in the old days was because the bride looked the same after washing her face.

If a man doesn't know anything, he will tell you all about it at great length.

LIKE JACK AND JILL

Johnny Miller of near West Union parked his car in the parking lot on the hill at Echo Valley State park. He had locked the door and was sitting on the bumper to assemble fishing paraphernalia when he felt the car moving down the hill. It was going too fast for him to unlock the door and apply the brakes. With the assistance of the county caterpillar tractor they were able to get the car out of the valley into which it fell. No tires were blown out, and very little damage was done to the car for all of its wild run down the hill, with Miller in hot pursuit.

COMICS AWED BY DEEP SEA ACTOR

When Bud Abbott and Lou Costello posed for newsreels at Atlantic City recently, a vaudeville performer who was appearing on the bill with them took part in the sequence and stole the show.

Instead of becoming angry, the comedians went back to Hollywood and asked that the performer be given a role in their newest comedy, "Pardon My Sarong," which will play at the Avery Theatre at Garner Sunday, Monday and Tuesday

Universal studio executives listened to their arguments and consented That's how Sharkey, the trained seal, happened to be cast in the current south sea island picture, in which they portray bus drivers, then sailors on a yacht, and finally castaways on an uncharted island

Sharkey, the seal, incidently, continues the habit he started in Atlantic City, and in the picture he again steals scenes from the comics

Virginia Bruce has the leading feminine role in "Pardon My Sarong." Erle C Kenton directed the Mayfair Production

Dressed for Christening

The bottles of champagne that are used in christening American ships require more than two bottles to be "dressed" for the occasion, reports Collier's They have to be fitted with a 1-16th-inch flexible copper mesh jacket, to keep the glass from flying, and adorned with two tricolored ribbons, each 62 feet long

After launching, the bottle and ribbons are usually stored aboard the vessel to insure lasting good luck.

Let's Have a Real Football Supper!
(See Recipes Below.)

Football Supper

Thoughts for fall naturally bring to mind fall's favorite game, football, and foods that go well after the game. It makes no difference whether you have been to one of the big games or whether you are going to feed the hungry crowd of youngsters who come in from playing in the nearest available field, the uppermost thought in your mind is good, hot, appetizing food.

Smart management dictates a delicious hot dish that you whisk out of the oven, a crisp salad for balance and contrast to the meal, and a smooth, light dessert. Your crowd will be thirsty, too, so don't forget coffee for the grown-ups and a hot, chocolaty drink for the children.

Do something special for the table even a little touching-up will bring the appreciative oh's and ah's from your family and guests. Perhaps here are a few chrysanthemums still in the garden or you might try to get together a few, small novelty potpalls to make up into a centerpiece. A cloth in the burnished fall colors or deep brown, bright yellow, or what-have-you will mark you as a hostess whose eye is ever on the calendar and season.

Bring on the food! And such food it will be if you serve spaghetti, done up in casserole with plenty of sauce and cheese for extra goodness.

Spaghetti Creole.
(Serves 8)

2 pounds long spaghetti
2 onions, chopped
1 clove garlic
¼ cup butter
¼ cup oil
2 cans tomato puree
2½ cups tomatoes
2 teaspoons worcestershire sauce
Salt, pepper
1 pound ground beef
Grated cheese

Cook onion and garlic (peeled and a toothpick run through it) in the hot oil and butter, slowly. Remove garlic. Add tomato puree, tomatoes, worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Cook meat in additional fat. Add to first mixture and cook very slowly for two hours. Cook spaghetti in boiling, salted water. Drain and rinse in hot water. Place in buttered casserole, first spaghetti layer, then sauce, grated cheese, and so on until casserole is full. Garnish with an additional slice of bacon if desired. Bake in a slow (325-degree) oven 45 minutes.

Contrast note to the Spaghetti Creole is a green vegetable chilled to crispness. It's also a good idea to balance a starchy food with something as full of minerals and vitamins as an armload of greens mingling together with a light, tart french dressing:

Tossed Greens.

Wash lettuce and separate into leaves. Use several large spinach leaves, carefully washed, and shredded with the lettuce leaves, or small spinach leaves used whole among the lettuce. Shred three carrots, mince one small onion and toss among the greens. Marinate 1 cup of cooked green beans in french dressing for 20 minutes and add to salad bowl. Add more french dressing and serve.

A bit of the something different for the menu is provided if you serve this salad:

Chiffonade Salad.

Combine cooked, cubed beets with riced hard-cooked eggs and minced onion. Marinate and serve on crisp romaine or lettuce. You can turn out a chili con carne in no time and it's a wonderful dish on these evenings with a fall tang in the air. The kidney beans, tomatoes and ground meat blend in delicious flavor:

Chili Con Carne.
(Serves 6)

2½ cups kidney beans
1 large onion, sliced
1 chopped green pepper
1 pound ground beef
3 tablespoons lard
3½ cups tomatoes
1½ teaspoons salt
Paprika
3 whole cloves
1 bay leaf
1 tablespoon chili powder

Brown onion, green pepper and meat in hot lard. Add tomatoes and seasonings. Simmer two hours, adding water if necessary. Add beans and heat thoroughly.

Corn bread is a delightful variation for any kind of dinner but is especially welcome if you serve the golden wedges at your football supper. Piping hot is the order of the day:

Corn Bread.

1 cup yellow cornmeal
¼ cup wheat flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 beaten egg
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon melted butter

Sift flour and mix with other dry ingredients. Combine egg with milk and add to dry ingredients. Add melted butter and pour batter into a well greased pan. Bake in a hot (425-degree) oven about 25 minutes.

Apples can be found in generous quantities now, so use them for thriftiness' sake. To save on your sugar, this recipe calls for part molasses and part sugar:

Apple Pandowdy.
(Serves 6)

1 Recipe Pastry
4 cups sliced apples
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup molasses
½ cup sugar
¼ cup water

Divide pastry into two portions and roll thin. Line shallow baking dish with pastry. Mix apples, salt, spices and sugar and put in pan. Combine molasses with water and pour over fruit. Dot with butter, cover with remaining pastry, press edges together and trim. Bake in a moderately hot (425-degree) oven 15 minutes. Lower temperature to slow (325 degrees) and bake 30 minutes. Remove from oven, chop top crust into fruit, return to oven and continue baking 1 hour. Serve with butter or with plain or whipped cream.

Football Brew.

Use 1 heaping teaspoon decaffeinated coffee, regular grind for each cup water. Pour cold water into pot or percolator. Set percolator basket with coffee in it. Cover. Let percolate 15 to 20 minutes slowly and gently.

The Score Card: The secretary of agriculture, Claude Wickard, has announced that meat rationing days are in prospect, so learn now, how to cut down on meats. Fewer meat cuts will be available, so be prepared to learn how to do many different things with what you have.

Eggs, cheese and fish are obtainable at moderate prices and are wonderful props in place of meat, and are all rich sources of protein which is one of the main values of meat.

Tea supplies are short, so it's suggested you dispense with the one teaspoon per pot measure as a means of saving.

LOYALTY TO CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Mark 2:14-17; John 6:66-69; Philippians 3:7-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—What things were gain to me those I counted loss for Christ.—Philippians 3:7.

Loyalty is undoubtedly one of the finest traits of mankind. Because of its strength, its fidelity to duty, etc., shrewd men have learned to play upon man's loyalty, making it serve evil and ignoble ends. Unworthy causes, having thus gained the interest of man by fair means or foul, have demanded blind loyalty. Even in the carrying out of crime there has been the suggestion that there is some kind of a code of honor, a loyalty among thieves.

All this does not change the fact that there is a high and holy impulse in man to stand true to the right; and in the Christian, to be found ever loyal to the Christ, whose we are and whom we serve. Faith in Christ (our lesson of last week) is rightly followed by loyalty to Him. It manifests itself in three ways.

I. Following Christ (Mark 2:14-17).

Without obedience there is no use talking about loyalty. When Jesus said "Follow me," Matthew (Levi) arose and followed. He was a sinner (v. 17), a man of the despised calling of tax-gatherer (v. 14), but he was ready for the call of Jesus.

Notice also that following Christ carries with it the privilege and obligation (it is both) of making Him known to our friends. Matthew did not wait until he had made a new circle of friends and then invite them to a feast. He celebrated his entrance upon the new life of faith by a friendly and effective testimony before his friends who were publicans and sinners.

Notice the words of Jesus in verse 17. It is not good people, satisfied in their own self-righteousness, who get to heaven. It is sinners, saved by grace, who will there magnify the Saviour's name.

II. Faithfulness to Christ (John 6:66-69).

It is one thing to begin, but quite another to persevere in well doing. Jesus had been doing many miracles and a host of followers had flocked to Him. He had not only done great deeds, but had spoken beautiful words about the Fatherhood of God, the power of the Holy Spirit, etc. He had fed the five thousand, and they liked that too.

But now He had talked about a broken body, about partaking of His flesh and His blood, and they did not like it. This reached too deeply into the necessity for a personal spiritual experience, and one that spoke of sacrifice, and many of the disciples "walked no more with him" (v. 66).

How perfect a picture of the "religious experience" of multitudes of men and women in our day.

The true disciple, however, stands truest in just such an hour. "We believe," said Peter, and he spoke better than ever before in his life. "We don't understand everything (that's the thought back of "To whom shall we go?"), but we believe, and we will stand fast." Blessed word of loyalty!

Observe that Peter and his brethren recognized Christ as the "Holy One of God," that is, God's Son in a unique and intimate sense, One close to and participating in the holiness of God. Loyalty will not hold on any lesser concept of Christ. There is no incentive to real service and sacrifice in the watered-out religious faith of the modernistic liberal!

III. Forsaking All for Christ (Phil. 3:7-11).

There were a number of things in the life of Paul as a natural man of which he was justifiably proud, but which in the light of his relationship to Christ paled into insignificance. The best this world can offer looks like rubbish (v. 8)—which it really is—when one catches a glimpse of Jesus Christ.

Turn your eyes upon Jesus
Look full in His wonderful face,
And the things of earth will grow strangely dim
In the light of His glory and grace

However, that experience of Paul's was only the beginning of a life of devotion to the Lord, which is expressed in words the depth of which we cannot fully plumb. What does it mean to know "the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made comfortable unto his death"? We do not fully know, but certain we are that it speaks of a fellowship with Christ that is very deep and intimate; a life of power, because He lives in and works through the believer, a sharing with Him of the hatred and bitterness of the world, yes, of death, if need be, for Him, in the assurance of resurrection.

This is an "all out" Christian experience, nothing held back, nothing thought to be too difficult or trying—everything gladly given in unstinted love and devotion to Christ. Now the Christian church is languishing for the want of those who will forsake all to follow Him in complete faithfulness.

PREPAREDNESS

ASSISTANCE to members of the nation's fighting forces and their dependents is the primary duty of the Red Cross.

This obligation is set forth in the charter granted the American Red Cross by congress in 1905, and in the army and navy regulations. It is also stated in the present selective service regulations, which require all draft boards to refer questions concerning the welfare of selectees and their dependents after induction to the Red Cross.

Red Cross help to service men and their dependents takes two forms. In every army camp and with every American fighting unit anywhere a Red Cross field director is on the job. His duty is to help the service man with his problems and relieve him of worry over them.

In nearly every county in the United States is a local Red Cross chapter, with a home service worker. Its job is to help the service man's dependents, and relieve them, too, of worry and need.

Assistance to members of the armed forces may take the form of advising them or their dependents on government life insurance, allotments or pensions, and of helping them in filling out the necessary application forms.

The Red Cross may even help members of the service man's family in getting employment, emergency medical treatment, or it may grant them money to tide the family over until an allotment is actually received from the government.

The Red Cross is also the "Mr. Fixit" for the service man wherever he may be, whether on duty or on leave. It assists in getting extension of furloughs when necessary, and in making loans or other arrangements for visits home in cases of serious illness or death in the family.

Evert E. Barz of Klemme, who enlisted some weeks ago in the U. S. Navy, arrived home Saturday to spend a furlough with his family and relatives Barz has completed his recruit training at the Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill

During recruit training, men are in detention for three weeks, during which time they receive innoculations against disease ,and a chance to learn the basic routine of the Navy, its traditions and its customs, and prepare for the active duty that follows

Near the conclusion of this training men are interviewed with the purpose of determining what particular branch of the service they are best qualified to enter The Navy wants all of its men trained to the highest possible degree, and most of the Navy's trades have parallels in civilian life, enabling the Navy men to prepare for better jobs after the war is won

KLEMME RED CROSS ASSIGNED TASK OF MAKING 100 KITS

The Garner chapter of the American Red Cross embracing the east half of Hancock County, has been assigned a quota of 400 overseas kits These kits are to be made and filled according to Red Cross specifications. Klemme is a part of the Garner chapter and has been assigned a quota of 100 kits

Each service man leaving the U S. for foreign duty will receive a kit The cost of filling each kit is $1 00.

The Klemme Red Cross is asking for donations with which to fill the 100 kits It has been suggested that perhaps those who have not been doing Red Cross sewing will do their bit by volunteering to provide funds to fill one or more kits.

Mrs Sumner Trumbell, chairman of the local Red Cross, has named the following committee to raise funds to fill the kits: Mrs. P. W. Johnson, Chairman; Lester Stille, Mayor W. C Keraus, Mrs. W. F. Missman and Mrs Lena Schroeder.

The Legion Auxiliary have voted to contribute $5.00 to the fund for filling the kits.

Perhaps there are clubs and organizations in Klemme that will take it upon themselves to provide money for a number of kits.

Will YOU help to provide a kit for a boy going into foreign service?

Hancock County Sets Record In State In Salvage Drive

BEST USE OF FEED SUPPLIES TO BE DISCUSSED IN FARM MEETINGS

Designed To Place Recommendations In Hands Of Every Farmer In Hancock

A wartime livestock feeding program, designed to impress the importance of maximum production through the best use of feed supplies was inaugurated in Hnacock county Thursday evening, Oct 9, at a meeting of township extension committees and wartime education cooperators from Erin, Britt, Orthel and Boone townships and the Smith - Hughes instructors from Garner, Britt, Corwith and Kanawha, according to County Extension Director, Paul Henderson.

Approximately 21 special agricultural war workers attended the meeting which was the first in a series in a campaign to present the vital information to every farmer in Hancock county

Floyd Johnston, extension livestock specialist, outlined a feeding program which will make the best use of present feed supplies made necessary because of the urgent need of more meat, milk and eggs.

Neighborhood Meetings

Neighborhood meetings in every 4-square mile area of the county will be held October 29 at 8:30 in the evening These meetings are being planned by the wartime food production committees. A radio broadcast will be held over station KGLO from 8:30 to 9:00 p. m. to assist war education cooperators with their neighborhood meetings.

Hancock county farmers face a greatly enlarged feeding program which has made it necessary to use corn at a rate that exceeds even this year's huge production. The problem for Iowa farmers arising from this situation is to plan feeding operations so that corn will go as far as possible in producing the maximum of needed war food; this in face of a shortage of labor and machinery.

The best way to get the most from corn is to supplement it with plenty of protein feeds. Another way is to substitute wheat, for some of the corn. A third way to conserve feed supplies is to keep livestock healthy.

Specifically, some of the problems to be discussed in the war time feeding campaign are:

Feeding spring pigs for an early market to avoid boubling up of pig crops on farms and taxing too greatly the transportation and processing facilities.

Feeding the fall litters for best results.

Feeding dairy cows for increased milk production.

Feeding poultry flocks for larger egg production.

Labor saving devices and short cuts.

"We must produce food in greater quantities than many of us had thought posible and we will have to do it with less labor and less machinery," Henderson said. "We have reached the stage in this war, where it will take a great deal of ingenuity and careful planning to maintain present production and obtain the increases which will be asked during the coming crop season. But any sacrifice that the farm men and women are called upon to make will be small compared to those which our sons will make on the far-flung battle fronts of the world."

Henderson has announced the following schedule of Cooperator meetings to study the "Wartime Livestock Feeding Program:"

October 19. Ell and Avery Townships, Klemme School.
October 20: Concord, Garfield and Liberty, Farm Bureau Office.
October 21: Madison, Madison Center School.
October 22: Bingham and Crystal, Crystal Lake School.
October 23: Ellington, at Ellington Center School.
October 26: Magor, Amsterdam and Twin Lake, Agricultural Room, Kanawha School.

All meetings begin at 8:30 p. m.

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY TONS BROUGHT TO KLEMME

185 Loads Salvaged In Four Southeast Townships Monday

Hancock County broke all state records in a single day's scrap metal campaign Monday when over 785 tons of scrap were reported salvaged at the close of the drive Monday night This is approximately 100 pounds for every man woman and child in the county'

Ira Overholt, Salvage Director for Twin Lake, Liberty, Avery and Ell townships, was perhaps one of the busiest men in Iowa Monday as he engineered the campaign which brought great results here and that helped hang up the state record for a single day's drive Mr Overholt says that cooperation among farmers, townspeople, truckers, business men was one hundred per cent, but despite all this some scrap piles were missed, unintentionally In those few cases Mr Overholt asks that farmers who were missed to please report or haul in their scrap as soon as possible There are no doubt a few such piles of scrap overlooked

Over The Top Here

The grand total of scrap collected and weighed in at Klemme amounted to 241,095 pounds' 185 loads were weighed for an average load of 1,303 pounds Of this amount 18,234 pounds was donated

Ben V Greiman, Liberty township had the largest load 8 850 lbs J W Johnson, Avery was next with 8,420 lbs and R W Elder of Ell with 7,920 lbs for third

John Trampel had 930 pounds of rubber

Here are the complete figures

Total collected	241 0 5 lbs
Amount Donated	18 234 lbs
Avery Twp. Total	43,510 lbs
Ell Twp Total	85 1 5 lbs
Liberty Twp Total	80 8 9 lbs
Twin Lake Twp Total	31 310 lbs
Average load	1,303 lbs

Mr Overholt wants to thank everyone who helped in the campaign in any way, all the farmers and others who got out the scrap metal and helped put the drive over in a big way

Southeast Hancock County can feel that they did a good job well

The farmers and townspeople really threw their scrap into the scrap, and how!

Nation's Home Owners Preparing for Winter

Housing, Fuel Experts Point Out How Heat and Money Losses Can Be Checked

JOHN DOE, the boss with four secretaries, together with the "Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady," are knitting their brows and looking with considerable unease toward that section of the calendar marked "winter."

It is quite probable that both the Colonel's Lady and Miss Judy are wondering inwardly what red flannel underwear will do to the feminine silhouette, while John Doe and Mr. Big Shot are wearing down pencils and using reams of paper to devise new ways of keeping the home fires burning.

For, that great leveler "war" is beginning to pinch in another and what may prove to be an exceptionally painful spot where Mr. Big Shot's bank account and John Doe's careful savings toward the winter fuel bill will both be powerless to help—the wherewithal to buy fuel may be there but the fuel will not.

Some 13,500,000 John Does, Jim Smiths and Mr. Big Shots, whose homes have central heating plants, share much the same worries currently regarding keeping the coal bin or the oil tank full this winter.

"Heat thieves" sneak out anywhere from 5 to 50 per cent of the warm air generated by the central heating system, the fireplace or the stove, as the case may be, and the householder is none the wiser.

Astronomical Figures on Fuel Savings.

From the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers come some astronomical figures regarding fuel savings that can be effected by adoption of but two of the ten conservation measures this body is advocating.

"If," says the society, "window conditioning and weather stripping were installed in the 13½ million single-family dwellings which have central heating systems and which burn coal, oil and gas, the savings would be something like this — 6,902,112 tons of coal, 262,799,160 gallons of oil and 40,688,200,000 cubic feet of gas."

Even though accustomed to the 9 and 12 figure sums of wartime spending, the average American's brain may still reel under the impact of figures like these. However, translated into terms of the individual pocket book they boil down to something like this.

The average small home having a central heating system burning oil uses approximately 2,000 gallons a season. Tests have proved that storm sashes save up to 20 per cent of fuel consumption. Therefore, on this basis installation of storm sashes alone would result in a fuel saving of 400 gallons of oil annually. Using eight cents a gallon as the cost of oil, the saving would amount to $32 a year.

The same sized house using a central heating system that burned coal would need approximately 10 tons a year and on the basis of coal at $13 a ton, the savings would amount to about $26.

Patriotic Aspect of Fuel Saving.

There is also a patriotic connotation to these fuel savings. We must not forget that every gallon of oil, ton of coal and cubic foot of gas saved this year can be diverted to the war production effort to turn out more planes, more tanks, more guns and more of the thousands of items needed to bring an early victory. Cars needed to carry fuel can be released to carry essential war materials.

On the basis of the fuel saving already cited, the maximum reduction in fuel consumption effected by devices to keep cold air out and warm air in would mean that 356,258 coal cars and 81,812 tank cars would not be needed for fuel transportation this winter, and, therefore, could be used in furthering the war effort.

Now, facing a war that Washington experts declare may last three and even five years longer, Americans who do their part to save fuel are effecting a double barreled economy whereby both the war effort and their own pocket books benefit.

An examination of the ten points of the fuel conservation campaign being sponsored by the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers reveals that the measures are all of a practical nature and of interest to small householders as well as to those in the larger income brackets.

Citing window conditioning as the first and most important of its ten fuel saving points, the society discloses interesting results obtained in tests with a three-story frame house in Urbana, Ill. One test of the house was made in a series of 24-hour periods, with storm sash and without, to determine the difference in fuel consumption. The type of heating plant used was anthracite coal with forced air drafts. During the test the differential in outdoor temperature and indoor temperature ranged from 12 degrees to 72 degrees.

Storm Sashes Cut Fuel Bills.

Using storm windows and doors, the fuel consumption ranged from 45 pounds of coal used at an 18 degree differential of indoor-outdoor temperature to 200 pounds at a 70-degree differential. Compared to this, the test without storm sashings revealed that fuel consumption was 41 pounds an hour at a low degree temperature differential and increased to 260 pounds of fuel used in a 70-degree differential.

In other words, at a 70-degree differential in outdoor-indoor temperatures, the house, when equipped with storm sashing, saved 60 pounds of coal every hour over the house when not equipped with storm sashing. The test also revealed that it was unnecessary to turn on the furnace in the storm sash-equipped house until it was at least 6 degrees colder outside than when it was turned on for the unequipped house.

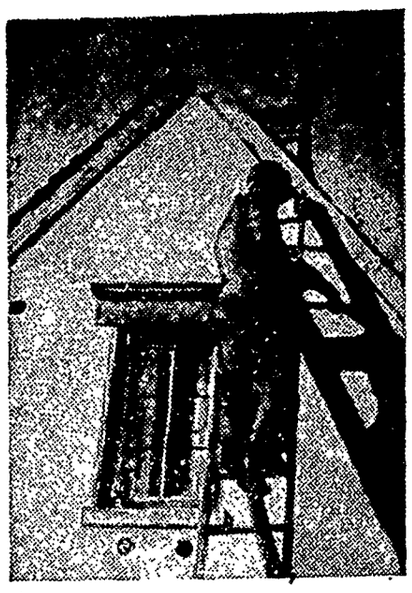
This represents an actual fuel saving of 19 per cent directly attributable to storm sashes on doors and windows, as the house chosen for the test was not insulated. The saving in more severe weather was increased to 21 per cent and was slightly less in mild weather. The mean, or average, saving in a season, according to figures announced by the society, came to 20 per cent.

Insulation Helps, Too.

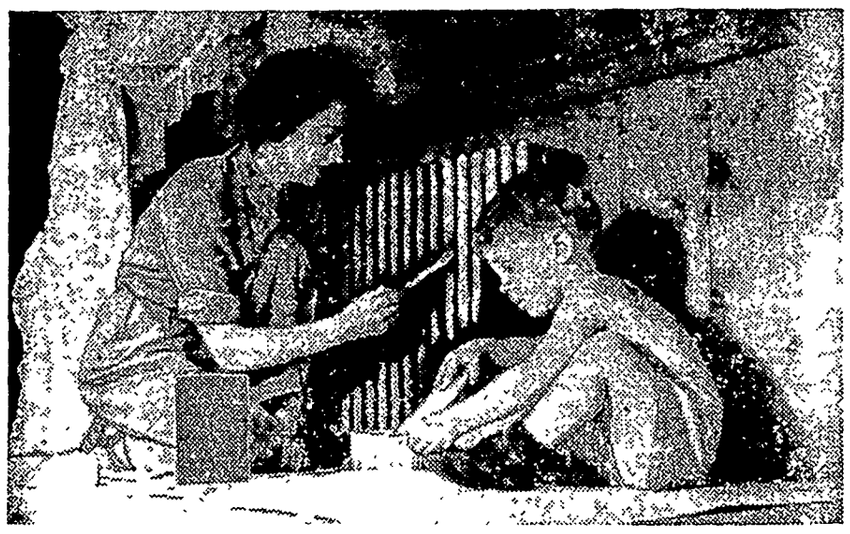
Another fuel saving measure strongly advocated by the American Society is insulation. Tests have disclosed that ceiling insulation will save from 10 to 15 per cent of the normal fuel consumption, while wall insulation will save from 12 to 20 per cent. As long ago as March, 1942, the Federal Housing administration pointed out the fact that fuel conservation might well become necessary as a part of the war effort and urged home owners to show leadership by the installation of fuel saving devices, one of which was insulation.

B. M. Woods, chairman of the war service committee of the American Society, also proposes that unused rooms be locked up for the winter without heat, the heat turned off in the garage for the duration of the war, and sun rooms, usually difficult to heat, should be shut off from the rest of the house and left without heat if possible. Doors to attics and unused rooms should be tightly closed and when fireplaces are not in use the dampers should be tightly closed to prevent heat from escaping up the chimney.

Installation of thermostatic control is the only adequate means of maintaining uniform temperatures, according to authorities on heat control, and, therefore, is placed fourth on the American Society's 10-point fuel saving program. Tests with "clock control" of heating plants have revealed that fuel is saved at the rate of 3.2 per cent a degree of lowered temperature. Therefore, if the temperature control point is lowered 10 degrees during the night or when temperature at the highest point is not needed, 32 per cent of the fuel will be saved.



Insulating homes, as shown here, is another important fuel conservation order. It will reduce fuel consumption from 10 to 20 per cent.



Junior here is having a good time for himself playing in the oil paint which his mother is using to coat the radiator. This winter the increased efficiency of the radiator because of the oil paint coating will keep Junior, and the rest of the family, warmer than they otherwise would have been.

Heading the list of the ten commandments for fuel saving, as mentioned in this article, is window conditioning or fitting storm sashes. This, too, will save on the winter's fuel bill.

NOT DANGEROUS IF . . .

Even though the 65-degree temperature recommended by the OPA as a fuel savings measure might not be too comfortable, "it is not likely to be detrimental to health," according to the opinion of the Bureau of Health Education of the American Medical association.

The bureau further pointed out that reduced temperatures are not dangerous "if chilling is avoided and the resistance is kept high by sensible hygienic living . . . the use of additional clothing, especially a sweater, and woolen hose may be advisable."

WIRE TAPPING

Few people, even inside the government, realize the extent to which telephone wires are tapped today. The good old days when wire-tapping was done only by big-time gangsters are gone, and almost no telephone line around Washington is safe today.

Even the private wire from Secretary of State Hull to the President of the United States was found to have been tapped some time ago by an unfriendly newspaper.

The FBI, which has been doing the job of chasing down criminals for years, is scrupulously careful about wire-tapping. But with outfits like naval intelligence or military intelligence, which suddenly have come into lush funds and have inexperienced men spending them, it is a different matter.

Latest wire-tapping development is the system of tapping the wires of army and navy officers by the army and navy itself.

For instance, here is the transcription of a dictaphone recording in the navy department of a conversation on May 26, 1942, between Capt. John D. Crecca of the Boston navy yard, and Comdr. E. E. Roth of the bureau of ships in Washington, regarding tank landing boats.

Higgins Landing Boats.

The conversation shows that the navy finally yielded to Andrew J. Higgins of New Orleans, who had a long controversy with the bureau of ships over the design of tank landing boats. The bureau of ships had designed its own boat, called the "Bureau tank lighter," which Higgins claimed was not practicable, and the two designs were tried out at Norfolk, Va., on May 25. Here is an excerpt from their conversation:

Captain Crecca (in Boston): We just got some disconcerting information regarding a possible change in the design of the tank lighters.

Commander Roth (in Washington): Possible—it's a sure thing. Yes. Isn't that a blow?

Captain Crecca: It's terrible.

Commander Roth: We can't afford it. We had a test down in Norfolk yesterday. Captain Cochrane went down, Commander Daggett (Comdr. R. B. Daggett of the bureau of ships) went down. The army went down (telephone connection interrupted).

Commander Roth: Well, they had a showdown at Norfolk but a little breeze blew up. They got up to about 13 knots. The Bureau tank lighter almost capsized. They couldn't steer it. They just drifted around. They had to pack with the thing. Almost lost everybody on board, almost lost the tank. Higgins' tank lighter came through fine, upside in and made the beach and the poor old Bureau tank lighter was out there wallowing around. Captain Cochrane came back this morning and he saw the Chief and everybody else concerned and they sent out—did you get a copy of the dispatch?

Commander Roth: Commander Daggett is coming in late tonight and I guess he's pretty well tired out. It's a pretty hard blow for him, you know. He's sponsored this all along.

WOUNDED IN WASHINGTON

Two crippled soldiers drove up to the Shoreham hotel in a taxi. A friend was taking them to dinner, to bring a little cheer into their lives. One soldier carried his arm in a brace, the other had lost a foot. Both were officers of the air corps.

As they were getting out of the taxi, a limousine drove up behind them, and out stepped Jesse Jones. The big Texan watched the crippled soldiers for a moment, then took off his hat and stepped forward to open the door of the hotel.

He held the door open as the fliers passed, and when they had gone, he said to a passerby.

"Gee, that hits you below the belt, doesn't it?"

GLASS STOVES

Next time you try to buy a kitchen stove, the salesman will probably ask: "What kind do you wish, madam—a terra cotta stove, a cement stove, or a glass stove?"

Stoves made of iron and steel are disappearing from the market, and manufacturers are trying to make stoves out of substitute materials.

Many manufacturers have gone out of the stove business—some because they can't get the iron and steel, others because they have converted to production of war materials. Of the country's 275 stove plants, half have been closed or converted.

Bombing Raids on Malta

By Robert St. John

Over and over we have heard about the thousands of bombing raids on the island of Malta. Recently I spent a couple of days with a British seaman who lived for months under the daily blast of Nazi fury on this brave little Mediterranean island. I give you his story as he gave it to me:

Sure, I can tell you about Malta. Tell you things you'll hardly believe. Things which even seem fantastic to me now that I am away from that little island which has suffered so much for so long.

I lived in Malta for months during the worst of the raids. I lived through hundreds of bombing attacks. I lived through enough to realize that these islanders are about the bravest people in the whole world.

You know already of the thousands of flights the Nazi bombers have made over Malta. You know of the tons of explosives they have dropped on that island, which is little longer than Manhattan. What I want to tell you is about how the little people of Malta live on, despite this epitome of Nazi fury—proving one thing to the world, proving that tough people can get as used to bombs as a man in New York or Chicago can get used to street noises and traffic hazards.

Each Raid Shelter Has an Altar.

Malta is honeycombed with air raid shelters, and each shelter has an altar, with a great crucifix hanging on the wall. Each morning the deeply religious Maltese deck the crucifixes with freshly picked flowers.

I have often seen women and children during the early morning raids stopping to gather such flowers before taking shelter. One of the last things each family does before leaving home is to make sure that a picture of Christ is securely fastened to the front door. If, when they return after the raid, the home is a heap of rubble, the owners generally are convinced it is because the picture came loose.

My favorite air raid shelter was one which is about five stories down in the earth. It used to be an underground railroad, and extends miles into the suburbs. Thousands of people are down there. It could be a permanent home for enough families to populate a whole village.

Down there, while hell breaks loose overhead, young couples hold hands and talk of love, babies are born, school teachers hold classes, old men and women get ill and die.

When the Maltese lose their homes in bombings, they take what they are able to salvage down into this labyrinthine shelter and set up housekeeping for the duration. It isn't the most pleasant place in the world to live. But life goes on.

It is not uncommon to see 10 or 12 children asleep in one huge bed down there. The Maltese have incredibly large families.

As a raid gets under way, the low murmur of voices fills the cave. The Maltese don't just move their lips when they pray—they let the words out softly, like cooing pigeons. It's a warming, comforting sound by comparison with the terrifying noises of war from above.

Now the planes are coming closer. Deep in the earth we can hear guns—guns all over the island, blasting away at what the natives call "those insects up in the sky."

Now the roar of Nazi planes diving at their targets. Now the greater roar of our own planes going after them. Then the noise the bombs make when they hit.

It all gradually builds up into a crescendo which shakes the earth. Yes, literally makes this underground cave of ours tremble. The whole island seems to be rocking on its heels.

We hold onto the ground. I remember wondering if Malta might not break up into little pieces and vanish below the water. But seldom is anyone killed in the island's shelters. That is the main difference between London and Malta. Everyone has a feeling of security in Malta, because you can be certain that wherever you go on the island it is only a short run to the nearest shelter.

Now someone runs into the shelter shouting the Maltese words for "dogfight." The men and women stop praying. They turn the children over to the old people, who remain behind. They rush above ground. They stand, heedless of danger, in the debris-filled streets, their eyes flashing as they watch the Spitfires and Hitler's planes fighting it out just over their heads.

They cheer and clap their hands like children when an enemy crashes in flames to earth.

As the dogfight ends, the Maltese hurry out to see the damage.

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Story Tellers: Following in the typewriter ribbon of Shirer and Flannery, the last CBS boy in Berlin, Howard K. Smith, dishes out a slice of exciting reportage in "Last Train From Berlin" (Knopf). Goebbels' barrage of lies, Smith states, has discredited him in Naziland and helped inflict a spiritual nervous breakdown on the Germans. Seems that the only people who take Goebbels seriously are a few American editorialists . . . The most eyebrow-lifting part of "Sabotage!" is that many of those in the Benedict Arnold camp have escaped the clutches of the law . . . It should be compulsory for all defense workers to read W. L. White's "They Were Expendable" (Harcourt, Brace). If that report can't make you put an extra ounce of steam in your work, nothing can . . Wallace Carroll, the UP foreign correspondent, hangs crepe around the crystal ball by predicting, in "We're in It With Russia" (Houghton-Mifflin) that after Hitler is crushed there will be a revolution in Europe. But it's hard to understand how Europeans will have any stomach for blood baths after this war is over . . . Corporal Hargrove's cap and bell version of army life, "See Here, Private Hargrove" (Henry Holt) is funnier than a top sgt. with a soprano voice.

If Clare Boothe gets to congress she'll make many of the windbags there let go of the flying trapeze and come down to earth . . . She's one to break up the demagoguery and force them to drop the ifs, buts and howevers . . . She revealed that in her initial oration with: "What's all this cooing with Franco and Laval, anyhow? All they wish us is bad luck!" . . John Mason Brown's account of his operation will be called "Insides Out" Colson, back from Britain, reports the high morale there . . . "I went to see a movie," he says, "and it contained some newsreel scenes of the first Nazi air blitz—showing a movie audience shivering from fright The Londoners in the real audience rocked with derisive laughter"

The explanation of certain military leaders (to the public relations execs, who take the brunt of squawks over lack of war news) is this "We're not interested in good write-ups—only victory. The thing to remember is this: The public always cheers the winner!" . The peacetime use of inventions (which are now military secrets) will make the peacetime world a fairyland . . If you wondered about those familiar voices (of the narrators) in "The Battle of Midway" film—they belong to Henry Fonda and Donald Crisp.

In case you were wondering about the difference between the Garand repeating rifle (used in combat) General MacArthur is the authority for rating it the tops. Said the General: "A child asked his dad the difference between a Garand and an ordinary rifle. 'There's a big difference,' said the father. 'It's just as if I spoke, and then your mother spoke' " . . . The one they still talk about at Fort Dix concerns the Sgt. who bawled out a rookie for standing around with his hands in his pockets . . . "You'd think," barked the Sarge, "you had a $1,000 and were afraid of losing it!" . The rookie happened to be Pvt. H. Morgenthau, 3rd, whose pop is the Treasury biggie . . . An acting corporal (one waiting for a corporalcy) is called "A Hollywood Private."

This story, which is sweeping the town — they insist — actually happened . . A high-ranking Washington official came to see the President and delivered his views on a matter of importance . . . When he was finished, the President smiled and said: "I'm inclined to agree with you" . . . The man departed, glowing with satisfaction and goodwill toward F.D.R. . . . A few minutes later another caller discussed the same subject—taking the opposite stand . . . When he was through the President smiled and said: "I'm inclined to agree with you" . . . The visitor took his leave flushed with success.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who supposedly heard both conversations, criticized the President . . . "How could you do that to those men?" she observed. "It is not only unethical—but it is unwise politically!"

F.D.R. smiled and said: "I'm inclined to agree with you."

The Magic Lanterns: Far and away the film of the week is the gov't-sponsored Battle of Midway. Kodaked in color, the scenes of Jap havoc make you full of fight. The ragged effect you can blame on the bombs, which jolted the camera right off its perch. It's a real pulse whipper . . . Ginger Rogers rigs herself out in pigtails and pinafores to cut a swath among the puppy lovers in "The Major and the Minor." Ray Milland and R. Benchley chip in, and it all keeps you laughing out loud.

'Little Nations' Skeptical Of Future Peace Terms

Oppressed Countries Fear That Hatred or Indifference to Them Will Dominate Proposals When War Ends.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

Like voices crying in the wilderness the little nations of the world are supplicating America They have been searching our oratund declarations of the peace aims of the United Nations to see just how much we have, actually, promised to "the little people." And they are not sure at the present writing that it is very much

Sooner or later the United States must go on record in black and white, in simple, straightforward English, as to what we can offer besides glory and honor and gratitude and sympathy for the men and women who have already felt the yoke of war.

I had that brought home to me the other night.

It was nearly three o'clock in the morning. The slim, earnest gentleman opposite me with the slightly foreign accent had lost track of time and it seemed as if the ancient clock on the bookcase was discreetly muffling its chimes I was in no hurry for I knew I was hearing the soul of a nation speak.

"You must remember," my companion was saying, "there are just two kinds of nations in the world today, the big ones and the little ones. And the little ones whose borders are not now the scene of actual fighting or those that are still battlefields or may soon be—all are filled with fear. Most of them have already felt the boots of invaders And they fear that the great machine will roll over them again, that they will be obliterated and that when the peace comes, they will be forgotten. The big nations will make the peace"

The next day I read the statement out of the Finnish legation that "Finland wants to stop fighting as soon as the threat to her existence has been averted and guarantees obtained for her lasting security"

At about the same time, there was made public in London the proposals for revising the constitution of the government of the Netherlands empire which would advance the autonomy of the Netherlands East and West Indies and other possessions.

I had already heard a Hollander from Java state in most emphatic terms that plans would be carried through to give the Javanese an equal standing with all other citizens of the Netherlands empire after the war. He pointed to the fact that one Javanese had already held the post of foreign minister in The Hague before the days of the invader.

The Finnish statement and the Dutch intentions are both evidence of how those two small nations are trying now, to assure the "big" democracies that regardless of present conditions they only seek to maintain, or where it has to some degree been lacking, to attain, the democracy which they claim is as sincere as ours, whether they are under the oppressors' heel, as Holland is, or are maintaining a lopsided, precarious neutrality like Spain, or even fighting against one of the Allies like Finland. (Finland is not at war with any country but Russia)

I think it is also evidence of the growing certainty of the part of the small nations, even those surrounded by Nazi bayonets, that it is only a question of time until the United Nations will triumph. And they are afraid that war hatreds or indifference to the fate of the little nations will dominate the peace. They are afraid most of all that the United States will withdraw from the scene as we did after the last war leaving only a blueprint for peace, the League of Nations, and no power to enforce its decisions.

The Atlantic Charter to them is not a very specific document.

Newspaper Man— And War Hero

You have no idea how many farmers are in the aviation corps.

Neither had I until I talked with a small town boy. I have mentioned him in this column before.

It was an interview I had with Sergt. Robert Golay, printer's devil and hero of the first American unified flight over enemy territory in Europe—the now famous raid over Holland on July fourth for which young Golay, aerial machine gunner, with others, was decorated.

Golay is now instructing other small (and large) town boys in the art in which he has become proficient, technically he is an "armorer" or so started on his military career Before he went into the army, Golay was a newspaper man—a small town newspaper man, which means an "all-around" one Not just a reporter—an all-around newspaper man on the Fredonia Daily Herald. Bob was a composer on the floor, was getting pretty good with a linotype machine Of course, like all newsmen in a town of five thousand he sold a little advertising, collected bills, made out statements, wrote sports and covered an occasional wedding He was trying to make himself a newspaper man so that later he could work his way through Kansas university.

The Background

A printer has to be nimble-fingered He has to be precise. Bob wasn't thinking of that when he decided to get into the war. What he really was thinking of was all those flights in barnstorming planes that he had taken at the county fair and anywhere he could get when he had the two dollars for a ride.

He was thinking of the Schneider cup races and the other flights he had followed, of Byrd's trip to the Antarctic and the stories of Lindbergh's early career.

But naturally he asked the advice of his boss, Ben Hudson, who is publisher of the Herald Hudson is a veteran of World War I. He served in the infantry I don't know, but maybe the air corps is as far as you can get from the infantry among the combatant forces, Hudson recommended the former. So Bob went to Chanute Field in Illinois and signed up. He soon became an armorer and went to England as part of the aviation ground force. Gunners have to know about guns and be able to demonstrate. Bob could. Gunners have to volunteer for the job They aren't assigned. Bob did and was accepted.

That's how he happened to be in the turret when the U. S. air corps unit made its first independent raid over occupied Europe

And because of "coolness" under enemy fire, they gave him a medal and a pair of gunner's wings.

Golay is going to have a tour of duty instructing for a while. When—he doesn't know. He'll be glad, he says, to go anywhere in this "wonderful world," he's ordered, "but" (and there was a serious look in his brown eyes in spite of the smile, when he said it) "I'm a small town boy and I like it."

"Like being back home," said Sergt. Robert L. Golay when he obliged the photographer by returning to the type case he gave up for a machine gun.

WPA Nursery Schools

Six million dollars, earmarked by congress in the 1942-43 WPA Appropriation act for extension of WPA nursery schools, will make possible the release of more than 50,000 women for vital war work, according to Mrs. Florence Kerr, WPA assistant commissioner.

"In peacetime, WPA nursery schools were limited to children of low-income families who could not afford to pay even a small amount for child care, but in response to the more urgent demand, emphasis for some months has been placed on service to children in war production areas," Mrs. Kerr explained. "Without nursery school service, it would be impossible to utilize the labor of many women who today are performing tasks essential to the war effort. Parents who are making good wages pay for this service in the WPA nursery schools to their children on a sliding scale commensurate with their ability."

The current program, initiated in 1933, today serves about 55,000 children in 1,250 nursery schools, Mrs. Kerr said. Approximately 300 locations in defense areas, where large numbers of mothers have entered industry, already are being benefited. Mrs Kerr estimates that some 1,200 additional nursery schools will have been established for children of working mothers by the end of '42.

When the French lost their impatience they lost the war. They were willing to sit behind the Magi-not line. When the Japs lost their patience they lost the battle of Midway. It's a poor rule that doesn't work both ways.

Gasoline rationing is credited with the reopening of Howlett Hill, Syracuse, N. Y., church for the first time in 20 years—except for intermittent occasions. The officiating minister explained that the clergy can get gasoline "while many of the persons in the outlying districts who are in the habit of attending our churches may not be able to do so because of the rationing."

'Artist-Correspondent'

EVEN though the campaign which Generals Hancock and Custer waged against the hostile tribes of the Southern Plains 75 years ago this summer was a failure, it was noteworthy for one fact, if for no other. It marked the first time in American history that a military expedition against the red men was accompanied by accredited representatives of the press.

There were two of them—Theodore R. Davis, "artist-correspondent" for Harper's Weekly, and Henry M. Stanley who was serving the Weekly Missouri Democrat of St. Louis and the New York Tribune. Although both men joined Hancock's army soon after it left Fort Leavenworth in March, 1867, Davis remained in the field longer than did Stanley After Hancock retired from the scene of action, he joined Custer's command and remained with it throughout the summer. Thus his sketches and dispatches, which appeared in the Weekly from May until September, are the best contemporary accounts we have of the beginning of Custer's career as an Indian fighter.

Although only 27 years old at the time, Davis was a veteran at covering wars. From 1861 to 1865 he saw the capture of Port Royal; the fight between the Monitor and the Merrimac, the great battle at Shiloh; the first bombardment of Vicksburg by Commodore Porter's gunboats; the battle of Antietam; the surrender of Vicksburg; the battle of Chickamauga, the siege and battle of Chattanooga; and finally he accompanied Sherman on his famous "March to the Sea".

After the war Harper's sent him on a tour of the Western Plains during which he traveled more than 2,600 miles by stage-coach and once barely escaped with his life when the coach was attacked by the Indians. He visited the Colorado mining camps, went to Santa Fe, accompanied General Steedman on his Southern tour and after a trip through Texas returned to New York to be present at the laying of the Atlantic cable.

In the spring of 1867, upon invitation of General Hancock, whom he had known during the war, he joined Hancock's expedition, was present at the council between the general and the Kiowa chiefs at Fort Dodge, saw the burning of the Cheyenne village near Fort Larned and not only recorded these events with his pencil but also made sketches of Satanta, Kicking Bear and other famous Kiowa chiefs.

When Hancock ended his futile campaign, leaving orders for Custer to continue pursuing the hostiles, Davis "jined the cavalry." He became a tentmate of Maj. Joel Elliott and the friendship which sprang up between these two young men continued until Elliott's tragic death at the battle of the Washita in November, 1868. Davis soon became a favorite with the other officers of the Seventh cavalry also, sharing all of the hardships as well as the few pleasures of the campaign. One of these was a big buffalo-killing contest after which the losers gave the winners a "right good feed."

Davis has left us a pictorial record of all these events, including the tragic spectacle of the field of battle where Lieutenant Kidder and his command were wiped out—an ominous foreboding of the fate which was to overtake so many of his Seventh cavalry friends on the Little Big Horn in Montana nine years later. Equally interesting are some of Davis' accounts of the campaign which he wrote in later years and which are preserved only in manuscript form. Davis' distinguished career came to an end in Asbury Park, N. J., on November 11, 1891.

GETTING YOUR OIL CARD

Q.—What is your name?
A.—Ch-h-che-ches-tt-ter J-J-Jones.
Q.—Stop stuttering please.
A.—If you were as cold as I am you'd stutter.
Q.—Nonsense. It isn't cold now.
A.—No, but I'm looking ahead!
Q.—Have you an oil-burning furnace?
A.—It all depends on you!

Q.—How many rooms are there in your house?
A.—Six rooms and nine baths.
Q.—Isn't that a slightly unbalanced layout?
A.—Not the way architects design homes today.

Q.—Is your house insulated?
A.—I can't be sure. All I know is that I paid the contractor to do it. It's like the vitamins in spinach . . . you are told they are there but you can't prove it.
Q.—How about storm windows?
A.—I'll bite; how about 'em?
Q.—Have you had them put in?
A.—Yes, sir. I know they're there by the rattle.
Q.—Storm windows are no good if they rattle.
A.—The carpenter who made them thought I had ordered tent flaps. And they're so thin he must have been a manufacturer of paper caps for milk bottles before he turned carpenter.

Q.—Have you closed off any rooms?
A.—I've closed off so many that I find myself trapped in my own home. My mother-in-law was missing for three days before they found I had nailed her up in a guest room.
Q.—Splendid. That's the way to win a war.
A.—Not the war with my mother-in-law.
Q.—How much oil did you burn last winter.
A.—By the bills I must have been the largest consumer next to the Empire State building.
Q.—Do you agree that 65 degrees is warm enough for any home?
A.—Mister, when the heat in my house gets that low the whole family starts hunting for seals. If our thermostat gets below 70 my wife accuses me of trying to stage a revival of Eliza crossing the ice.
Q.—Doesn't your wife want to win this war?
A.—Yes, but not by dogsled.
Q.—You'd better have a stern talk with her and just set the heat at 65 as Washington suggests.
A.—No matter where I set it she will shove it up to where her bridge club wants it.

Q.—Would she defy Washington?
A.—Mister, when she gets uncomfortable in winter she will defy Washington, Jefferson and Hamilton.

Q—Here's your ration book. And you won't suffer from cold all winter I can guarantee it.
A—How?
Q—When you discover how little oil you can get with it you are going to feel plenty hot.

Washington has ruled that 65 degrees will be warm enough in New England homes this winter. Well, there is one spot that can take it. To anybody born and raised in New England getting back to 65 degrees will be about as great a sacrifice as having to give up one ice floe to move to another.

REPUBLICANS HAVE CUT EXPENSES

Hancock County tax payers will be pleased to know that our state and county levies show a marked decrease from the 1938 levies. That was the last year of the "Kraschel Administration," if you recall

Since the Republicans took over the reduction in Hancock in mills is 2 915 or a decrease in dollars and cents of $61,145 14 for the 1942 levy over the 1938 levy That is language we can understand

State and county taxes are the only taxes over which the state and county administrations have control, and the reduction in these general levies does not include the levies of local districts or corporations. These vary from year to year in the local taxing districts as the needs for funds vary.

Republican state and county administrations the past four years have given a good account of their stewardship and the voters of Hancock county will do well in voting the state and county Republican ticket on November 3 and continue the economy program.

IT WAS AN "ALL OUT" SCRAP METAL DRIVE

If all the rest of Iowa rolled up their sleeves and pitched into the salvage campaign like they did in Klemme and vicinity Monday, and with as much enthusiasm, then nobody needs to worry about Iowa not being at the top of the heap when the final score is checked.

The Klemme Schools were closed Monday afternoon so that teachers and students alike could go in search of scrap Every able bodied man in Klemme donned old clothes and helped load and unload the metal. Every available truck was in service and even the kids hauled junk in coaster wagons and on bicycles and the piles of scrap grew ever larger.

Trucks and trailers rolled along the streets all day long loaded high with scrap metal.

Every man, woman, boy and girl who worked in the salvage campaign deserve a big bouquet for the splendid job they performed Our fighting men will feel proud of the folks back home here

They can count on Klemme and the people of this community to back them to the limit.

It was a lovely day in Iowa but a bad day for the Axis!

AUTUM HERE, LESS SOME OF THE COLOR

Autumn is usually quite scenic in Iowa when the leaves are highly colored This year a hard freeze got in some dirty work before old Jack Frost could get out his color kit and paint the leaves Most of the leaves are a dull brown and only here and there are a few nice colored trees

And talking about leaves, brings to mind this poem:

There was a young girl from Peru
Who decided her loves too few.
So she walked from her door
With a fig leaf—no more,
Now she's in bed with the flu!

A fan dancer went to a neighboring town to see a physician and asked "Doctor, I want you to vaccinate me where it won't show."

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES
Are Qualified To Serve You Best

IN THESE critical times, Iowa needs public officials qualified by training and experience to administer the business of government with the highest degree of skill and integrity From top to bottom, the Republican Ticket offers these qualifications.

Yours is the responsibility of choosing capable men who can be relied upon to do a good job for the citizens of Iowa at home and in Washington. History-making times are ahead, and we must continue to keep skilled men at the helm to guide us safely now and through the post-war reconstruction period.

Check the Republican Ticket, and you'll find candidates who are trained to give you sound, economical government. These capable men have strongly emphasized the necessity of keeping politics out of war.

Governor Wilson, candidate for United States Senator, has administered his office honestly and efficiently. His years of experience as Governor, Judge, State Senator, and County Attorney, PLUS his pledge to look after the best interest of Iowans, make him the logical choice to represent Iowa in Washington. He has proved his honesty and integrity.

Bourke B. Hickenlooper, candidate for Governor, has served Iowa well as a legislator and as Lieutenant Governor and is entitled to advancement. A self-made man possessing rare good judgment, Hickenlooper will defend the interests of the public and continue the present economy in state government.

Competent candidates are to be found on the Republican Ticket for every state and congressional office — men whose ability makes them the logical choice for Iowa voters

Success for Dinner—Savory Stuffed Peppers
(See Recipes Below.)

Flavor's the Thing

Ever notice how ever-so-good foods run in combinations of three flavors? There's the steak, french fried potatoes and pie combination. Or, you can have fried chicken, gravy and biscuits as a three-some.

At one time or another you've all tried lamb chop, peas and mint jelly combination, or melted cheese, toasted bread and grilled tomatoes plate luncheon.

Now other foods are joining the victory parade and new dishes are coming hands at the table to blitz their way to food fame. The nutrition rule which is rapidly gaining popularity is the one which says that if you miss one food combination at one meal, you must pick it up at another meal so you'll get all the energy units you need these busy days.

That's why today I'm offering you combinations of food which contain nutrients easy to miss if you're not careful. Take iron, for instance.

Iron is a mineral that has a big job to do for your system. It sees to it that your energies don't lag and guards against anemia and general digestive disturbances.

Biggest job of all that iron does is to see that your body gets all the oxygen it needs by making enough red blood cells to go through that 60,000-mile long circulatory system that will replenish with oxygen and carry off the poisonous carbon dioxide which is another word for the oxygen after you finished using it.

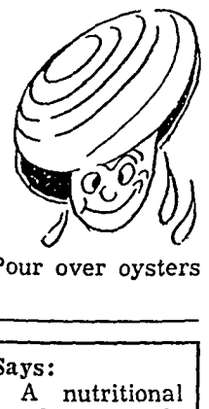
Now the thing about iron is that it's difficult to find it in a great many foods. You can see how important it is because you need it every day. You'll find iron in eggs, whole wheat cereals and oatmeal, for instance. Suppose you skip these things at breakfast. That means you've got to pick up iron in one of the other two meals, for instance, by having some iron-rich food like liver, heart, oysters, greens, dried fruits. Do you follow?

That's why today I'm including several iron-rich foods so you will be sure not to miss a day without having something with iron.

Browned Oysters.
(Serves 6)

1 quart oysters
4 tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons flour
Juice of 1 lemon
Salt, pepper
Worcestershire sauce

Remove oysters from juice and drain. Dredge in flour and brown in 2 tablespoons butter. Remove from pan and set aside. Make a brown sauce by blending remaining butter with flour. Add juice from cooked oysters, lemon juice and sauce. Pour over oysters and serve.



This Week's Menu

*Recipe Given

Here's a recipe suitable for lunch or dinner, made delicious and healthful by iron-rich molasses.

Baked Stuffed Peppers.
(Serves 6)

6 large green peppers
1 pound chopped beef
2 cups bread crumbs
3 tablespoons minced onion
1 cup canned tomatoes
2 tablespoons pure, dark molasses
2 tablespoons melted butter
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Remove seeds and membranes of peppers and parboil in salted water 10 minutes. Combine all remaining ingredients in order given. Stuff peppers with mixture and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 40 to 45 minutes. Try serving this with Tomato Sauce.

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 No. 2 can tomatoes
2 large onions, sliced
3 cooked carrots, diced
¼ cup pure, dark molasses
1 can green peas, drained
1 green pepper, diced
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

Saute onions and pepper in butter. Push to one side of pan and mix flour with butter. Add tomatoes, molasses, and seasonings and cook, stirring until thickened. Add carrots and peas. Cook about 5 minutes.

When you talk about the mineral, iodine, you might as well ask about the I.Q., for this is the mineral that directly affects mental alertness. In addition to that, iodine prevents simple goiter and also affects how you tip the scales.

Rich in iodine are seafoods, so make a point of including them in your menu often. For example:

Shrimp Casserole.
(Serves 6)

3 cups ½-inch bread cubes
2 cans shrimp
1½ cups grated cheese
3 eggs, slightly beaten
2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon salt
Pepper
Paprika

Place layer of bread cubes, shrimp and cheese in casserole. Repeat until all are used. Combine beaten eggs with milk, and add seasonings. Pour over mixture in casserole. Bake in a moderate (325-degree) oven about 45 minutes.

In addition to containing iodine, shrimps also have about 17 other valuable minerals. Then, combining the curly pink shrimp with milk and butter, you have a real health-giving dish that's good to eat besides, as this:

Shrimp Soup.
(Serves 6)

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
Salt, pepper
¼ teaspoon celery salt
1 quart milk
1 can shrimp
Few drops tabasco sauce

Combine melted butter and flour. Add seasonings, then stir in milk gradually. Drain shrimp, add liquid to white sauce mixture and cook, stirring constantly until thickened slightly. Break shrimp into small pieces and add with tabasco sauce. Heat. Serve at once.

Lynn Says:

Survey Notes: A nutritional survey by a large firm reveals the following interesting bits of information: that we are the best fed country in the world, but as a whole do not know enough about eating as wisely as we should.

Of the 11,582 interviews made, it is found that about 27.7 per cent of the families are eating more protective foods than two years ago. Marked increases were made in the consumption of citrus fruits.

Most women like to cook, it goes on to tell, three out of four in the first thousand like to cook, 4.6 per cent like to cook occasionally, and about 10 8 per cent not at all."

Families are fed—at least 66 per cent of those interviewed—what women think are good for them. Then 58.5 per cent are fed what the family likes. Cost of food affects 42.19 per cent, and variety influences 28.2 per cent.

IF YOU want to laugh, want to stop thinking about the war for just a little while, be sure to see "The Major and the Minor." It's one of the most delightful pictures that has come along in many a moon. Ginger Rogers, as the young woman who dons little girl's clothes in order to ride half-fare on a train taking her home, gives an expert performance, establishing herself firmly as one of our leading comediennes. Ray Milland is excellent, as is the rest of the cast. It's a swell picture—don't miss it!

One of the best friends and former associates of Gen. Draja Mikhailovitch, leader of the Jugoslavian guerrillas, is Tom Lincir, now in Hollywood working for Columbia pictures. Columbia has made a number of war pictures—"The Commandos," "Submarine Raider," etc. but Tom Lincir's been in none of them—he's a conga dancer in "My Sister Eileen," movie version of the stage play laid in New York, with Rosalind Russell and Brian Aherne.

Richard Arlen and Arlene Judge certainly started something when, working in "Wildcat," they suggested that each time a player made a mistake in his dialogue he make a contribution to the American Red Cross; fewer errors mean fewer retakes, so the company profits, and the Red Cross makes money when somebody does blow his lines. With film companies cutting expenses, it's a swell idea.

GROWTH IN CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:40-52, II Peter 1:1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT—But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.—II Peter 3:18.

Growth is a normal thing. We expect it of the child, and when it fails we know that something is wrong. Just so there is something very decidedly wrong in the life of the Christian who fails to grow in grace. If a child fails to grow we are alarmed, but if a Christian does not grow we hardly notice it, or at most only express our regret. We need a revival.

I. Normal Children Will Grow (Luke 2:40-52).

While Christ was God manifest in the flesh, He was at the same time true man, and as a boy He developed and grew in a normal way.

Unless we meet the tragedy of arrested development we need have no concern about the fact that a child will grow physically, mentally and spiritually. The Lord has placed in the babe in a mother's arms the potential qualities of the man or woman to come. Our chief responsibility is to provide the opportunity for the development of those abilities and qualities which the child has, and of guiding that growth in the right direction.

That is all a parent has to do, but it is enough to call for all the wisdom, judgment, patience and skill of the best of us. Yes, and even that is not enough, we need the wisdom of God and His grace upon our lives to do this vital work as we ought.

The qualities in a boy or girl which will count gloriously for God may be dreadfully effective for Satan if we permit him to get control of our children. May God help us to be alert and skillful in rearing our boys and girls.

While it is true that we can do more for the guidance of physical and mental growth than spiritual (because that is a matter of the grace of God), we can lead the steps of the little child to the house of God; we can teach him to pray and to trust God, and we can set an example of godly living before him. That is all we can do; but again we say, it is enough to demand our best effort and more.

II. Normal Christians Will Grow (II Pet. 1:1-8).

In Christ there are "all things that pertain unto life and godliness." There is no need of some added experience, or some new and striking enducement, for all the unbelievably great possibilities of Christian grace and growth are in Him. We need only to recognize that fact and yield to Him, and there will be the full development of Christian life and experience.

We have, in practice, so far departed from the normal in Christian life that we can hardly believe that the above is true. In place of the normal Christian life according to God's standard, we have established a standard based on the average Christian life. If we equal it we are satisfied, and if perchance we surpass it we count ourselves among the "more spiritual" ones. And all the time the average standard is far below the normal Christian life which God not only expects, but is ready to enable and empower us to live.

Peter tells us in this passage that the great and precious promises of God in Christ are not only to enable us to escape the corruption of this sinful world, but to go on to a place where we will neither "be barren nor unfruitful" Christians. How will this come about? Verses 5-7 tell us.

Faith supplies in itself (rather than "add to," v. 5), if there is "diligence" (that is, true Christian devotion), a number of other splendid qualities. First comes "virtue"—really moral courage, or nobility of character. What a fine step forward! Then comes "knowledge," that is, a discernment which will give practical skill in effective daily living for Christ. Such spiritual discernment will naturally lead to "self-control" — something much needed by most Christians.

The self-controlled one will always have "patience," that is, the endurance to stand every hardship and trial. We need to be more patient not only with others, but also with ourselves, even in this matter of Christian growth of which we are speaking.

A life like that is a life of "godliness," which will blossom out into real "brotherly kindness." There isn't too much of that in the world today, even among Christians. Let's revive it! Then what? The one who loves his brother will love the whole world (charity, in v. 8, should read "love"). Why not? Are we not all brethren, who know Christ, regardless of race, position or creed?

Let such virtues "abound" (v. 8), and no Christian life will lack in rich fruitfulness for God in Christ. If Christian people would let the new life within them grow, it would surprise us and them what God would do through them for His own glory.

Laughing at Misfortune

We laugh heartily when our fellowman slips on a banana peel and awkwardly falls. That laughter shows, basically, our resentment at any demonstration of the unusual, coupled with a comfortable realization that we ourselves are outside the disaster. There is unconscious brutality, therefore, in laughing at the sight of a fat man chasing his hat in a high wind. Higher up the scale of humor there is brutality in wit, which almost always holds an element of cruelty.

KLEMME AND COMMUNITY MUST RAISE $250.00

East Half Of Hancock County Must Contribute $900 To The National USO Fund

Mothers and fathers of our fighting men are finding that they have "deputies" in more than 600 USO clubs and service units scattered through-out the United States and in the off-shore bases, according to Mr James C Thomas, local chairman of the 1942 War Fund Campaign of the USO for Klemme and community which will be put on in the east half of Hancock County beginning Monday, Oct. 26 and continuing through Saturday, Oct 31st.

Dr C V. Hamilton, of Garner, chairman for the east half of Hancock County said that the quota for the east half had been set at $900, and that Klemme and community's quota had been set at $250. He was confident the quota could be reached and passed if everyone in the community would contribute to this most worthy cause

Floods of letters reaching USO headquarters come from parents expressing gratitude for the work USO is doing in giving the men in uniform a 'home-away-from-home and letters also show that nothing help morale at home so much as a feeling of confidence that somebody is taking an individual interest in the men out front," said Mr Thomas

Our own men, when they are home on a furlough are often asked "What do you think of the USO?" The answer is always the same "We don't know how we could ever get along without it It is the next best thing to being at home"

House To House Canvass

In the towns a house to house campaign will be made, but on account of the tire situation, people living in the country are asked to have their USO contribution at the bank in Klemme where a booth will be maintained all next week Arrangements are also being made to have booths at the bank in Garner and Goodell

Do your part in helping your men in service to enjoy the USO This is a most worthy cause and it depends entirely on your contribution

Let's show the world that Klemme and community can again be counted on to do this job up right and go over the top.

Klemme and community has never yet failed. Let's not fail now when asked to contribute to the USO!

SCRAP IRON IS STILL NEEDED SAYS SALVAGE CHAIRMAN OF HANCOCK COUNTY

There is still need for scrap iron The drive just completed does not mean that there is no need for further effort to collect scrap While Hancock County did reach its goal of 1 000 tons, we know that there is still a lot of scrap left in the county Unfortunately, we have found that there are still a few who have not disposed of their scrap If your scrap isn't in the junk yards yet, please get it there voluntarily as soon as possible Remember, your neighbor has old his, you don't need your scrap any more than he needed his.

Funeral Services Held Monday For Henry Freie, 81

A BOUQUET TO THE NEWSPAPERS AND CITIZENS OF HANCOCK COUNTY

To the Editors of Hancock County Newspapers and the Citizens of Hancock County:

We wish to thank you for the spendid job done in putting Hancock county over the top in the newspapers salvage campaign Our county collected 1,004 tons in this drive We consider it highly successful

The drive's success was due wholly to the very fine cooperation of the farmers in the Triple A organization selected to do the job in the rural areas and the business men who took care of collecting the scrap in the towns of Hancock county.

We wish to thank the farmers who so patriotically donated their time and trucks, the business men who closed their stores so they and their help could help in the drive, the elevator operators who donated the use of their scales for the weighing of the scrap, the members of the American Legion, the rural and town schools of the county who so willingly donated their services, and the Britt Commercial club as well as the Garner Chamber of Commerce who entertained the key men in the drive so that final plans could be drawn.

The response was so unanimous and so willingly given that we felt there should be made public a letter of appreciation

So, finally, we say: "Hats off to the farmers and the business men of Hancock county for a job well done"

Rev. W. T. Wolfram
J M Townsend
Robert Sinclair.

It is highly important that every pound of scrap iron and scrap rubber be collected.

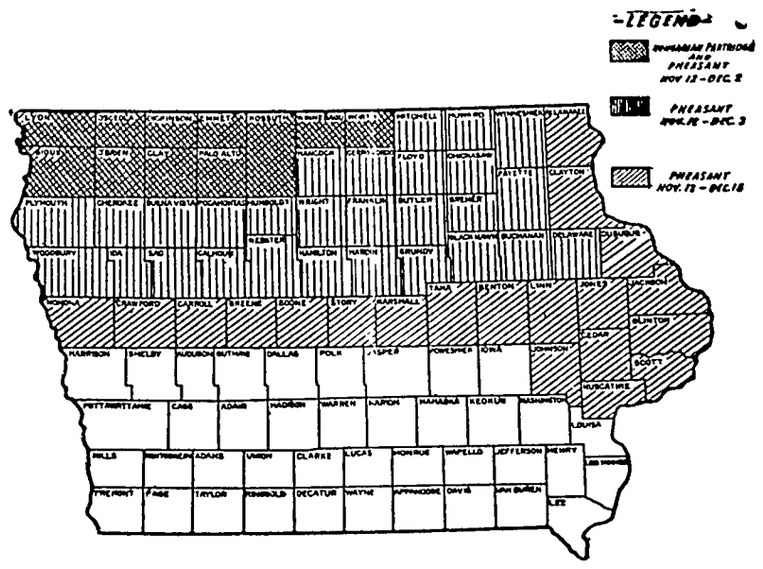
IOWANS TO HAVE BEST PHEASANT SEASON



Map Showing Open Pheasant And Hungarian Partridge Territory

The recently announced 1942 Hungarian partridge and pheasant season is the longest season and the largest territory open in the history of the state. Prior to determining dates and seasons, conservation officers took the annual pheasant census In spite of heavy vegetation and poor censusing weather, the highest count ever taken was made Various sportsmen's groups had advocated a longer period than the 21 days allowed, and in many areas farmer groups have complained about the heavy pheasant population, fearing that unless hunting cut the population down that the birds would cause extensive damage next year during corn planting time. There were some suggestions for an earlier opening date; however, in making the regulations for this year, the Conservation Commission followed the policy adopted several years ago of not opening the pheasant season until after most of the corn and bean crop was harvested.

This year again the State Conservation Commission is stressing the importance of firearms safety and farmer-sportsman relationship, as well as pointing out the necessity of conserving gasoline, tires, and ammunition. Hunters are cautioned to use extreme care with their firearms. They are urged to ask permission to hunt on private land and to be extremely careful of crops, fences, and livestock. They are also urged to fill their cars to passenger capacity, observe the speed laws, anr save ammunition by wise use of shotgun shells. Vegetation is heavy in the pheasant territory this year, and the going will be tough. However, there are plenty of birds in the coverts, and if everyone conduits himself as a sportsman, the 1942 pheasant seaon will be the most successful that Iowans have ever enjoyed.

Daily shooting hours are from 12:00 noon to 5:00 P. M.; daily bag limit, 3 cock birds; possession limit after the first day, 6 cock birds.

Marines Are Still Fighting Hard After 167 Years of Loyal Service

They Have Been 'Always Faithful' and Ever Present in Every War Since Early Colonial Days When They First Served Under George Washington.

Gallantry of the marines at Wake Island was the World War II chapter in continuance of 167 years of marine corps service that is wholly and actively embodied in the deserved motto "Semper Fidelis"—Alway Faithful.

On November 10, 1775, the Continental Congress passed a resolution organizing a marine corps of two battalions Intended mainly to be ships' gunnery and boarding squads, they soon performed illustrious and efficient service on land and sea.

While some marines fought with Washington, others played important roles in the victory of the Bon Homme Richard over the British Seraps. It was a marine aboard John Paul Jones' ship who threw a grenade into the hold of the Serapis and was responsible for its sinking Soon Distinguished Themselves.

Soon after the ending of the Revolution the marine corps, like the army and navy, was disbanded. When, however, in 1799 this country came into conflict with France on the seas, the marine corps was reestablished by President John Adams. In immediate service as boarding parties or as defense against enemy boarding, marines soon distinguished themselves and earned the respect of the enemy for the deadly accuracy of their musket fire.

It was during these days that the term "Leatherneck" was applied to marines; in order to protect themselves during battle the marines in early days wore a heavy piece of leather around their necks, and hence the nickname.

In the early 19th century marines began to lay foundation for the outstanding reputation which the present corps has inherited They fought in the War of 1812 They were in the thick of the successful campaign against the Barbary pirates They were with Commodore Perry in the Far East

Lest marines be considered naval attachments solely, and though they were created as a component part of the naval service to "support the fleet," marines may in national emergency be detached for service with the army, as in France during World War I.

Marine Civil War Action.

In the Civil war the corps served on the blockading ships of the navy and participated in naval attacks on the coastal fortifications of the Confederacy They also made many landings from ships patrolling the Mississippi river

In the Spanish American war the marines landed at Guantanamo bay, Cuba, to secure after severe fighting the harbor as a base for the United States fleet in its operations against Santiago Marine detachments took part in the naval battles off Santiago and in Manila bay.

During the latter half of the last century and the early years of the 20th century the marines saw much service in the West Indies and Central America, notably in Nicaragua and Haiti Sent to forestall possible European intervention and to provide protection against bandits and other lawless elements, the marines achieved a notable record of governmental administration

When America entered the last World war there were approximately 13,500 officers and men in the corps. More than half this number, however, were scattered over the face of the earth. Within five weeks marines "got into the battle." The Fifth regiment sailed for France first and soon was followed by the Sixth. These groups were cited for conspicuous action in the Chateau-Thierry sector, the Aisne-Marne offensive and the Meuse-Argonne fighting.

In its long, glorious history the corps has "landed and had the situation well in hand" for the protection of lives and the property of American citizens in many countries.

Four Tasks.

The marine corps is under the command of Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb. It has four distinct tasks:

(1) To maintain a mobile force in immediate readiness as a part of the U. S. fleet for use in shore operations.

(2) To maintain marine detachments as a part of the ships' crew on cruisers, aircraft carriers, and battleships.

(3) To provide garrisons for the safeguarding of navy yards and naval stations at home and in outlying possessions of the U. S.

(4) To provide forces for the protection of American lives and property abroad.

During its existence the strength of the corps has varied from its original two battalions to more than 120,000 at present.

There are many stories told among the old timers in the marine corps about the fighting that took place in Nicaragua and Haiti not so long ago.

There is the story that tells about .

A small group of marines surrounded by bandits were fighting desperately in the village of Quilali in January, 1928 Several of the marines had been killed, many were wounded. The chances of rescue or relief seemed remote.

Suddenly out of the skies a plane swooped down and landed in the rough and irregular streets of the town. The plane was piloted by Lieut. Christian F. Schilt and he had risked his life to make the landing. Quickly the more seriously wounded were placed in the plane and flown to a point of safety.

Lands 10 Times

Ten times Lieutenant Schilt made the dangerous trip. Each time he landed safely and got away with his precious cargo. Of course, parts of his plane were destroyed by the landings and bandits shot holes through the wings, but this did not prevent the daring marine from returning. Each time on the return flight the pilot brought much needed supplies.

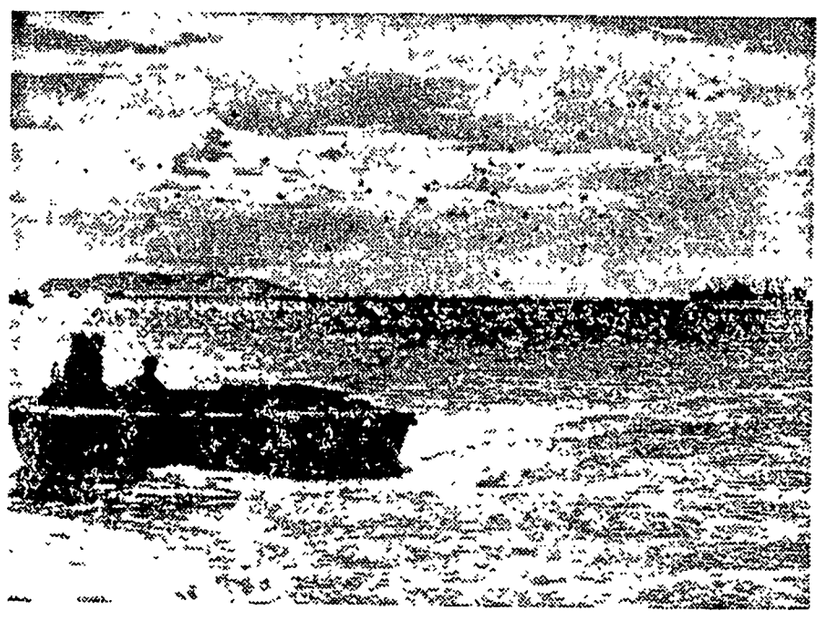
Lieutenant Schilt's action won the praise of his grateful comrades and some months later he received the Congressional Medal of Honor

One of the many famous stories involving the U S. marines of the Fourth brigade is built around Corp. George F. Brautigam. After 10 days of bitter fighting when nearly every marine in the brigade was exhausted, Corporal Brautigam was captured by the Germans.

Slowly they led him back to the "Bull Pen." The Germans thought the battle-worn corporal would return quietly, rather than go back to his lines. But before they knew what had happened Corporal Brautigam had knocked one of his captors down with his fists and grasped the fallen man's bayonet and put an end to both his guards.

A week later he was still fighting in Belleau Wood, when he saw Lieut. George H. Yarborough of the marines badly wounded and surrounded by six Germans. He plunged into their midst with his bayonet. Two of the enemy fell and the others took flight. In the melee Brautigam was shot through the wrist; however, he succeeded in carrying the wounded officer one mile through shell fire to a hospital.

Later Brautigam fought at Soissons, St Mihiel and Blanc Mont. In the latter engagement he suffered a fractured hip and was gassed. Eventually he came home from France with the Distinguished Service Cross and a Croix de Guerre as tokens of his bravery overseas.



The Marines Have Landed! That was the shout that again went around the world when the Leathernecks took the Solomon islands away from the Japs. This scene here shows just how thick the sky was with anti-aircraft shells to shoo away any Jap plane that might have wanted to get in on the "party."

These marines in training are ready to fight any kind of fight that the "Enemy" may decide to make. There isn't a technique of present-day warfare that these rough and ready, up-and-get-em two-fisted fighters haven't been acquainted with.

'Boots' Laundry Difficulties Cause Much Laughter

Every marine learns during his basic training days at "boot camp" how to do his household chores of all types

The chuckles in "boot camp" generally generate from the doleful predicament of fresh young "boots" upon their introduction to the laundry tubs

"But I don't know how to do laundry," wailed one apple-cheeked lad when his drill instructor gave the boy's platoon its first laundry detail shortly after breakfast.

"Well, boy, I'll give you one minute to learn and half of that is gone," growled the bull-voiced instructor. "You don't pull freshly starched shirts out of a drawer in this outfit."

The boy learned—he had to learn with scrub brush, soap and pail. Marines must learn because there are no Chinese laundries where the Fighting Leathernecks go

The recruits do their scrubbing clad only in swimming trunks and pith helmets. With cold water—or a reasonable facsimile thereof—they can't scrub out all stains. So they use whitening agents and sometimes come to grief through inexperience

Some discover to their grief that too generous application of the whiteners has eaten holes in their clothing One lad, anxious to be clean as the marine corps demands, applied the bleaching agent to his cartridge belt and canteen cover. He was sadder and wiser after it turned white.

In Case They Do

As far as can be proved, no belligerent has yet used noxious gas in this war. If it seems expedient to the Axis boys they'll do it any time they think they can get away with it. So these marines shown here are getting ready by training under simulated gas attack to show the Axis boys that they can't get away with it.

FARM PARITY FIGHT

To Roosevelt advisers, the farm parity fight was an ominous runner-up of what many of them expect during the next two years—IF the November elections turn sour for the Democrats. It left people a little worried around the White House.

Up until now, the White House has been confident that the house of representatives would remain Democratic—despite the warning of Chairman Ed Flynn that the Middle West and probably California would go Republican.

So the fight over farm parity was a shock; and administration leaders shrink from the prospect of facing that type of congressional battling for two long years to come. But, if the Republicans organize the house, or even if the Democratic majority is appreciably cut, that is exactly what will happen.

Three reasons are given, backstage, for the faulty handling which resulted in the terrific farm battle.

1. The President himself, who couched his message to congress in terms of such a strong ultimatum, rather than the usual Roosevelt pep-talk strategy at which he is so adept. Incidentally, the speech was written in large part by brusque, bulldozing Leon Henderson.

2. Speaker Sam Rayburn, who dropped his usual kindliness and stormily told congressional friends that the President had promised him not to send a farm price stabilization message until later. Rayburn's attitude was a tip-off in deeds if not words "To vote as you please, boys."

3. Price Czar Leon Henderson, who was considered the political ogre and bogeyman for whom the farm stabilization bill was being passed.

WAR BONDS

A war savings bond salesman in Buchanan county, Iowa, was nonplussed when the spokesman for a colony of 75 families flatly refused to buy even so much as a 10-cent stamp . . The salesman was about to leave, but was called back and handed $6,450 in cash as the colony's donation to the war effort . . Seeking an explanation, the bewildered bond seller was told that the community was composed of Amish families and that their religious creed forbids them to make a profit out of war . . They were willing to make a gift of the money, but could not buy interest-bearing bonds.

Presidential adviser Isador Lubin, after 36 straight hours of hard work, went to bed one morning at nine o'clock, slept until nine the next morning.

The infantry company at Fort Devens, Mass., boasts that every member of the company is buying war bonds, and it is 101 per cent correct.

ARMY SHOES

If you are a draftee with high arches or low arches, one flat foot or two flat feet, or even if your right foot is a half size larger than your left foot—it doesn't matter. The quartermaster will fit you anyway.

Even if no one of the 238 different sizes of army shoes fits you, instructions to army posts are that every foot shall be fitted, and fitted comfortably. This order is to be obeyed even if it means making a plaster cast of the odd foot and making a special shoe from an individual last.

In such cases, the individual last is tagged with the name of the soldier and filed away until he needs another pair of shoes. Such service would cost $25 a pair in private life.

Army experts declare that a soldier with sore feet is worthless.

NO CELLOPHANE COMMISSION

Siegfried Bechhold, president of the Armored Tank corporation, is now a private in the army After making a small fortune in manufacturing tanks, Bechhold joined the army as a private, age 42, was sent to Camp Lee, Va Friends expected to find him unhappy after exchanging his soft life for the rigors of the army But when Bechhold got away for his first week-end, he declared

"This experience is making a man of me, and I wouldn't miss it for the world! I've served in other armies, but there's no army to compare with this one You talk about 'morale'—the soldiers don't need 'morale'; they already have it.

"You have to get out of Washington to learn what Uncle Sam's army is really like. If I had ten sons, I would tell them all to join the army"

'THE WAR CONTRACT' OR 'WHERE AM I?'

Mr. Wimple wanted to find out about a pin. It was a little pin required as part of a gun mechanism. The government needed this type of pin in large quantities in a hurry, Wimple, who made pins, had been told. He had received a letter from the PDQ or something urging him to convert his shop for an all-out production of pins. He replied, asking about a few particulars and got back a letter from the PDQ saying that the BBA now had charge of the matter.

II

Mr. Wimple decided he had better go to Washington and get things straightened out. He went to the building which housed the BBA to see the chairman, a Mr. Zoofus. He was told to wait in an anteroom. After a few hours a clerk came out and told him that Mr. Zoofus had been assigned to another bureau and that he would have to see a Mr. Bilch. Mr. Bilch was in the office of the PQX or something 15 blocks south, "take your next left."

III

Mr. Wimple couldn't get a taxi so he walked At the office of the PQX he was told that Mr. Bilch was in conference with officials of the HQA about a VCB matter. But Mr. Gimpy was present.

"State your business," said the attendant.

"I stated it three hours ago," said Mr. Wimple.

"Oh," said the attendant, "just a minute, please."

He disappeared and came back presently. "Mr. Gimpy took a plane to Oshkosh about an hour ago," he explained "He left word he couldn't discuss those bolts today."

"Not bolts," corrected Wimple. "Pins!"

"Oh, pins!" exclaimed the attendant. "The man you want to see is Mr. Tookle over at the DPBA That's in the Effadoofus Building."

IV

He finally reached the Effadoofus Building and found the DPBA headquarters. Mr. Tookle was in. What did he wish to see him about? About pins. Take a chair, please! After a while Mr. Tookle sent out word that he was not prepared to discuss those brass washers yet.

"Pins," groaned Mr. Wimple, "not washers."

Mr. Tookle came out, a little exasperated. "Pins?" he asked. "You don't mean gaskets, do you?"

"Pins," said Mr. Wimple wearily. "I'm Wimple, the pin manufacturer. Maybe this correspondence will clear it all up."

He showed a packet of letters from Washington.

"Oh," said Mr. Tookle, "this is about pins, not ratchets. You will have to see Charlie Zamm. He's co-ordinating that matter. Three miles north, take your left at the ninth traffic light. Good day!"

V

Mr. Wimple now stole a motorcycle. He was getting desperate and was determined to cover ground more rapidly. He made the next building in fair time. Was Mr. Zamm in? Which Zamm, Charles or Joseph? Charles, he thought. No, Charlie Zamm was in Moscow but Joseph Zamm would be glad to discuss those metal clips with him.

"Pins," said Mr. Wimple.

"Take a chair; Mr. Joseph Zamm will be back any minute."

VI

It was pretty dark now. Mr. Wimple was thinking of calling it all off when Mr. Zamm appeared. "Sorry to hold you up," said Zamm. "I'm glad you came down, we need those hub-caps as fast as you can turn 'em out."

"Pins," said Mr. Wimple, weakly.

"I thought you were the hub-cap contractor," said Mr. Zamm. "There is some confusion here."

"Nuts," said Mr. Wimple, leaping through the window.

(P. S.—He joined up with the marines. It seemed to be the only way to help win the war without too much delay.)

Well, when I get to talkin' about KELLOGG'S PEP and vitamins I don't need any high-powered words. You see, to feel really good you got to eat right, which includes gettin' all your vitamins And while PEP hasn't got 'em all, this swell-tastin' cereal is extra-long in the two that are oftenest extra-short in ordinary meals—B_1 and D. Try PEP, won't you?

Civilians Aid War Effort Conserving Meat, Heat

Being Frugal With Coal and Oil for Home Heating, and Also Not Buying More Than Your Weekly Meat Allotment Helps.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

You have heard before that the one question, repeated most often in letters which come into the Office of Civilian Defense in Washington is "What can I do to help win the war?"

I receive a great proportion of such letters. Many of you have asked this question yourselves. Some of you haven't been able to get a satisfactory answer.

Beginning this month there are two things you can do if you really want to help win the war. They are these: conserve heat and meat.

We have plenty of meat in the country, we have plenty of coal and oil But some of the meat—about a fourth of it—has to go to our own fighting men and those of our Allies. Much of the coal and a great deal of the oil can't get to us because of a shortage of transportation.

Look at the heat situation first:

The war has depleted our coastal tankers which furnished 95 per cent of our means of transportation to the eastern states. Many of these tankers were needed by our fighting forces and our Allies, many went to the bottom as a result of the U-boats Many that once plied the eastern seaboard go to Melbourne or Murmansk—some have already gone to Davy Jones' locker.

Last November the railroads were hauling 68,000 barrels of oil a day. Now they are carrying 800,000 barrels a day.

But remember it takes four or five trains, of some 70 cars each, to haul as much as one tanker. And there is of course a tremendous increase in the amount of oil and gas consumed by war activities, civilian and military.

Fuel oil is already rationed Gasoline will be rationed nation-wide soon That process is automatic but there are other things you can do to help.

You can make your house heat-tight with weather stripping; you can convert from oil to coal (if you can get coal in your locality); you can be frugal. According to estimates given out by the War Information office you can save the nation, by reasonable conservation, 25½ MILLION tons of coal this winter. You can save over 18 million barrels of oil between October 1, 1942, and May 1, 1943.

Conserve your heat—now what about your meat?

Beginning this month there is one thing that you can do. It is easy to check up on yourself as to whether you really want to help in this respect. All you need to be able to do is to count up to three. Not even that far, just two and one-half.

That is the number of pounds of meat you ought to eat each week from now on. More than that will rob somebody else—less than that isn't enough to keep you going.

By February you will have no choice. You'll have a ration book and you'll get the amount the government says you can have. Meanwhile it is your patriotic duty to ration yourself.

This is the reason: One-fourth of the meat supply of the country has to be turned over to the fighting forces of the United Nations If they could, the American people would buy 21 billion pounds of meat in the next 12 months. There are about 17½ billions available.

Second Step: Rationing

The government has taken one step, is preparing for another. The first is to limit the deliveries by the tankers to civilian outlets. The second is rationing. The machinery for that takes time—by February it is hoped the rationing system can be in effect.

Now in this intermediate period, although there is a limit to the amount of meat the market gets, there is no limit on what the individual can buy as long as the butcher has it. That is up to you. So it becomes a question of sharing. The Food committee in Washington, using the best information available, has set 2½ pounds per person per week as the limit.

You may be able to get to the meat market early. Many housewives can't A lot of them are working in defense industries or have other duties. If you overbuy there won't be enough to go around

Two and a half pounds isn't nearly as much as many people would like But it is a lot more than most people need or, in fact, are used to In the 1930s we consumed an average of 130 pounds per capita per year But many people are sharing this new big 115 billion dollar national income and one way they are spending it is on meat Without gasoline for the car they can't get out to so many shows and other entertainment There is more money left for the dining-table

We like meat for its flavor as much as for its nourishment. The wealthy and the middle classes have always bought more meat than they needed for their health. The poorer people frequently had less than they needed. Now, with a shortage and plenty of money, the competition is higher. It will be easy for the greedy to rob the less fortunate.

Why, you may ask, don't we establish meatless days for everybody? That would not be fair to poorer classes who get so little meat anyhow But some regular limit has to be adopted by eating houses and agreed upon among them Otherwise there will be unfair competition The place that co-operates and cuts down on one day or one dish, will simply lose out to the restaurant which serves meat that day.

At home, considerable responsibility rests on the housewife She has to adjust her menus to provide a balanced diet

Meat contains four important nutritive elements Protein, iron, thiamin (vitamin B1) and niacin.

As far as the protein goes it can easily be provided by serving more milk, eggs, cheese and legumes. A nice steaming pile of pancakes, for instance, if they are made from milk and eggs, will give some protein as well as that comfortable feeling of well-being within.

But such foods do not give you the other things that you need which meat offers You will have to have whole grain products and that means, when you take them in the form of bread, it must be enriched bread and even then you won't get the iron and niacin contained in whole wheat. The dark leafy green vegetables, potatoes and legumes (peas and beans) will help

But where you'll really find the pinch is in the flavor. That, I think, is what the Germans complained about most in their rations. You can get the meat flavor we all crave with meat dishes that are diluted, like soups, and hash and meat loaf

But do it. See that you keep within your 2½ pound limit and you'll be helping win the war.

To Market

Some weeks ago Secretary of Agriculture Wickard received a postal card addressed to him at his Indiana farm home, urging him to get his pig crop to market early He raises quite a lot of pigs and runs his farm as best he can while he tries to take care of the needs of several million farmers at the same time. He said he felt kind of foolish when the card came but he did what it asked him to do.

"I felt foolish," he said, "because I wrote that post card myself. (It was a card sent out pretty widely to pig-raisers all over the country.) And when I'd sent the pigs off I wondered whether I was really patriotic or not; because those hogs were a lot lighter than they would have been if I hadn't marketed them so early."

And right there you have one of the problems that faces a nation trying to feed itself and its lend-lease Allies under the difficult conditions which the war causes. The pig problem is tied closest to the farmer's number two headache, distribution. We could get more pounds (fatter hogs)—and fats are needed—if we slaughtered later, but the packers and the railroads aren't going to be able to handle the mammoth hog crop if it all comes at once.

Fifty-five out of every hundred persons in Britain are working for the government.

—Buy War Bonds—

There are some American officials who believe that England made a great mistake in calling off the Stafford Cripps negotiations in India. And there is strong pressure from a number of quarters to have them reopened.

It is estimated that 300,000 of the boys now in uniform are members of the American Legion.

Here's some sheer pessimism—American civilians, men, women and children, should be taught how to conduct guerrilla warfare in preparation for possible invasion of the country, says William B. Ziff's "The Coming Battle of Germany."

Hundred Percent War Work

By Robert St. John

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

One day several months ago, in London, I got a letter from Chicago A member of my family was missing in action in the Philippines The same day, word came by grape vine from eastern Europe that a close friend of mine in Rumania had been executed by order of the Gestapo, and that a girl journalist I knew in the Balkans had been sent up to Poland, for the pleasure of Nazi soldiers on leave

That night I wanted to volunteer in somebody's army or air force. That night I suddenly got disgusted with the soft life which some of us continue to lead in this, the most critical year of the most important war in all history

When I say "us" I mean people in America as well as Britain. But a twinge in my right leg made me realize that the Nazis had limited my field of activity. The Messerschmitt which shot up a troop train I was on in Greece last year took care of that

So the next morning I went around to the ministry of labor and begged for a job, without compensation, in a munitions factory. I explained that I do all my broadcasting to America in the early hours of the morning and that I could gather my news and do the rest of my regular work after I came home from a factory in the evening.

At Work on a War Job.

Within a week I was at work in a vast shop full of machines that were grinding out vital instruments of war I was given a job inspecting the minute parts of a gadget designed to save the lives of British, American, Russian and Chinese pilots when they go off on flights against the enemy

Some of the parts are as delicate as the wheels inside a Swiss wrist watch They have to be true to a fraction of a thousandth of an inch—an interesting job, and it seemed to me to be an important one.

So I joined up with that army of men and women who work eleven or twelve hours a day, sometimes seven days a week, and never get their pictures in the papers or any medals pinned on their chest—that army of unsung heroes who man the factories of Britain.

The first week at the factory left me tired of muscle and mighty weary when the day's work was done, but I soon got hardened to the new life

In addition to this factory work I spend a full eight hours out of every twenty-four gathering news, attending press conferences, pounding a typewriter and talking into a microphone

On Sundays I travel into the country to lecture to British troops in their camps and to wounded airmen in their hospitals, or I go into the tenement districts of London to talk to clubs of Cockney youngsters.

I mention these activities to show that I was as busy as the average man with a job before I took on the additional factory work.

What Is 100 Per Cent Production?

Much is written about how Britain and America are now up to 60 or 70 or 80 per cent war production. I've often wondered what that means. What is the 100 per cent basis for the calculations?

In England as well as America there are millions of men who could do at least a part-time shift a few nights a week in war factories.

Only when all the people are working as many hours a week as they are physically able, can either Britain or America talk about approaching 100 per cent production.

There are still many people in our democracies who prefer to knit socks and sell government bonds, and let others do the dirty work of war. The conflict still hasn't come close enough to home, even here in Britain with its bombed buildings, to jar some people into making it a total war from their point of view.

Yet before these words get into print, the time may have arrived when the survival of our entire way of life will depend on whether enough people have been willing to forego the pleasant paths of normal existence and sacrifice every ounce of their energies to defeat enemies who long ago abandoned business-as-usual.

Excuse the preaching. But after you've felt Nazi bullets and seen Nazi savagery, it's difficult to remain "just a reporter."

My weeks in a munitions factory, close to the workers and their everyday problems, has given me a profound respect for the Little People of Britain.

Some of them haven't had a very good deal in the past. Between the two wars, their wages and working conditions were far from what they ought to have been. Most of the working class just took it during that quarter of a century.

Dead Animal Might Mean An Enemy's Extinction

Don't bury old Dobbin when he dies.

That's the advice given farmers by animal pathologists. Fats are needed in waging war, and dead animals are not only an excellent source of fat, but also of glue, neat's-foot oil, fertilizer, poultry feed and other products.

Farmers who have dead animals are urged to get in touch with the rendering plants in their locality. In case a renderer cannot be located, the local salvage committee or farm adviser will know where to obtain the needed information.

Renderers in some parts of the country are specializing in the collection of dead animals feel that considerable quantities of recoverable fat are being wasted in rural areas because such animals are not disposed of through rendering plants. Indicative of the waste is the report of a trucker to the general salvage section of the War Production board, stating that on a 70-mile trip in a southern state he saw a number of hogs killed by automobiles lying on the side of the highway in a decayed condition. These dead animals would have yielded a considerable quantity of fat if they had been handled by a rendering plant, the trucker pointed out.

The War Production board stresses that a nation at war needs an adequate supply of fats. German resistance in the First World war was undermined by the cutting of Germany's normal supply of fats by the British blockade. Determined that such a shortage should not again hamper them, the Nazis started a fat salvage program as far back as 1937 Animal carcasses of all kinds were boiled to render fats. Conservation was strictly enforced, and up to the present, at least, lack of fats has not been reported as a vulnerable point in the Nazi war machine.

Nazi Held Russ Maikop Just Small Oil Center

At Maikop, the Germans are beginning to penetrate the foothills of the great Caucasus mountain barrier that runs diagonally across the Isthmus in towering snow-capped peaks for a thousand miles, says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

Maikop is 65 air miles from the Black sea in an area holding the first important oil wells of the Caucasus which the Nazis have struck—wells reported to have been destroyed under the Russians' scorched-earth policy.

Even in normal times the highest output, however, of the Maikop fields is less than one-tenth of the Caucasus production. The main wells are those at Baku, on the Caspian shore — nearly 600 air-line miles away. Between Baku and Maikop are still other oil fields, chiefly at Grozny, some 250 miles southeast of the present battle area.

The city of Maikop had a population before the war of more than 50,000 people. It was a distributing center for farm products from nearby regions. A ten-mile spur linked Maikop with a branch of the Transcaucasus trunkline between Baku and Rostov.

Grasshopper Poison Safer

Grasshopper control is not at present endangered by military priorities on arsenic because research in the U. S. department of agriculture, before priorities, had demonstrated the utility of a safer poison. Small scale experiments had previously shown that sodium fluosilicate could be substituted for sodium arsenite in bran baits without loss of killing power. Ordinarily, however, the substitute was more expensive. It has the advantage of being more distasteful and less poisonous to livestock. Wartime conditions made sodium arsenite relatively scarce and much more expensive, and at the same time rendered the fluosilicate readily available at a reasonable price. J. R. Parker, in charge of the grasshopper research activities of the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine reports that large scale use of fluosilicate in a grasshopper baiting campaign gave excellent results.

ANY dining room may be made fresh and smart with built-in cupboards, a little paint and inexpensive curtains. But what may be done to bring a set of outmoded chairs up-to-date? The one sketched at the upper right is typical of many that are substantial and sturdy though scarred by long use. All they need is an up-to-date frock to make them perfectly at home in a modern dining room.

If your chairs do not have the supports shown at the sides of the seat they will be easier to slip-cover. This cover is of medium blue cotton rep with darker blue for the bias binding and the cotton fringe around the bottom. Large button moulds are covered with the slip cover material for the button-up-the-back opening. If you are not expert at making bound buttonholes, snaps may be used under the buttons. The narrow ties sewn to the corners of the inside of the seat cover hold it neatly in place.

OBITUARY OF HENRY HERMAN KATTER

(By Rev. Wm. Huenemann)

HENRY HERMAN KATTER, son of Henry and Elizabeth Katter was born April 23, 1853 in Ladbergen. Westfahlen, Germany. He was baptized in infancy.

In 1860 he came with his parents from Germany to New Knoxville, Ohio. Here he was instructed in the teachings of the Word of God and confirmed by the Rev. Kuckermann on March 21, 1869.

As a young man he came with his parents, brothers and sisters, to Garner, Iowa in 1875, and they arrived here on Sept. 2 and settled on a farm about 4 miles southwest of Garner.

At that time there were no churches in this section of the country, but Mr. and Mrs. Katter did not want to provide only for the physical need of their children, but also, and in particular, for the spiritual need. So Mr. Katter was really the leading man to promote the organization of Peace Reformed Church, of which the son Henry also became a charter member, and he remained a faithful member of the same up to the time of his death.

On the 19th of Dec. 1878 Henry Herman Katter was united in marriage to Anna Lisetta Meyer by the Rev Mosebach. This was the first marriage in Peace Reformed Congregation. The young couple then settled on a farm southwest of Garner and were among the pioneers of this section of the country and went through the various experiences of pioneer life; but God also blessed the labor of their hands

Two sons and six daughters were born to this union. The two sons preceded the father in death. Herman died Mar. 27, 1914 and Henry on Febr 17, 1937.

Mr. and Mrs Katter retired from active farming in 1925 and for a number of years lived in their new little country home. About 4 years ago they moved to Garner to make their home with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs George Goll.

In 1928 this couple had the privilege to celebrate their Golden Wedding. The pastor, Rev C Schmidt at that time spoke on Ps 50, 14-15. The same text Rev Mosebach had used at their wedding. In 1938 their 60th anniversary was celebrated. At that time the present pastor spoke on Ps. 71, 7-9 and 14-18.

During all these years Mr Katter remained a faithful member f Peace Reformed Church and was a regular attendent at the services He also served the congregation as Deacon and Elder at different times and for a number of years

It was an unusual privilege for Mr. and Mrs. Katter to be permitted to spend so many years together. It was indeed a great privilege for the children to have their parents with them such a long time.

On the 8th of May, 1942, this last spring, the Lord called Mrs Katter out of this life, and Mr Katter felt this loss very keenly. Although he placed his trust in the Lord, and also his children provided a comfortable home for him, yet a certain lonesomeness was keenly felt He did not have to wait very long, till after a brief illness the Lord also called him, namely, last Tuesday, October 13th, 1942, at about 5:00 o'clock in the morning His allotted time was 89 years, 5 mo, and 20 days.

Those mourning his departure are his six daughters: Anna, Mrs. Henry Kirchhefer; Mathilda, Mrs Otto Schlawin; Minnie, Mrs Geo Goll; Emilia, Mrs. Otto Schroer. Selma, Mrs. Walter Woiwood; and Sophia, Mrs. Elmer Bredlow One brother, Fred of Minneapolis, and two sisters, Mary, Mrs Wittenberg, and Tillie, Mrs. Huenemann; also 19 grand children and 12 great grand children, and many friends and relatives.

The congregation has lost a true pioneer member, who stood for sound doctrine; and the children will remember him as a faithful father. True comfort is to be sought and found in the Word of God.

FAREWELL PARTY HELD FOR WAYNE BACHMAN

A birthday and farewell party was held Sunday evening, October 11th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bachman for their son Wayne who left for the navy, Oct. 13th

The evening was spent socially and lunch was served at a late hour.

Those who attended were Mr. and Mrs. Tob Deibler of Kanawha; Mr. and Mrs. Lew Riemer, Mr. and Mrs. John Bachman and Gladys, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Yohn, all of Garner; Mrs. "Buster" Bachman of Des Moines; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Neuhring and Jeanne Kay, of Belmond; Mrs. Rob Roths and family, Mrs. Tillie Bachman and sons, Mrs. Geo. Griggs and Harold, Mr. and Mrs. Audrey Griggs, Mr and Mrs. Clifford Montgomery and children, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Hanson and Larry, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bachman and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bachman and children, all of this community.

ALTAR DEDICATED AT THE LIBERTY CHURCH LAST SUNDAY MORNING

(By Rev. H. E. Harvey)

A beautiful Altar and Worship Center were dedicated at the Liberty Methodist Church in the worship service Sunday morning It was the gift of the Youth Fellowship in memory of the late Madeline Laura Abele who was a devoted member of the youth department.

It is just the story of a little white church in a friendly community and the desire to make the church more worshipful and beautiful. At the back center of the sanctuary stands an altar which is beautiful for its simplicity, symbolizing worship and sacrifice On the altar is a cross, the symbol of New Testament Christianity showing God's love for humanity when He sent His own Son to die bringing victory over sin and death. The cross is the key to the meaning of worship Behind the cross and altar hangs a reredos of maroon velour. On the altar on either side of the cross are two large white tapers. The floor of the platform is carpeted with a beautiful blue carpet, a gift of the Woman's Society of Christian Service

As youth and older folks as well look upon it the one expression that is made is "It is beautiful!" Why not? Why not make the church a place of beauty? A place of worship? If beautifying the sanctuary will make our lives beautiful too then it is worth every effort

RE-ELECT
W. S. Pritchard
State Representative
For Second Term

YOUR VOTE AT THE GENERAL ELECTION NOV. 3 WILL BE APPRECIATED

TO THE VOTERS:

As State Representative I have tried to serve the best interests of the people of Hancock County, and on my record I am asking for a second term. The records show that I have worked for the benefit of the farmers: I voted for exempting the R. E. A. from taxation, and I favored cutting sealed corn in two.

I have spent many years on Iowa farms, many of those years right here in Hancock County. I am a taxpayer. I know the county and I know what the people need and have a right to expect of me.

As a farmer and business man I am qualified by experience and trust that the voters of Hancock County feel that these years of experience are valuable in the making of laws favorable to Hancock County and the State of Iowa.

High ideals have always been my guide. I have been a contributor to and a supporter of all worthwhile community projects, and throughout my residence in Hancock County have been a continuous booster for my county.

Vitamin Ways

Comes winter and fall when vegetables and fruits are more scarce than during summer and fall, and many a homemaker is apt to fall shy on serving her family these vital body regulating and protective foods. Yet, this is the time when the body needs them most. These foods build up the body's resistance to disease—and keep you, to pick a common example, from having a cold as soon as warm weather and sun flee.

Minerals are busy building and repairing, replenishing body tissues that get torn down and used up, daily with every movement you make. Vitamins help you use the foods you eat.

Good-to-eat foods help the family take in all these vital minerals and vitamins. Drab, uninteresting dishes will send them off to eating other foods to take the edge off their hunger—wherever they can put their hands on something. I need not point out that in this way they may really be losing out on foods necessary to the body.

Cooking vegetables well, and doing pretty things to their appearance will help their consumption rating. A bit of sauce or extra seasoning will put an ordinary vegetable over and at the same time insure your family of what it needs most.

Scalloped Peas and Onions.
(Serves 5 to 6)

1 pound small white onions
1 No. 2 can peas
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons finely crushed bread crumbs

Parboil onions 25 minutes. Drain. Drain peas and reserve ½ cup pea liquor. Melt 2 tablespoons butter, blend in flour, salt and pepper. Add pea liquor and milk and cook until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Pour into casserole. Melt remaining butter, stir in bread crumbs, sprinkle over casserole. Bake in a moderately hot (375-degree) oven for about 25 minutes.

Lynn Says:

Vital Statistics: There are about seven inches in the Nutrition Yardstick which bear checking every day in every way so as to keep you and your family in the running.

The first inch includes milk: 1 pint per day for every adult and 1 quart for every child. Of course you don't have to drink all this milk. Use part of it in cooking.

Second honors go to meat, fish or poultry, and this is not hard to use up. For lunch or dinner, whichever fits best for your family, one serving per person should be counted.

At least one egg a day or at least four to five per week marks the third inch. Have it for breakfast or toss it in the hot bread for dinner, or custard for lunch.

Cereal's important, too. Serve it in the breakfast, or a pudding or even cookies. Bread and rolls come under this category, also.

Fifth inch includes the vegetables: two besides potatoes, one should be a leafy vegetable—spinach, lettuce, broccoli, romaine, etc.—and the other raw. Cabbage is perfect.

Now, the fruits. Two a day isn't hard to manage. Of course you start off with breakfast, and often include one for lunch or dinner dessert.

The last and seventh inch includes butter or some fat rich in vitamin A. This is for fuel and energy.

This Week's Menu
Browned Oysters
*Scalloped Peas and Onions
*Cranberry-Pineapple Salad
Hot Biscuits
*Apple Juice Mince Pie
*Recipes Given

Vegetable Bouillon.
(Serves 2)

½ cup water
¾ to 1 cup juice strained from canned string or wax beans
1 bouillon cube
2 small sprigs parsley

Add water to bean juice and heat to boiling. Dissolve bouillon cube in boiling liquid. Serve hot garnished with parsley.

A one-dish meal that's good for fall is this one with many vegetable favorites:

Ham Hock With Vegetables.
(Serves 5)

2½ pounds ham hock
5 medium-sized potatoes
1 bunch carrots
5 medium-sized onions
1 medium-sized head of cabbage

Wipe ham hock. Cover with boiling water, cover and simmer two hours or until tender. Clean vegetables, add to meat, cook, uncovered 20 to 30 minutes or until vegetables are tender.

Fried Squash Cakes.

Slice squash very thin, being certain to slice it across. Place the slices in salt water, wipe them dry, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in flour, beaten egg and then in cracker crumbs. Repeat the process twice and then drop into hot fat for frying. When they have cooked through and are brown, drain on brown paper and serve.

Festive Squash.
(Serves 6)

3 small squashes
1 cup drained canned tomatoes
1 cup shredded, processed cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon chopped onion
2 cups soft bread crumbs
Salt, pepper
3 tablespoons melted butter
Parsley
Broiled bacon

Wash the squashes and cut them in half, lengthwise and cook in boiling salted water until almost tender. Scoop out the centers, leaving a ¼-inch shell. Cut the pulp into small pieces and drain thoroughly. Combine with tomatoes, cheese, onion, 1 cup bread crumbs and seasonings to taste. Pile this into the squash shells and sprinkle with remaining crumbs mixed with the melted butter. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until the crumbs are brown. Arrange in a round platter and serve with parsley and crisp, broiled bacon.

A few green leaves of lettuce, romaine, watercress or other salad greens guarantee much of the important, but hard-to-get vitamin D. Perhaps, you like the greens plain, or perhaps with a bit of color such as:

Cranberry-Pineapple Salad.

Cut slices of canned cranberry sauce and top with slices of pineapple. Arrange in lettuce nests. Soften cream cheese with milk and add a few chopped nuts. Shape into balls and place among lettuce leaves. Serve with mayonnaise.

Apple Juice Mince Pie.
(Makes 1 9-inch pie)

1 package orange flavored gelatin
2 cups apple juice
½ teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup mincemeat
Cream cheese

Dissolve the gelatin in apple juice that has been heated to the boiling point. Add lemon juice and mincemeat. Cook until thick and creamy, then pour into a baked pie shell. Chill until firm, then decorate top with cream cheese put through a pastry tube.

Maybe you'll have the pleasure of meeting Parks Johnson, who's a swell guy, you may be lucky enough to meet Mrs. Johnson, who goes along. Before the broadcast Johnson stages stunts with members of the audience, and pays them well for participating. Mrs. Johnson buys the gifts for the women on the program, and rounds up good places for the company to eat. As part of the audience, you'll be part of the program, and have a grand time.

Alan Reed spent two months in Hollywood waiting to make a picture that never was started, though he was paid regularly. He collected a typical Hollywood wardrobe—slacks, sports shirts, Mexican huaraches, silver-trimmed belts. Young Russell Hoyt, RKO actor, has been trying to make people forget his striking resemblance to Alan Ladd. Now it's got him a job. RKO used him in bits in "Seven Days' Leave" and "Here We Go Again," then had no role for him, so lent him to Paramount for "Lucky Gordon"—he'll play a Ladd henchman who, because of his resemblance to the star, can create alibis for him.

Claudette Colbert probably set a record recently by being a bridesmaid once and a bride twice, all within 24 hours. It was all for Preston Sturges' "The Palm Beach Story"; Claudette's bridegrooms were Joel McCrea and Rudy Vallee, and her stunt as bridesmaid took place when Joel married someone else. She's working now in "No Time for Love"!

In "Somewhere I'll Find You" Keenan Wynn, of the radio's "Shadow" programs, played a soldier who operated a 1918 machine gun which had been blown from its tripod; because of the kickbacks, his shoulder was strapped for two weeks. When he saw the picture in New York, a soldier in front of him said: "Fake! You can't fire a machine gun from that position." Keenan leaned forward and tapped the young man on the shoulder. "Yes you can, brother," said he. "I did it."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

STEPS TOWARD SOLUTION OF THE ALCOHOL PROBLEM

LESSON TEXT—Ecclesiastes 10:17, Amos 5:21-24, Romans 14:19-21, II Corinthians 6:17, I Peter 4:1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT—Let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream.—Amos 5:24.

Let's do something about it! That is the right word regarding the liquor problem now. The time is past for theorizing or deploring—we need action. The liquor interests have redoubled their efforts of late because they fear the aroused public opinion of decent Americans. Why do not America's 65,000,000 church members say the word now, and curb this awful thing which is threatening to destroy us?

I. Right-Minded Rulers (Eccles. 10:17).

National leaders should set the example for the people—an example of sobriety, of clear-headed thought and full devotion to the cause of our country. Are they doing it? We quote: "Washington is the wettest spot in the nation. The per capita consumption of alcohol in the District of Columbia is almost twice that of the wettest state in the Union. In 1940, 4.26 gallons were consumed for every man, woman and child. Nevada, the wettest of all our states, consumed 2.65 gallons per person. There at Washington where they need the clearest heads, the steadiest nerves, and the highest morals, they are drinking the most booze" (Dr. I. M. Hargett). What about 1942? Those who have been able to observe, indicate that conditions are probably worse now!

The secretary of war and the secretary of the navy have insisted on the desirability of the sale of beer in service canteens. No wonder the Brewers' Digest of May, 1941, gloated: "One of the finest things that could have happened was the insistence by high ranking officers to make beer available in army camps. Here is a chance for the brewers to cultivate a taste for beer in millions of young men."

America had better wake up!

II. Right-Spirited People (Amos 5:21-24).

God has no pleasure in the religious observances and the pious words of a people who profess to worship, but who come with unrepentant hearts and unclean hands.

Can God bless the man (or his money) who profits either directly or indirectly from the sale of intoxicants? Amos has the answer. Let us heed his plea that righteousness should run through our national, as well as our personal lives, "as a mighty stream."

III. Right-Living Christians (Rom. 14:19-21; II Cor. 6:17; I Pet. 4:1-5).

We have already suggested that there are 65,000,000 church members in America. If they were all right-living Christians there can be little question that they would long since have eliminated the liquor business, for it is certainly most unchristian. Apparently they are either not real Christians, or they are asleep to their responsibility. Our Scriptures in this section tell us that in a true Christian life there is

1. No offense (Rom. 14:19-21). The question here is that of eating meat offered to idols, which does not concern us, but the great Christian principle here stated is of the highest importance and bears directly on our daily life.

None of us lives to himself (Rom. 14:7). Everything we do counts either for or against Christ. Such an ordinary (we regret) thing as staying away from church service speaks to the world and especially to our neighbors of our loss of interest and respect for the worship of God. Apply that principle to the use of any alcoholic beverage, and every Christian must be a total abstainer.

2. No Compromise (II. Cor. 6:17). We have come to the unscriptural and deeply dangerous viewpoint that if a Christian wants to compromise a bit with the world, the flesh and the devil, that's his "business." God does not think so. He says: "Come out from among them, and be ye separate." The weakness of the church on this matter of liquor is that too many of the 65,000,000 are guilty of the sin (and that's what it is!) of compromise.

3. No Worldliness (I Pet. 4:1-5). Here again the assumption of many is that there are two groups in the church—worldly Christians and spiritually minded ones, and that each is as good as the other. Both classes are there, no doubt about that, but God never has and never will countenance worldliness on the part of His people.

Essentially, there are just two opposing principles in this world—self-will and God's will. We are either controlled by the flesh or by the Spirit of God. Peter makes it clear that the one who claims to belong to Christ should no longer be controlled by self-will, but by God's will. Are we ready, fellow Christians, to yield to Him?

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, with Ease for Stomach, too

When constipation brings on discomfort after meals, stomach upset, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative-Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels, combined with Syrup Pepsin for perfect ease to your stomach in taking. For years, many Doctors have given pepsin preparations in their prescriptions to make medicine more agreeable to a touchy stomach. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully the Laxative Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines to bring welcome relief from constipation. And the good old Syrup Pepsin makes this laxative so comfortable and easy on your stomach. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin, as directed on label or as your doctor advises, and feel world's better. Get genuine Dr. Caldwell's.

WE LOOKED AHEAD AND FORESAW TODAY'S NEEDS

We could not, of course, foresee war. But we did have the vision to anticipate the growth of American industry and recognize the need for still faster, more efficient transportation. So we built accordingly, with one objective in mind—to keep Rock Island Lines in the forefront of American railroads.

During the past six years we have adhered to a program of Planned Progress, constantly building for the future. As a result, when war came, we were prepared. So well prepared, in fact, that today we are capable of carrying even more vital war freight than the millions of ton-miles per day we have been so far called upon to haul! Given sufficient materials to continue, we shall make even greater progress in the service of America.

Our program of Planned Progress has achieved many extensive and enduring improvements.

GRADE REDUCTIONS over all of Rock Island Lines have proved one of our most important accomplishments. For reduced grades mean increased speeds for the munitions of war and vital passenger travel.

EQUIPMENT AND FACILITIES are improved. Speedier, more powerful locomotives—cars of latest design—many innovations accelerate freight operations and provide the expedited service now so vital HEAVIER RAILS, heavier ballast and heavier cross-ties permit heavier loads! These and many other improvements have made Rock Island Lines one of America's great railroad systems.

FOR WARTIME TRAVEL we urge early ticket purchases . . . advance reservations traveling on mid-week days when possible . . . cancelling reservations promptly if plans change . . traveling with minimum luggage.

Schools In County Will Stage Patriotic Programs

VICTORY PROGRAMS TO BE GIVEN IN ALL SCHOOLS IN HANCOCK COUNTY

During the week of Armistice Day, from Nov. 8 to 14, a Victory program will be held in all of our schools, rural and urban throughout the entire county. This extensive endeavor of loyalty and patriotism in a time when our nation is involved in its grimmest war, is sponsored by the Office of Civilian Defense in conjunction with the educational departments in the county that control the town and rural sections.

The Rev W. T Wolfram, county Civilian Defense chairman, says

"The purpose of this Victory program is two-fold In the first place it is educational. In preparing a program with the theme 'We Must Win This War' we are making the public. the children in the schools, the parents in the homes, and the neighbors in the community, those that prepare the program, and all those who render the program, and those that hear the program, war-conscious.

"The prime objective therefore is to create a deeper conciousnes of the dangers that threaten our country and the liberties it stands for and a greater willingness to make the necessary sacrifices that will have to be contributed for final victory I am sure that every resident in the county will profit from the programs rendered"

The second purpose of these Victory programs is financial. The federal government does not supply the funds with which to conduct the offices of the local defense The work that is done is tremendous Those that are serving are donating their time and energy But actual expenses incurred should be met therefore a fund must be created to meet these mounting expenses. Through the sale of tickets by the school children in each community at the nominal cost of 20 censt for an adult and 10 cents for a child the Office of Civilian Defense expects to raise the necessary money to carry on the expenses for the duration This is the smallest donation that people will be asked to give for victory

Programs will be held in the various town schools on the date to be announced during Armistice week. During the same week the program will be held in the rural sections The rural schools have been grouped into 14 units, and the program will be given in a centrally located school of that unit, that has the necessary facilities.

"Fellow citizens of Hancock county let us not forget this worthy cause and let us give our wholehearted support," urges Rev Wolfram.

COUNTY AGENT HEREAFTER KNOWN AS "DIRECTOR"

Titles And Duties Of Extension Folk Being Clarified And Co-ordinated

Duties and titles of extension workers have been clarified and coordinated to enable the Agricultural Extension Service for Iowa State College to provide a better-balanced extension program in every county The changes annunced by Dr Charles E. Friley, president of the College, and R. K. Bliss, extension director, were effective on October 15th

"All of the changes, and the general study of the Extension Service now being made," Dr Friley said, "are with a view toward development and administration of the most effective agricultural, home economics and youth activities extension program in the nation"

Title of the county agent has been changed to County Extension Director, with responsibility for the direction of all extension work in the county, both agricultural and home economics.

The home demonstration agent is now known as County Home Economist and serves and ranks as associate county extension director, devoting her efforts, as formerly, primarily to education for homemaking

Title of the club agent has been changed to Extension Associate in Youth Activities, and the position may now be held by either a man or a woman.

Changes were also made in the titles of several supervisory officers The district extension agent is to be known as District Extension Supervisor He will represent the Iowa Agricultural Extension Service in all relations with local county groups and will be the principle supervisor of all county extension work One of the major purposes of the county-uniform plan is to see that all phases of extension work, agriculture, home economics and youth activities, are given better balanced consideration in each county

The title of the state home demonstration agent leader has been changed to Assistant Director for Home Economics. Her assistants in home economics work supervision will be known as District Home Economics Supervisors.

These are the first recommendations from the survey, which is studying the internal operations of the Service, examining its working relations with external agencies and groups and analysing its working relations.

Alaska Highway to Be Ready For Army Use About December 1

'Alcan,' America's New 1,600-Mile 'Burma Road' Through Virgin Wilderness, Constitutes Engineering Feat of First Magnitude.

Several months ahead of schedule, the Canadian-Alaskan Military highway, which has been under construction by the United States army engineers since last March, will be ready for army use early this winter, it was announced by the war department recently.

The engineers expect to finish the pioneer road about December 1, 1942. Plans are now being made for winter traffic over the complete route of approximately 1,600 miles between that date and April 1, 1943, the period during which the highway and the rivers of the region it traverses will be frozen. During the months of April and May it is believed the road will be unsuitable for heavy traffic owing to thaws and excessive moisture following the break-up of winter.

Although originally contemplated as a rough "pioneer" road, to be completed in one year, the Alcan highway as it is now being constructed by the corps of engineers is a well-graded, well-drained truck road for practically its entire length and will afford two-way traffic over many long stretches.

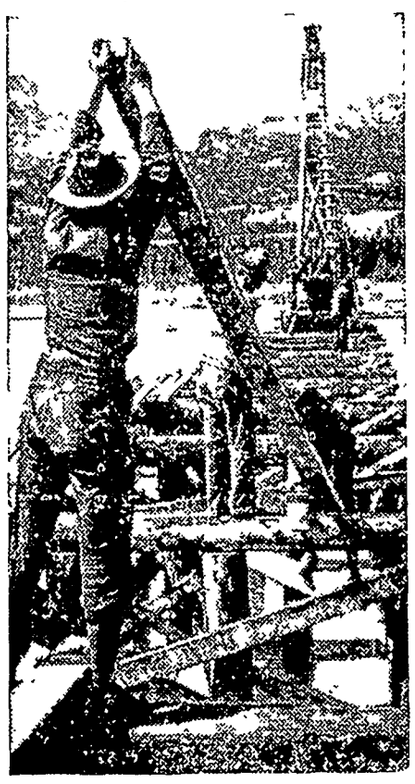
The highway begins at Dawson Creek, British Columbia, just north of Edmonton, pursues a northwesterly course to Whitehorse, in Yukon Territory, then swings west across the Alaskan boundary and thence to Fairbanks.



Manpower gets busy as these U. S. army engineers build bridges that connect up with the Alcan highway.

A Military Supply Route.

The Alcan highway will function as an important military supply route. Connecting with the railway and highway systems of the United States and southern Canada at Dawson Creek, its southern terminus, the pioneer route provides not only an uninterrupted motor highway to Alaska, but serves as a feeder road to several important military airfields in Canada that have hitherto had to depend upon air transport for all their supplies. The latter may now be trucked in overland.

The construction of the pioneer road is a militarized project, authorized by joint agreement between Canada and the United States and carried out under the direction of Maj. Gen. Eugene Reybold, chief of engineers. The work is being performed by engineer officers and enlisted personnel of the United States army.

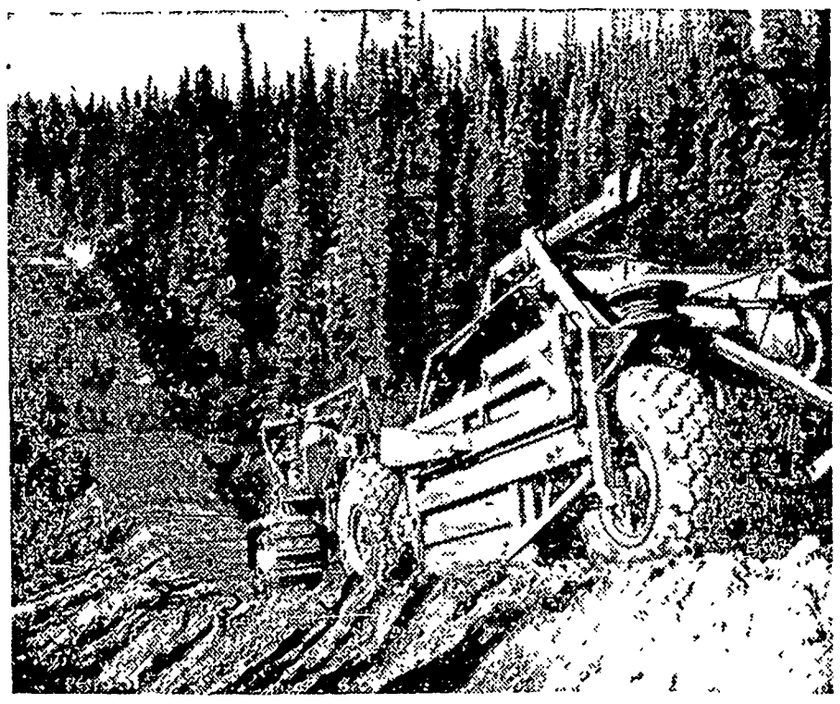
Northwest Service Command.

On September 10, 1942, the war department announced the establishment of the Northwest Service command, in charge of army highway and railroad building activities, and supply maintenance services in western Canada and Alaska, with headquarters at Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, Canada. Brig. Gen. James A. O'Connor, formerly in charge of construction on the southern sector of the road, has been assigned to head the new service command, with Col. Kenneth B. Bush, adjutant general's department, as chief of staff.

Complete arrangements have been made by the army for winter maintenance of the road. These plans include the construction of rest camps for the operators of truck convoys, barracks for engineer maintenance troops and adequate weather observation and telephone installations to serve the entire length of the highway. All necessary facilities, equipment and supplies to service the road and keep traffic moving are being provided.

Great Engineering Feat.

The construction of the pioneer route through the virgin wilderness in such a short space of time constitutes an engineering feat by the army of first magnitude. It was not accomplished without physical hardship and privation on the part of the officers and men, but no handicaps of weather or terrain were sufficient to dampen the enthusiasm of the troops or retard progress. Aside from the endurance and efficiency of the force, among whom a large detachment of Negro troops acquitted themselves with special distinction, three main factors contributed to the speed with which construction has been carried on.



Heavy construction equipment proves its weight in gold when called upon to break through virgin territory.

Rough and Ready

Typical engineer working for Uncle Sam in the Yukon territories.

The first of these was the procedure of initiating construction at various points along the route at the same time, by transporting crews and equipment to strategic locations in March, before the spring break-up of ice and snow made trails and rivers impassable.

The second was the employment of aerial surveys, followed by stereoscopic analysis of aerial photographs and the time-tested and traditional engineer method of ground reconnaissance on foot, with packhorse and dog-train.

The third was the use of bulldozers, tractors and other types of heavy equipment, without which the record for speed and semi-permanent construction could not have been achieved. The primary road was actually established by the powerful bulldozers, which plowed through the forests of native spruce, jackpine and aspen as if through cornfields, uprooting and pushing trees literally off a 100-foot cut.

Timbers for the construction of bridges, trestles and other structures were felled by the troops and processed by sawmills on the site. Ferries for crossing the many turbulent creeks and streams, were improvised of rafts and pontoons. At one major crossing a large scow was built from forest lumber capable of transporting equipment weighing 40 tons.

Extremes of Heat and Cold.

During March the troops battled bitter winds and temperatures as low as 35 degrees below zero, when it was impossible to drive a tent-peg into the frozen ground. During July and August they sweltered under a heat of more than 90 degrees and were forced to wear gloves and net helmets to protect themselves from the swarms of mosquitoes, flies and insect pests. In wet weather they slogged through bottomless mud, in dry weather portions of the road were shrouded in clouds of alluvial dust so fine that no mesh could exclude it.

Through it all, however, according to official reports from the field, the morale of the men remained high and the job has gone forward at a rate which will bring the road to completion well in advance of the most optimistic estimate. The engineers report that the threats of muskeg proved wholly unfounded. Muskeg, a bog moss studded with sedge, has proved to be a minor problem. Most of it has been successfully skirted and that which was unavoidable has been overcome with corduroy roads. In one particular section of 60 miles in length, reported to consist principally of muskeg, only four miles of it were encountered.

Alcan Highway Will Help Oust Japs From Aleutians

Alaska is our first line of defense against our war with Japan, and its strategic importance to the safety of continental United States can hardly be overestimated.

Up to this time this vast wilderness outpost has been reached by only two main routes, air and water. The Alcan highway will provide a third, and possibly the most important, route to this strategic area. It will enable soldiers and armored equipment to reach Fairbanks in 80 hours from Edmonton, Alberta. This trip at present by ocean from Seattle takes eight days to Anchorage and another day to Fairbanks.

The Jap occupation of Kiska, Attu and Aggatu in the Aleutian chain brought into strong focus the military importance of Alaska. About 10,000 Japs were landed.

The enemy has been repeatedly bombed in their main stronghold on the island of Kiska by heavy U. S. bombers and has been blasted by the fleet. More recently the navy landed Yank troops in the Andreanof islands, only 125 miles east of Kiska, without the loss of a single man.

This operation of blasting the Japs from the Aleutians is one of the biggest and most important of the war, and the Alcan highway will play a major role in keeping our forces supplied with reinforcements and supplies. It will be a grand day for America and the world when the first brown army truck rolls into Fairbanks over the Alcan.

WICKARD FEARS FOOD CRISIS

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard has made it very clear in private conferences that he takes vigorous exception to Donald Nelson's recent statement: "We are going to have enough to eat throughout this war and we probably will not have to put any very drastic limitations on our range of choice in that regard."

On the contrary, Wickard says that we are going to be more and more up against it for food—unless we give the farmer more machinery and more labor.

Briefly here are the reasons why:

1. An army uses twice as much food as civilians, (a) because a lot is lost at sea, (b) a lot is lost in the field of battle, and (c) soldiers eat more than civilians.

2. We have to feed our allies more and more.

3. We will also have to feed the occupied regions when they are set free.

But meanwhile, farmers actually are killing good dairy cows for beef because they cannot get labor or machinery to keep up their dairy herds. In the Chicago milk shed alone, 1,700 dairy farmers have sold their herds and gone out of business.

In one specific case, a dairy farmer lost the use of his litter-carrier when the tub went bad. The carrier, complete with trolley and hoist, had cost him $250. A new tub to replace the rusted one would cost only $10. But he couldn't buy a new tub. And he couldn't find additional hands to do the work of the machine.

So he sold his cattle and closed the dairy.

Foreseeing this machinery shortage, Secretary Wickard asked WPB to permit manufacture of agricultural machinery up to 38 per cent of normal. The request was made July 22. He did not get a reply until this week.

Principal log-jammer is WPB's civilian supply committee, headed by Joseph L. Wiener, which has to act on a great variety of civilian problems and does not pretend to be expert in agriculture.

Its lack of expertness was indicated by two questions asked by members of this committee, in discussing farm problems:

"If there is a labor shortage on the farms, why can't farmers work overtime, just as factory workers do?"

"What is the difference between a wheel type tractor and a crawler type?"

So the United States may fail as the larder of democracy if a farmer can't have a new plow point or some other item—and the necessary farm labor.

NO NIX ON NAVY'S PIX

On the important question of photographs, the navy has completely reversed itself, with the result that the stay-at-home public is seeing daily action shots of the war.

Until recently, there was a ban on taking pictures of "confidential" scenes. But on September 1, the navy issued General Order 179, which stated that "commanding officers are directed to obtain photographs at times of emergency, disaster, and combat action."

Picture taking in the navy used to be confined to "nuts and bolts photography"—routine shots of materials to observe their action under stress. But now the navy is taking pictures of some of the most dramatic and colorful incidents in the history of warfare, with some 1,400 photographers.

If you saw the picture of the Jap carrier sinking in the Coral sea, or the Jap heavy cruiser sinking at Midway, or the U. S sailors leaping overboard from the carrier Lexington, you have seen the work of navy cameramen.

Some were appointed to do nothing else but take pictures of the battle, but some did their camera shooting only after laying aside a machine gun. The famous picture of the sinking Jap carrier in the Coral sea was taken by a machine gunner from the rear nest of a navy plane.

Primary purpose of the picture taking is not to inform the public, but to inform the navy. The pictures are used to check on operations, to instruct learners, and, most important, to study the enemy's position. Today, tomorrow and every day, navy planes are flying over New Guinea and the Solomons, taking pictures of whatever lies below. The developed shots may disclose that the Japs have moved into a new area, and that the little black spot, seen under a microscope, is an oil tank just installed.

IT IS not necessary to make our economics so dull and dreary that they depress every one. Let's make them so gay and attractive that they give us a lift and a bit of a challenge too. This old rocker is an example.

A saw and a wood chisel were used for removing projections and rockers. An old quilt was found for padding and the feathers from an old bolster were packed into a thick seat cushion to raise the seat which has been lowered by removing the rockers. This required a yard and a quarter of ticking. Four and one-half yards of inexpensive chintz in a bold, modern pattern did the rest. Total cost for an up-to-date chair less than two dollars, that will serve well for the duration.

NOTE: This remodeled chair is from BOOK 5 of the series of booklets that are offered with these articles. In this book an old-fashioned couch is modernized, end tables from spools, new uses are found for a camp stool, other types of chairs are made over, and a love seat is made from an old car seat. Our Soldiers in Ireland

By Beverly Smith

To find out how our soldiers were behaving in Ireland, I spent a few days in the small town of Ballynlank, where several companies of Americans had lately moved in, after passing some months in a muddy but strategically located forest.

They took up quarters in an abandoned textile mill, in a noble mansion, and the outbuildings of a huge estate, in refurbished stables, in unseen huts. When I arrived, I found the soldiers puzzled by the attitude of the townspeople. The one main street remained almost deserted. Few children were to be seen. Older people hurried furtively along the streets

"What's wrong with us?" asked disconsolate soldiers. "You'd think we were lepers."

Hillbilly Band Warms Up

On Saturday evening the outfit's hillbilly band decided to go into action. With portable amplifiers, they marched into town, took up a position in the deserted square, and tuned their weird variety of instruments, many of them homemade. Then they swung into "Deep in the Heart of Texas."

The square was still vacant, but soon I noticed little faces peeping out through doorways. The hillbilly boys warmed up, tooting mightily as they went into "Elmer's Tune."

Now the children were out of the houses, creeping closer, timidly but irresistibly drawn. Soon the square seemed to be full of children crowding about, and the older Irish folk were moving in, too, still aloof, but hypnotized by the strange music.

Then Private Vernon Claussen, a big farm boy from Gilmore City, "Ioway," gave his famous "Old Sow Song," with elaborate sound effects of gruntings and squealings. Soon bearded Irish farmers in the crowd who know their hogs, began to smile, chuckle and snort with glee.

Now the party was really going. The hillbillies sang "She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain," and the crowd and the children encored it again and again.

At this point the master of ceremonies, Private Sam Cicerale, a hillbilly from the Bronx, New York, pulled a stroke of genius. Noticing that a six-year-old towhead in the crowd had caught the words and was joining in, he suddenly silenced the band and held the microphone close by the little boy. Amplified and alone, the child's voice rang out shrill, clear and in tune over the square, "She'll Be Drivin' Six White Horses When She Comes." That brought down the house, the square, the town and the barriers.

Why People Were Suspicious of Americans.

I dropped in at the local station house a few days later to talk things over with a veteran sergeant of the Royal Irish Constabulary, who handles police matters. I asked him why people were so suspicious when the Americans first arrived.

"Well," he said, "a lot of strange rumors got about. Your boys were supposed to be mostly savages and desperadoes from the Wild West."

But that's all over now, and the local folk are ashamed of it.

I asked the old sergeant how the constabulary reports showed American boys had been behaving. He said: "I've never, in 40 years, seen sojers better behaved."

He went on to particularize: "Of course, sojers will be sojers, especially on payday. Sometimes a lad gets a bit too much, sometimes there's a bit of a rumpus. But not often, not much. As an old sojer myself, I like the discipline of your fellows. It don't show so much on the surface, but it's there underneath when it's needed."

A couple of years ago, I wrote an article for the American magazine about the formation of our first American armored divisions under the leadership of the late hard-bitten General Adna Chaffee. Now, 4,000 miles away, I have been riding with units of the tankers again.

The cub has grown into a bear cat. There are tanks in Ireland that were just a designer's dream two years ago, and better ones are coming along.

Nor is the change just in equipment. The armored units have developed powerful teamwork, ruggedness, esprit de corps. The men have invented new things, methods and techniques which they have reason to be proud of.

If General Chaffee were alive and here today, he would be pleased with much that he saw. That's praise enough for any man in armored forces.

Inventiveness runs all through this man's army. It is the fastest learning, most ingenious army in all the history of the world.

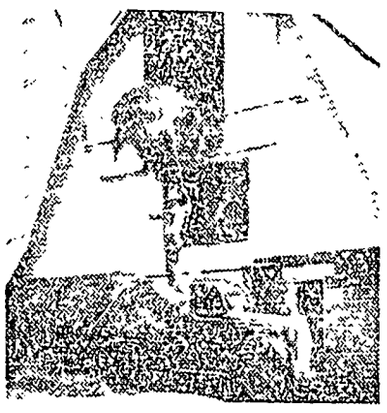
Use Native Material For Farm Structures

Building Substitutes Found Satisfactory

Although building construction is limited by government order to conserve materials for the armed forces, some agricultural construction is necessary and can be realized through the use of native and local materials which are not critical.

Among the materials recommended for use in farm construction in these times are concrete, concrete blocks, field stones, brick and tile. Unskilled labor can do a fair job with these materials. Poultry houses, machine storages, granaries, dairy barns, milk houses—in fact, practically all buildings normally constructed of wood can be built of these materials with assurance of excellent results. Electric and water supply facilities can be added after the war.

Wood stanchions and partitions will substitute for steel. Roll roofing provides an inexpensive and temporary covering which serves as a base for other types, excepting steel which should not be placed in contact with a tar or asphalt surface because of corrosion. Home-sawed lumber can be used in place of costly West coast supplies



An important use for heavy hemp ropes is shown in this scene on the Harper Carroll farm near Ellicott City, Md.

Violation of the building conservation order, designated as Order L-41, which limits building to $1,000 for farm construction and $500 for house repairs, may result in being prohibited further deliveries or use of material under priority control.

For details about this order and how it applies in your case, contact your county agricultural war board. Your county agricultural agent is the secretary.

Maple Products

Nearly one-third of the annual yield of maple syrup in the United States, is puffed in cigarette and pipe tobacco. Manufacturers have discovered that by holding moisture, it gives proper burning qualities to tobacco. Syrup grades that are not up to fixed color standards are used for flavoring chewing tobacco.

The sugar belt runs from Maine to Minnesota, from Canada south to Maryland west to Arkansas and nearly every farmer raises sugar for home use. Vermont tops the nation in the amount of maple products, and has earned the reputation for producing the best.

It is no secret that a large amount of syrup from elsewhere is shipped into Vermont and processed and sold under Vermont labels.

The eastern states produce nearly all the maple products sold commercially. Some sugar groves are 150 years old and are still paying taxes on farms for the grandchildren of the men who planted them. Sugar trees do not reach top form until they have lived 50 years.

Old time open kettle methods were used in sugar making until 1875, when modern machinery appeared and the picturesque quality of the business disappeared. Now there are sterilizing hydrometers, evaporators and streamlined sugaring-off pans. In some camps where the contour of the land is right, an elaborate pipeline system collects sap and conveys it, by gravity, to the sugar house.

Hens Have High Body Heat

Hens have a body temperature of about 106 degrees F. The heat given off by the body of the hen is quickly lost with a few birds in a large house, or with any number of birds in a cold house. But if the house is tight and properly constructed otherwise, and if the house is filled to capacity, the body heat will many times keep it warm enough to make the birds comfortable, increase egg production, and reduce the danger of diseases.

Washington Digest

'British Plan' Advocated To Solve Farm Problem

Shortage of Labor in Agriculture Remedied by England Through Strict Job Priority Decree; Essential Farming Gets High Preference.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

There is one question which the farmer wants answered but which a large part of the rest of the population doesn't realize is one of the most important questions of the day.

It is: Will the farmers get enough help to save the crops this year and enough help to produce the food for the "Food for Freedom" program next year?

I have spent the week talking to people who are going to be responsible for the answering of that question. And the composite answer as I get it is this:

"Generally speaking, yes. However, some of the crops raised this year will go by the boards. But we believe we can handle next year's bigger crops."

What is Washington going to do to solve this problem?

1. Much talk but no legislation until after elections.
2. That talk however will develop some unpleasant and important truths.
3. As a result, eventually legislative action, mapped on the British plan.

But meanwhile there will be

4. Temporary makeshifts which may alleviate but cannot cure the farmer's labor pains. The first, immediate effort will be on a voluntary basis. (I'll go into that later.) But it will leave a lot of spoiled tomatoes, among other things.

The second thing will be legislation which will be based on the British experience and (we hope) will give the farmer the help he needs to carry out his share of the battle.

In Great Britain they tried one measure and another, first by voluntary and then gradually tightening regulations. Their experience ended in two things:

First, laws that kept the men who were in rock-bottom, necessary industries (including farming) in those industries.

Second, it put the men needed in those essential industries into those industries.

What the British did amounts to this, and it is what we have to do, and are going to do eventually—decree a rigid priority of jobs. And that means decide where and what a man must do. (Fight, make munitions, hoe corn, etc.)

Essential Farming

And, when it comes to farming, subdivide. Say what is essential farming and what isn't. If you are an essential farmer, you farm. Otherwise, you fight. That concept will be framed in a law, a law that is being studied today as you hear the various testimony of experts aired in the hearings before the various congressional committees — a law that is being studied today by a subcommittee of the Manpower commission, by the labor department, by department of agriculture experts.

It will be considered seriously before election day. It will not be acted upon by then, not merely because it is too hot a political potato but because it is just too complicated to be worked out satisfactorily before that time.

That is the analysis given to me by an old-timer in the government who is in a position to know. I naturally asked him why such a manpower plan had not been worked out before. He was very frank.

He said there were two reasons. First, when any human being who understands its implications looks at this question he gets such a headache that he simply has to lean back and think it over again.

Second, and seriously, the question of manpower in the present war presents a problem that no human being has ever had to meet before in the terms that it has to be met now. Britain has been able to deal with it in a measure—under the pressure and the easily recognized seriousness of falling bombs. As one man who had spent much time in England said to me: "It's easier to regulate farmers when there are shell craters in their fields."

How has Germany, the super-efficient nation, met it? Only with slave labor, dragooned from conquered countries.

But we have to meet it. And we will. Before the year is out manpower for civilian service will be drafted, as manpower for military service is.

What, the farmer asks, is to be done in the interim?

The Voluntary Method

First, the voluntary method, the way the British began. There are a number of things to consider. Secretary Wickard says that the greatest reservoir of farm managerial and labor power lies in the people already with farm experience, who are not farming efficiently.

There are two million farm families (he says) working land which won't produce enough to keep them decently, much less help the food for freedom program. Wickard says we have the money and the machinery to move them. The Farm Security administration has been doing it to some degree. They can do more. I know that about 125 men from Kentucky recently were sent to New York state to pick apples. The government paid their way.

Another factor is women—more women are coming into the field. The old tradition that women shouldn't work in the fields is breaking down. One farmer said to me: "A lot of women can run tractors. I'd rather have a woman who knows how to run my tractor than a man I don't know. These women are careful and they are just bustin' themselves to make good."

Secretary Wickard hates drafted labor and any farmer knows why. As one farmer put it: "I don't want a man on my farm who doesn't want to work on a farm. He'll break up more than he's worth."

Potential Farm Labor

But the secretary says that there is another reservoir of potential farm labor made up of men and boys with farm experience who are doing non-essential work now.

Now why, the farmer asks, haven't the smart people in the government foreseen all this and prepared for it? Why did they ask us to raise all these tomatoes when they ought to have known that we couldn't get the help to pick them?

Well, nobody in America has had the experience of total war. We have as big an army now as we had at the time of the Armistice. The army is way ahead of the schedule we thought they could make. And it takes a lot more men in industry and on the farm to run an army, a modern army, than it did an army that size in 1918.

We never believed that this country could house and equip an army as fast as the job has been done. The calls of the draft were heavier and more rapid than any expert expected. But don't blame the Selective Service system for robbing the labor market. They did what the doctor ordered. Some of the others didn't fall in line.

War Man Power

I talked with a member of General Hershey's staff. I can't quote him officially but this is what he said to me privately and what he would say to you: "Listen to these figures: In some of the middle western states for every one man who has been drafted, 11 have gone into industry or enlisted in the army, navy or marines. The figures over the country as a whole show that out of every hundred men who have left the farm only 15 were taken by the local draft boards. In the dairy industry in California, it was shown 37 per cent left their jobs to take higher paid ones in the same industry and 39 per cent went into other industries or enlisted."

That is a cross-section of the manpower problem. America has volunteered nobly. But, alas, voluntary service is not the wisest, in war time. We have one goal; we must reach that with balanced action. To obtain that, a most careful and complicated plan must be worked out. It hasn't been worked out yet because there is no man in Washington from the highest to the lowest who can do it alone. It takes a lot of study, and then unified action. That is coming. And it will come slowly, as they told me when I was a boy, like sucking sugar through a rag.

More than 500 pamphlets, bulletins, releases, etc., by government bureaus have been cut out or suspended by Elmer Davis. This means that you just can't get copies of "How to Be a Bee," "The Inner Life of the Common Toothpick" and "The Art of Dogsled Weaving."

Alfred G. Vanderbilt, in the navy as a boatswain, came into another five million dollars the other day. It is a break to be in the navy when you get five million. In the army, unless you had your own dice, you would lose it in no time.

New York city is going to tear down numerous big buildings for scrap metal. Among them is a 22 story skyscraper at West End avenue and 72nd street, built 18 years ago and never occupied by anything but pigeons. Thousands of visitors, passing on the Fifth avenue buses, just before the turn onto Riverside drive, have noticed this gaunt structure and asked about it. Once we heard a tired busman reply, "That's Grant's tomb, lady." "I thought Grant's tomb was further up?" she said. "That's just his summer tomb," he replied. "This is his winter one."

Ima Dodo has written a movie. It is about a girl and a boy on a desert island. The boy disappears. The girl is alone for months, reduced to starvation. Finally a ship loaded with tenderloin steaks is wrecked on the island, just in time to save her life. Ima says the big thing about it is her title: "Meat Buoys Girl."

THOSE OIL ZONES

"A" stands for fuel oil more copiously
Than you'll ever get it in homes in Zone "B."

* * *

"B" is for heat which will keep you quite hot
Compared to the homes in the zones where you're not.

Indian Summer: That time of year when you want to scalp the fellow who says: "This is the best time of the whole year."

Ima Dodo is going all out in the scrap drive. She has asked her sweetheart to give the iron from his blood. And she personally is going to abandon her determination of steel.

"For Sale—Two pianos, $4.98 each; cash and carry; no fooling. E. J. Anderson." — Pleasantville Journal.

That's what you think!

With boots rationed and with the fuel oil regulations in force, the Republican candidates in the coming elections would get the break of their lives if election week weather turned out to be floods, followed by freezing.

Those Relations

Judge—Now, tell me about your marital relations. Were they pleasant?

Witness—Pleasant enough, your honor, but they wanted to live on me all the time.

When you set out to bury the past, be sure you take a big enough shovel along.

Stuck There

"Yes, my wife and I agreed one month ago that in married life frankness is the best policy. We resolved to point out one another's faults without reserve, so we could correct them."

"And have you stuck to it?"

"Not exactly; we haven't been speaking for 29 days"

Worse Yet

Jack—My wife talks to me positively awful.

Ed—That's nothing. Mine talks to me awfully positive.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Before rubber allocation programs, one large rubber manufacturing company made close to 35,000 separate rubber items. The weights of these items ran from fractions of an ounce to hundreds of pounds.

Supported by old inner tubes that have been blessed, natives of Benares, India, stay in the waters of the Holy Ganges River for weeks at a stretch.

Rubber shortage was no worry when the first roads were constructed in the Empire of Assyria and Babylon in 1900 B.C. or when the Romans built their military roads in 302-298 B.C.

In 1941 89% of the rubber consumed in the U. S. came from lands that are now in the hands of the enemy or cut off from U. S. ships.

Two-thirds of all the natural rubber in the U. S. is in the tires and tubes on American cars.

Ink Spots And Spatters

By Jergie

A DUTY TO PERFORM NOVEMBER THREE

Softly draped, with folds unstirred by even so much as a breath of summer breeze, Old Glory, OUR FLAG, the flag of destiny, rests, waiting. It symbolizes the soul of America, standing in silent prayer before the Father of Light, receiving His strength and wisdom, asking His guidance and protection through this another perilous journey.

It is the morning prayer of the American people, the prayer that arms them to the problems of the day with courage and cheer. Before it, America stands in reverance, realizing her sacred duty to mankind and her glorious destiny

This is the only Democracy in the world today, let no one use some worn excuse but go to his polling place on Election Day and give that support to the candidate of your choice that he deserves and you will come away in the real spirit of good American Citizenship.

—J I. OVERHOLT,
Chairman Ell Township

WE MUST SUPPORT OUR CANDIDATE

For the first time in a quarter of a century the south part of Hancock County has a good chance to elect one of our own men for the office of Supervisor.

We must have an "All out" vote for John A. Chambers of Twin Lake township.

Mr Chambers was nominated by the Republican Party at the June Primary. He defeated a good man

By all that's fair and square Mr Chambers should be unopposed in the General Election. He conducted a clean campaign and won the nomination and that should have been sufficient.

Mr. Chambers is well qualified for the office He is well educated, he is a land owner, a successful farmer and a good manager of his farm and business affairs.

This writer in the past has supported Mr. Klipping and we believe he has been a good supervisor He has served approximately 12 years, and the result of the vote at the June primary would indicate the majority of the voters decided it was time for a change, and Mr Klipping was defeated.

Mr Chambers won the nomination in the primary and should be elected to the office of supervisor in the General Election Nov 3

BOYS, LET'S BE PATRIOTIC THIS HOLLOWE'EN

Boys and girls, let's be patriotic this Hallowe'en and be very careful not to destroy or injure property, as that would be helping Hitler

Now that big pile of scrap iron on the vacant lot opposite the post office is going to be a big temptation and it would be a lot of fun to scatter it all over town But remember that it is material very vital to make battleships, guns and bombs, so please leave it alone

Just detour that big pile of old scrap and say to yourself "I Am An American and I Will Not Destroy Any Property."

PICKED UP ALONG THE MAIN DRAG

A census taker called at a Klemme home and a woman answered his knock.

"How many in your family?" he asked

"Five," answered the woman peevishly "Me, the old man, one kid, a cow and a cat."

"And what are the politics of your family?" was the next query

"Mixed," came the short reply "I'm a Republican, the old man's Democrat, the kid's wet, the cow's dry and the cat's a Populist."

Instead of tipping over the neighbor's little shack in the back yard this year, you can have a lot more fun by going to the Auxiliary Carnival at the Community Hall on Hallowe'en!

Here's one the hay-fever victims along the Main Drag should memorize:

I sneezed a sneeze into the air:
It fell to earth I know not where;
But hard and cold were the looks of those
In whose vicinity I snoze.

KLEMME LOCALS

Wayne was at Dutch Harbor, Alaska, when it was bombed by the Japs some time ago At that time he was doing survey work for the government.

One on the Reporter

A story is told of a new reporter on a New York newspaper who had instructions directing him to confine his article to a column. The reporter protested that the story was too big to be compressed into so small a space.

"Get a copy of the Bible and read the first chapter of Genesis," said his chief. "You'll be surprised to find that the whole story of the creation of the world can be told in six hundred words."

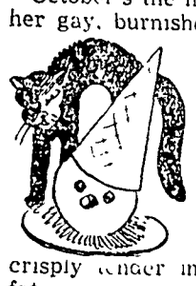
Let's Have a Party . . . While Witches Play

(See Recipes Below)

Halloween Pranks



October's the month which flaunts her gay, burnished colors as a prelude to winter It's the month of apples and cider, of pumpkins and squash against dry sheaves of corn stalk, of fragrant gingerbread or doughnuts fried crisply tender in hot sizzling deep fat.

October's the month of Halloween —when witches, spooks and black cats make merry Big ones or wee ones will love a party that mingles what's best in October with the spookiest of what's Halloween

Pretty up with a party and give your spirits a lift with traditional food that's easy on purse strings, a hit with the party-goers Decorations can be nature's own, a pumpkin or two whole or cut into a jolly face lit with candle glow, squash and apples banked with deep yellow, brown or red leaves, bowls of apples, grapes, popcorn and spicy drinks

Let the children paste black cats, owls and witches onto mugs and invitations inviting guests to come as their favorite spook be it an owl, witch astride a broomstick, or a shaking cat

Have a good hot dish if you are having the Halloween party indoors —something fixed in advance that you can put in the oven to get warm, slip out in a hurry to get to the table like tuna fish souffle, cheese fondue, macaroni and cheese with broiled bacon slices, or a hamburger roast

Outdoor plans may include a wienie roast, with the children participating at the outdoor fireplace or grill If you prefer hamburgers, fix the patties indoors with their seasonings, wrap in wax ready for broiling. Wienies require thorough washing

Construct a simple grill outdoors for roasting wieners if you aren't lucky enough to have a brick grill. This will take a lot of the rough-house outdoors and save wear and tear on your house. Games will most likely be outdoors if it isn't too cold as the revelers will want to roam with spirits and ghosts

Few foods equal the deliciousness of wienies roasted over the flames on forks or sticks fashioned from branches, depending on your degree of going in for naturalness

Plenty of long buns, already split indoors before the party and heaped high in a basket, are indicated They're best when toasted—with lots of butter, mustard, relish, catsup or homemade chili sauce as accompaniments for wienies roasted to doneness with a taste of smoke and ashes.

If you go in for toasting marshmallows along with wienies, try them rolled in coconut just for a taste of something different They're really good!

You can't have enough hot foods as the weather is bound to be on the crisp and chilly side. There will be cheers from the boisterous and ahs from the more conservative if you serve this golden, pineapple drink with a suspicion of spice. The vitamins B1 and C in the pineapple won't permit any let-down in morale and pep

*Recipes Given

Mulled Pineapple Juice.
(Serves 4-6)

- 1 inch stick of cinnamon
- 3 whole cloves
- ¼ teaspoon cloves
- ¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg
- 1 quart canned, unsweetened Hawaiian pineapple juice
- Pinch of salt

Tie the spices in a small piece of cheesecloth, add them to the pineapple juice, and bring to the boiling point, but do not boil Add salt. Serve immediately

Gingerbread wears a party air if you decorate the tops with a frosting outline of a Halloween symbol after it is cut into slices Here's a recipe for gingerbread that's light as down and exquisitely fragrant with spices in correct proportions

Gingerbread.

- ½ cup shortening
- ½ cup brown sugar
- ½ cup light molasses
- ½ cup boiling water
- 1 beaten egg
- 1½ cups flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon soda
- ¾ teaspoon ginger
- ¾ teaspoon cinnamon

Pour water over shortening and add sugar, molasses and egg Beat well. Add sifted dry ingredients, beat until smooth Bake in a waxed-paper-lined square pan in a moderate (350-degree) oven Cool in pan

If it's doughnuts you've a liking for, I'd suggest the kind made with sour cream or milk They have a lightness of a feather that is the criterion for a "sinker."

Sour Milk Doughnuts.
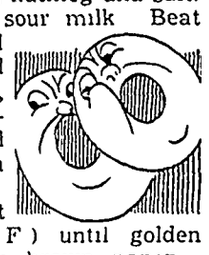
(Makes 2 dozen)

- 3 cups flour
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon melted shortening
- ½ teaspoon soda
- 2 eggs
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ cup sour milk

Sift flour, sugar, nutmeg and salt. Dissolve soda in sour milk Beat eggs well and add milk to eggs. Add to dry ingredients, then mix in melted shortening Roll out and cut with a doughnut cutter Fry in deep hot fat (360-370 degrees F.) until golden brown Drain on brown paper.



Fun's in store for the youngsters if you let them polish off the party with these old-fashioned, sugar-saving popcorn balls

Taffy Popcorn.

- 4 cups popped corn
- 2 cups shelled peanuts
- ⅔ cup molasses
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- ⅓ cup water
- ⅛ teaspoon soda

Mix molasses, sugar, butter, water and vinegar Cook slowly and without stirring until the crack stage is reached. Add soda and stir well. Add remaining ingredients and mix well before pouring into shallow, well-greased pans. When cold, cut into bars or squares.

The Score Card: Corner your share of these food bargains during the next few weeks Cabbage, apples, plums, pears, green peppers, lima beans and cauliflower.

The well-dressed table will also wear eggs, chicken and cheddar cheese not only for variety but also economy

Style your table with carrots, potatoes, turnip greens, beets and beet tops, mustard, spinach. Good for you, and perfect with most other foods in the meal.

Standardized bottles have been ordered for wines, jellies and preserves. Home-canning jars are not affected in this order of the War Production board.

THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF MARRIAGE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 2 18-24, Matthew 19 3-6, John 2 1-5

GOLDEN TEXT—Marriage is honorable in all.—Hebrews 13 4.

The home is not just one of the institutions of our social order, it is a part of God's plan for man. It thus holds a position of greater importance than institutions of society, and should take first place in our thinking.

Home and the life which centers in it has lost much of its meaning and value in recent decades. It is appropriate and timely to study for four weeks in our Sunday schools the foundation principles of the home and to learn how we may hinder or help it in its influence. Teachers will wish to make much of this vital series.

We begin right when we inquire what the Bible teaches about marriage, and we find the instruction plentiful and to the point. Concerning marriage we learn of

I. Its Origin—Ordained by God (Gen 2.18-24)

Nations and states have marriage laws, and certain civil requirements must be met. But true marriage from the Christian viewpoint is far more than a civil contract. It is an ordinance which God Himself ordained from the beginning for the welfare of man.

As Adam gave names to the animals (which, incidentally, tells of his intelligence and ability) they passed before him. It became evident to him that there was no true fellowship between man and beast, that there must be a "help meet" for man, one of his own kind, with his capacities of personal being

God quickly and adequately meets every real need of man, so He created out of Adam's own flesh one who was to be his true companion. "If man is the head, she is the crown," said Matthew Henry. "The man was dust refined, but the woman was dust doubly refined, one move further from the earth. She was not taken out of his head to top him, not out of his feet to be trampled upon by him, but out of his side to be equal with him, under his arm to be protected, and near his heart to be beloved."

So God ordained marriage, but down through the ages man has seen fit to tamper with God's holy arrangements, adjusting them to suit himself, so we need to be reminded of the truth.

II. Its Control—Not Subject to Man (Matt. 19 3-6).

Because of the hardness of man's heart Moses permitted divorce (Mark 10.4, 5), but God did not intend it from the beginning. The Jewish rabbis had so stretched the interpretation of that act of Moses that a wife could be divorced for almost any reason. The same was true among heathen nations.

Our Lord makes it very clear that man has no authority to determine such matters at all, that the union of life in true marriage is by the act of God, and that no man has power to sunder such a relationship

The whole trend of thought on marriage has been away from its sacredness as a divine institution, and we need to return to a proper appreciation of it as such All too often, marriages are mere civil agreements, hastily made before a justice of peace. We need to encourage our young people to recognize

III. Its Dignity—Sanctioned by Christ (John 2:1-5).

The wedding ceremony tells us that marriage "is an honorable estate, instituted by God in the time of man's innocency, confirmed by the teaching and hallowed by the presence of our blessed Lord, and likened by St. Paul to the holy union that exists between Christ and the Church; and therefore is not by any to be entered into unadvisedly, but reverently, discreetly and in the fear of God."

At the very beginning of His public ministry Jesus performed His first miracle as His share of a wedding feast. It is true that He does share every occasion of joy and sorrow of His people, but it seems to be significant that this first occasion for His miraculous power was a wedding.

He was there to rejoice with and to bless those who had exchanged their vows in marriage. Should He not be the unseen guest at every wedding? Whether in the home or in the church; whether the occasion be a simple or an elaborate one; whether a host of friends attend or only the witnesses—always and everywhere Jesus Christ should be recognized as the One who stands by to bless, and to unite the two lives for His own glory.

This means that the ceremony should be a Christian one, with prayer a vital part of it, and the will of God paramount. Then indeed, God may and will join together that which no man can put asunder.

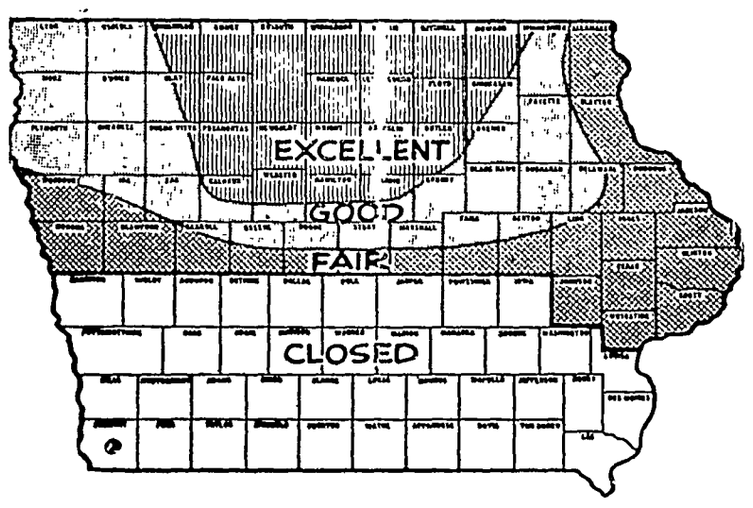
ASK PERMISSION TO HUNT



Map Showing General Pheasant Population Densities

With the 1942 pheasant season opening at noon November 12 in 59 counties, many pheasant hunters have not decided where they will hunt. The recent census figures reveal the heaviest over all populations in north central Iowa However, in limited areas outside of this general location, extremely heavy populations exist

The problem of where the unacquainted hunter can hunt is complicated by many "No Hunting" signs. Most of these "Keep Out" signs are a direct result of lack of sportmanship and fair play on the part of hunters at some time or another. In most cases these properties are open to hunters in whom the landowner has confidence. It is, therefore, the responsibility of the individual sportsman to make himself welcome on these lands It is a mistake and a violation of the Iowa statutes to trespass with dog or gun on any enclosed or cultivated lands other than public shooting grounds without permission from the owner. Hunters are urged to go into their prospective hunting territory in plenty of time to contact the landowners on whose property they desire to shoot and make the necessary arrangements.

The importance of the farmer-sportsman relationship cannot be stressed too greatly. One careless or malicious act by one hunter may close a given area to all for a long period of time. If everyone, beginning now, conducts himself as a true sportsman, the farmer-sportsman problem will soon disappear into thin air.

Halloween Was First Celebrated By Inhabitants of Rural Sections

Thanksgiving for Good Crops Offered by Early Man.

By CLIFF LANGE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Halloween is essentially and basically a rural celebration.

It belongs to the country-side, the small town where the people are close to the earth, and all that comes from and lives upon the earth.

Far back in history, man, realizing that summer was done and the work of nature, busy all the previous months, was at an end, held religious ceremonies to thank the gods for sending him food upon which to live.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME

November 1 is All Saints' day, also called All-Hallomas, or All Hallows. The evening preceding this day is All-halloween.

To early man, Nature, with all its blessings and woes, was something of a mystery to him. As he became more familiar with it and more civilized through the centuries, he had certain gods as guardians of his crops. When the crops were collected, and the cattle gathered in, he then held his celebration with his family and with friends.

This was the beginning of our present day celebration of Halloween. Many of the wild spirits in which early man believed are reflected in the witches riding brooms, the goblins with their fearful faces that decorate Halloween parties wherever they are held.

Primitive man's basic spirit of thankfulness for favors done by the ruler of all nature through religious celebrations and ceremonies was continued by the Druids of England, the early Romans, and even the Indians of the United States.

In the pre-Christian days of early England, the Druids, priests of ancient Britain, celebrated the feast of Samhain on November 1. At that time the flocks were driven in and the workers of the community rested from their arduous summertime labors.

But before midnight on October 31 the Druids put out the old fire on the altar of their god, Baal, and made a new one. This signified the beginning of another year of work with Nature by those early ruralites who worshiped before the heathen god Baal.

In the early Roman festival of Pomona, held at harvest time, fruits and nuts played a very important part. How the customs of the early Roman religious festival have come down to the present day is noticed in the giving of fruits and nuts to youngsters who go "visiting" on Halloween.

There also is a definite reason for pumpkins—always a necessary ornament, either real or artificial—having a definite place in any Halloween decoration.

The reason is not difficult to understand. The early Indians combined deep solemnity and hearty relaxation at their harvest time celebration, held around the present time of Halloween. The Indians of the Southeast and Northeast United States placed the pumpkin in a conspicuous spot during their celebrations because it was a staple article of their diet.

Many people have further seen a definite relation between the hollowed, decorated and lighted pumpkin in homes on Halloween with the ceremonial dances and masques of the Hopi Indians held in the Southwest at harvest time.

In fact, almost all the early American — rather, native American — foodstuffs grown by the early Indians and given proper appreciation during their harvest celebrations are today noticed in Halloween decorations Corn is one of the outstanding foodstuffs so displayed.

The priests of early Christianity found it difficult to stamp out the mystery and symbolism of the last night of October. They effected a compromise between the old religious ceremonies of the Romans and Druids and those essentially Christian. To offset the black magic of Druid superstitions, the next day was declared All Saint's day (as it still is today) and the evening preceding it was renamed hallowed or holy evening.

The corruption of the name, by constant usage by the untutored natives, came to be Halloween.

But the new name could not change the character of the festival. To those back hundreds of years ago, and continuing on down through the centuries, Halloween has always remained, both seriously and humorously, as a time when supernatural influences prevailed.

Through the years the religious significance of the eve has all but disappeared. But the picture of witches riding their brooms across the harvest fields with the full, bright moon in the background has stayed with us.

And speaking of witches it should be remembered that it hasn't been so very long ago that here in the United States they were considered by many to be harmful old women under the diabolic control of the master Evil One, the Devil.

In New England during 1691-92, when an outburst of fanaticism took place there, hundreds of persons were thrown in jail for either being witches, or consorting with them. In the summer of 1692, 19 persons were tried in court, convicted and hanged for witchcraft.

Today the emotion, the spirit of thankfulness which the early peoples expressed in their harvest ceremonies on Halloween has been all but forgotten.

Today the same power which brought good crops and healthy stock to the early dwellers, brings not only plenty for this nation, but also for those nations battling with us, the Evil One of Europe who is riding the witch's broom of cruelty and hate, but who will, when the magical words of freedom are spoken, crash to earth destroying himself and the evil spirits that have been consorting with him.

There will be a poignant touch to those who will celebrate Halloween this year in the United States, remember that France, Belgium—even Germany—when free, also celebrated Halloween.

In those oppressed countries the harvest has brought nothing but continual privation, want and death.

In the United States it has been different. A moral is here.

A Halloween Wish

"Let's see now, where was I? Oh, yes. Phone Janey after this man takes my picture and ask her if she has some extra bobby pins. I wish he would hurry up. I'm getting tired of sitting here holding this pumpkin. It isn't heavy, but the heat from the light in it IS hot. I wish those people who see this picture have a happy Halloween. I know I will." (That's Ellen Drew, in case you haven't recognized her.)

Who, Me?

Hoot Owl is a patient animal he is, he is. All year long he doesn't do anything but sleep all day, work all night catching mice and other delicacies that tickle his palate. Then, come Halloween, he gets himself all prettied up to have his picture taken. From the looks of him you wouldn't believe that he has been sitting like that for ten days. Before that he was resting in a storeroom with other stuffed animals. Oh, well: What would Halloween be without an owl?

Just waiting for a train, boys. That's all. She's been invited over to the next town's Halloween celebration given for the benefit of the USO. Isn't it a far cry from the days when witches were in style instead of be-witching beauties such as she? Who said, "The good old days"?

Editor Shows How

In southwestern Missouri the merchants of a progressive small town dreaded the approach of Halloween as much as the kids happily anticipated it

The police officials, school teachers, and principals were perplexed, too, as to how they could stop the damage, even though light, inflicted by the masked kids as they trooped about the streets on the night of October 31.

The editor of the local weekly was giving thought to the matter, too. The editor was still a comparatively young man. He remembered some of his youthful Halloween pranks all too well. It was a different situation now, he realized.

Suddenly he got a brilliant idea. He talked to the members of the town's business club about it.

In the next edition of the editor's newspaper was a large ad offering an attractive money prize by the towns' merchants to the young person who drew the most attractive, artistic picture on any of the merchants' store windows with soap on Halloween.

Result? Damage dropped off to a minimum; many fine pictures drawn; one youth the proud possessor of the money prize; much publicity for the town, the business men—and the editor.

John Gay, the early English poet (1688-1732), wrote the following lines of poetry which reflected a superstition of his day concerning the Halloween festival:

At even o' Hallowmas no sleep I sought,
But to the field a bag of hempseed brought.
I scattered round the seed on every side,
And three times three in trembling accents cried,
"This hempseed with my virgin hand I sow,
Who shall my true love be, the crop shall mow."

This poem, as does the accompanying story, further brings out the fact that Halloween is essentially a rural festival.

Hobble My Goblins!

Keep your eye on the pumpkins. Then you will remember it's Halloween again. No, the second girl on the right doesn't remind you of anyone but movie actress Eva Gabor. Those you see (left to right) acting as though they're scared are Barbara Britton, Katharine Booth, Eva, and Ella Neal.

It's always warm at Halloween time where they work. That's why they haven't put on fur coats.

OFFICIALS GO TO SCHOOL

All over Washington, grown men are going to school again. More than 500 officials of a dozen different departments are doing "home work"—learning vocabularies, drawing maps, and studying charts. It's the latest phase of the Good Neighbor policy. The government is teaching itself to know Latin-America.

With funds from the Rockefeller office, a school has been set up, known as the Inter-American Training center. Dr. Henry Grattan Doyle took a year's leave from George Washington university to run it.

When Morris Cooke was asked to head an economic mission to Brazil, his experts attended Doyle's school before flying down to Rio.

The treasury department has 28 lawyers dealing with Latin America. All are boning up with Dean Doyle and his faculty.

Luncheon conferences are held all over town to discuss Latin America—usually in Spanish. Doyle provides a Latin expert for each luncheon.

WAR DULLS POLITICAL AXE

The fact that Economic Stabilizer Jimmy Byrnes is not letting politics creep into his job is evidenced by the appointment of bald, mustachioed Ralph E. Flanders, as one of the two management representatives on his advisory board. For Flanders, who is president of the Jones and Lamson Machine company of Springfield, Vt., has been one of the President's severest critics.

In fact if he could get his hands on a certain letter he wrote during the 1936 campaign, undoubtedly he would lose no time burning it up.

The letter was sent to Joseph Leib of South Bend, Ind., founder (in 1930) of the first Roosevelt-for-President club. Leib had written Flanders asking if he thought business would receive the "breathing spell" promised by the President during the campaign.

The Vermont manufacturer replied, August 25, 1936, that it was "increasingly difficult" to support New Deal policies, chiefly because of the tax bill of that year, which, he said, "makes it practically impossible either to pay dividends or to lay aside reserves to meet future conditions of unemployment.

"I can only conclude," Flanders added, "that there is no such thing as a 'breathing spell' so long as Mr. Roosevelt is President."

Early in 1941 Flanders was appointed to a key job in the Machine and Tools group of the OPM priorities division. His company also has received several substantial contracts from the government. Taxes are a lot higher than in 1936, however, and there will be no breathing-spell for profits.

But when Leib again wrote Flanders asking if he still held to the views expressed in the 1936 letter, Flanders replied:

"Since we are now at war, much of the misunderstanding of the peacetime situation no longer holds."

SYNTHETIC CHRISTMAS

This December 25—one year after Pearl Harbor—will be a wooden Christmas with a synthetic Santa Claus. The spirit will be the same, but the form will be different.

Skates, scooters, sleds, electric trains, rubber balls—these will be scarce everywhere if not absent entirely. Only the stores which placed their orders early last January will have the usual toys, and these probably will be sold out by Thanksgiving.

Experts of the commerce department have made a survey of the toy situation. They find that three types will be especially short—rubber toys, wheel toys, and metal goods.

A WPB order stopped production of children's bicycles last April. Velocipedes, scooters, baby carriages, "flexies"—all will be short. Clearly it will not be a rolling Christmas.

Makers of electric trains are 90 per cent converted to making materials of war. There may be 50 per cent of the normal train supply this year, but they are disappearing fast Ice skates and roller skates are almost unobtainable, and lead soldiers are practically extinct.

Meanwhile, warlike toys are appearing everywhere — toy bombsights, tanks, bombing planes, and even bomb-banks for the dimes and nickels instead of the old piggy bank

In all this there is one consolation—for the girls. The war has not disturbed the production of dolls, except for those made of rubber.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Uncensored reports from the Solomon islands, when finally published, will show that the U. S. marines fought with even greater heroism than we realize. It will be one of the great epics in American naval history. The marines at Solomon islands were relatively unseasoned—only about eight months. The man who deserves chief credit for seasoning them is efficient Dan Barbey, U. S. navy, who supervised their training as a task force at Solomon Island, Maryland.

Production in Need of Better Seeing Conditions

Better seeing conditions in factories will increase production, reduce accidents, and conserve the eyesight of workers, according to Faber Birren, industrial color consultant. Not only should there be adequate light of satisfactory spectral quality, but the walls, machines and other equipment in industrial plants should be decorated in colors so as to bring about maximum eye ease and visual efficiency, he says.

Too little attention has been given in many plants to the conservation of human eyesight, he continues, adding that insufficient lighting, glare and poor color contrasts of equipment and materials weaken and strain the eyes, frequently causing avoidable fatigue.

Instead of the customary red to indicate hazards, as on a guard or the lever of a machine, Mr Birren says that yellow, orange and yellow-green would be more effective because they have greater visibility than red. He recommends yellowish in preference to bluish light for general illumination, and the use of light tones for walls and backgrounds for greatest eye ease of workers. To provide visual relaxation, end walls of a factory, he says, should be greenish or bluish in tone rather than yellow or red, pointing out that the blue side of the spectrum is visually more retiring than the red side.

Investigations Disclose Sound Plays Odd Tricks

What Paul Revere's yell did in rousing patriots to action is now done by a variety of mechanized devices. To get the public's ear in air raid drills, experts have had to deal with the behavior of sound.

Some materials allow sound to pass freely. Others diminish it by absorption. Sound may be thrown off its original course, thereby creating silence pockets. Extent of the area covered by a sound signal and the degree of its audibility are ruled by the location and height of the source, buildngs and other obstructions, the terrain, wind, humidity, and temperature. These factors are never quite the same from one area to another.

Moreover, at a specific location they change from day to day. Because of this variability the distance any warning device can be heard is difficult to guarantee. Adverse conditions have cut the audibility of a signal heard eight miles to a quarter-mile.

To make a noise that can be heard distinctly where it is meant to be heard is the purpose of all sound signals. Sounds ranging from about two tones below middle C and an octave above middle C seem to be heard more effectively inside buildings than tones of higher pitch.

Expensive Process

Steel can be made solely from pig iron and without the use of scrap but, except in the Bessemer converter, the process is expensive and time-consuming. In the open hearth and electric furnace processes much time is lost if only pig iron is charged because the entire charge must be refined through the removal of carbon, silicon, phosphorus, sulphur, etc. If scrap represents a large portion of the charge, complete refining of the entire charge is unnecessary since the scrap having already been refined in previous melting processes does not contain the impurities present in pig iron. In the Bessemer converter, which produces Bessemer steel, the entire charge is molten pig iron, only small quantities of scrap being added toward the end of the process or in the ladle when the molten steel is poured into ingot molds. A limiting factor to the use of Bessemer converters and also to the use of 100 per cent pig iron charge in the open hearth and electric furnaces is the supply of iron which is not plentiful.

Keeps Harbors Open

The Gulf Stream, named for the Gulf of Mexico, where it originates, is a warm and deep blue current which flows through the Florida strait and northward between Florida and the Bahamas. It parallels the coast of the United States until it reaches the southern end of Newfoundland, where it merges with the greater warm-water drift that moves across the Atlantic ocean to the western coast of Europe. It is believed to result from the vertical circulation of the ocean waters, as effected by the rotation of the earth. Its influence on the climate of Europe exists, but has been overrated. One of its chief assets is the fact that it keeps certain European harbors free from ice in winter.

In Jap Hands for 60 Days

By M. C. Ford

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

I am one of the Americans who survived two months of a Japanese prison. I was one of those forgotten men, charged with nothing, but reduced to the level of the lowest and vilest criminals in China. Two months in Bridgehouse, torture theater of Japanese terrorism in Shanghai, end of the road of missing men.

Strangely enough, for the first time in my life I was not afraid to die, to expect the worst.

Not far away and not so long ago, humble Chinese soldiers had died. I could see, through the small, rain-spattered window, the ruins of a five-story building which had been their front line. Braced for the worst, I sat quietly on a vermin-infested blanket.

In one corner a Bagdad millionaire lay sick and unattended. A Russian hotel manager knelt against the side wall and prayed. A British professor cajoled the guards for the medicine he needed. Twenty-four Chinese chattered softly among themselves, against the rules. Seven of them were sick with malaria.

A leper kept at a safe distance, except at mealtimes when he scrambled with the rest for his bowl of rice and later, in the same bowl, hot water flavored with tea.

Herded Together Like Animals.

All of us inhabited one wooden cage 14 feet wide and 17 feet long, giving on a wooden stage three feet above the cement floor, with a trough three feet wide separating the stage from the line of wooden pickets that made up the east wall and joined with pickets of the north wall. The other walls were solid boarding.

Murderers, pickpockets, dope fiends and opium smokers rubbed elbows with high and low. One Chinese, dying of consumption, slept next to me.

Followed Gestapo Methods.

Following Gestapo methods, five armed gendarmes had rung my doorbell in the middle of the night, searched my apartment and hauled me off to the "torture circus" with bundles of papers and files.

I settled down in Cage Number One in the old block, where I spent days sitting on the floor on a lice-infested Japanese military blanket, without reading matter or timepiece, and risking a beating every time I whispered to foreigners or Chinese.

When nine o'clock arrived we were permitted to lie down. The light in the center of the ceiling was on all night. I employed my mind picking out the Chinese character for "prisoner" and noting how many times it was used in the placard giving 13 regulations.

At the place where the pickets joined at the northeast sat the corporal in charge of this cage block, in an alcove where he was able to reinforce our cage's regular guard in keeping the prisoners from relaxing—an art in which our soft-shoed guards excelled.

A Long, Hard Day Ahead.

On rising at 6 a. m., four or five men from each cage were allowed to put on shoes, which had to be left outside the cages, and hurry to the hydrant for a few minutes of cleaning faces, after which the next day came out.

Breakfast was hot rice gruel, and was the best meal of the day. It was handed in via a small hole in the picketed door at 7 a. m., usually with one chopstick for each, but sometimes with none, therefore fingers were used. At eleven and four the food was rice and fishheads and a chunk of bread with a spoonful of brown sugar.

Frequent Change of Guards.

Guards were changed every two hours. We were alert in watching our steps when the worst ones were on duty. Punishment was a series of blows on the head, face or back with a rubber hose.

After two weeks I contracted fever and three days later was permitted to go upstairs to see a doctor. I had malaria. He prescribed powders which the guards gave me two days later when I was delirious.

While lying in a corner one day, the guard ordered me to sit up alongside the sick Chinese, whereupon I sat up. Each night I thought I would die, but the morning trip to the hydrant refreshed me and renewed my courage.

When I was recovering from malaria, the questioning began. I was taken to the fifth floor, with an escort who was careful to make me walk away from the railings lest I should be tempted to jump.

I was seated at a bench while the interrogator and the interpreter sat opposite and sidewise.

Axis Nations Face to Face With Strong U. S. Air Power

America's Theoretical Aerial Strength Translated Into Actuality; Japanese Revise Three Major Campaigns.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

As this is written Washington is discussing a pitched battle in the Solomons and the beginning of a sharp rise in American air activity over Europe. Exciting stories are coming in from all quarters of the globe about the achievements of our pilots and our planes but few civilians realize the significance of these separate exploits. The enemy does. And in the opinion of air force officials in Washington the Axis partners have at last been brought face to face with the fact that America is in the war, that the theoretical striking power of the United States has been translated into a practical impact of American strength which is now being felt on every front.

Since the smashing victory of Midway, the Japanese have been forced to change their whole campaigns in three different sectors in the Aleutians, in New Guinea, in the Solomons

And, as Rommel girds for another attack in Egypt, it is conceded that what might have been a victory in the drive on Alexandria was turned to defeat in a not unimportant measure by American bombers and fighters

And lastly, with the great raid on Lille early this month, the Germans found themselves faced with the prospect of terrific destruction of their cities or the revision of their whole program of air defense

From the beginning, the Germans knew that America had the men, the money, the resources to build the most powerful war machine in the world But they never thought the parts of that machine could be assembled in time Now as we approach the anniversary of Pearl Harbor, we are still unable to furnish our Allies with the men and material required to make any single front, of the many we are feeding, strong enough for an offensive in which there is combined action, air, land and sea. But in one arm we have developed the beginning of superiority and for the first time we are emerging on many fronts as the growing giant of the air.

This is now possible because we have been able to do three things provide a terrific engine of precision destruction in our mammoth bombers: provide those bombers with such fire-power that it makes up for their lack of maneuverability and thus offers in a single unit the ability to carry out precision bombing of individual targets and at the same time the ability to fight off the enemy defense in the air, a combination perfected for the first time in this war

A Comparison

To reduce this achievement to lay terms: Heretofore the big bomber which could drop tons of destruction on the earth below, was so cumbersome in the air that it was a prey to fast moving acrobatic fighter planes. Like the buffalo which could be pulled down by a herd of agile wolves. Now, because of the terrific effectiveness of the guns our bombers carry, those fighters cannot get near enough to them to damage them. The wolf pack is cut to pieces before its fangs can seize the monster.

In addition to giving our heavy ships their own protection we have built pursuit planes — the agile wolves — which are sinewed with some of the might of their bigger brothers.

Our pursuit planes are able to carry bombs, too, and perform some of the functions of the dive bomber with the added advantage of maneuverability.

With this equipment we have been able to make the Japanese hold on the Aleutians untenable. We have already dislodged two footholds (Attu and Agattu islands) and will probably force the Japs out of the third, Kiska, before the winter sets in. That is one radical change of plan which the Japanese did not anticipate we could bring about.

In the southwest Pacific there has been wrought another change of plan. In conjunction with Australian fliers, American forces have completely broken one offensive, the one directed at Port Moresby, by smashing enemy bases and supply lines and forcing the Japs, who after incredible hardships had crossed the towering Owen Stanley ridge, to take to their heels and flee

And in Europe we have definitely affected the tide of battle on three fronts In Russia, vicariously it is true, because we have sent no pilots there But American planes played a vital part in harassing the Nazi advance

In Egypt, the British, according to dispatches, credit American fliers with a large part of the achievement of breaking down General Rommel's advance into Egypt

Attack on Rommel

There our heavy bombers helped to render Rommel's supply ports of Tobruk and Benghazi virtually useless Against Nazi ground forces our planes, notably the Airacobra, acting as a shallow dive bomber and also as a strafer, played a vital part in smashing the Axis supply lines.

But it was—and is and will be—American bomber wings over Germany itself that cast the most alarming shadow across the Reich The Lille raid brought home the fact that Germany must now face American might

In that raid 112 American bombers, besides carrying out their mission of precision daytime bombing, were able to bring down 115 of the 120 Nazi fighter planes that were destroyed

Germany must rebuild her planes to match ours, or suffer an incredible handicap

And so we see the faith in air power and American invention justified This, however, does not mean victory. It means merely the preparation. Smoking ruins are a triumph but possession is nine points of victory. No land is conquered until a human being stands upon it, his feet firmly planted, his position secure And that means, in the last analysis, man power, not air power. That is the next step.

Aircraft Carrier— Fleet Spearhead

The aircraft carrier, says Rear Admiral Carl Sherman, naval hero of World War I, and commander of the Lexington, is "the spearhead of the fleet, the backbone of the navy, the slugger in offensive and defensive warfare."

The admiral may be a bit prejudiced, of course, but after you have read "Queen of the Flat Tops," which is the story of the Lexington's epic adventures, you may agree with him. Lest I be carried away with my own enthusiasm, I asked a lover of the sea what he thought about it. He pored over my copy and refused to return it. So I am going to quote his words.

"This is a fine book," he told me after he had read it. "The author, Stanley Johnston, sums up my opinion. He says that the 'flat-top' Lexington ushered in a new era in naval warfare which will rank with the battle of the Monitor and the Merrimac in the Civil war. And he makes you believe it."

Johnston was in the highly enviable position of being the only reporter on board, and now has given the world a first-hand picture of the terrifically important last cruise of this converted battle cruiser, right up to the time she was sent to the bottom by American torpedoes after withstanding Jap "tin fish" and direct bomb hits.

Johnston saw it all from the "Lex," as she was affectionately known.

All of our new group of naval air heroes appear as modest young run-of-mine men, in Johnston's record. He was struck by the complete lack of heroics, as he was struck during every action and particularly during the last terrible hours aboard the carrier, with the complete lack of confusion and the outstanding bravery of all aboard, even when the gallant ship was a blazing inferno. This is all the more remarkable when it is known that a great many of the ship's complement were making their first trip to sea. No naval or military man is going to miss reading and studying this volume, and no civilian ought to who has any interest in the methods of modern sea battling.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Almost 10,000 rural fire-fighting companies have been organized this year to protect America's farms against destructive fires, with 100,000 men enrolled.

Marketing, processing, and distribution facilities are operating at capacity this fall, preparing the record 1942 farm production for military, lease-lend, and civilian use.

Prices are responding to rising demand, and latest estimates of the U. S. department of agriculture are that the total cash farm income this year will exceed 15 billion dollars.

The huge production of soybeans, peanuts, cottonseed, and flaxseed this year on American farms has greatly relieved the fats and oils situation.

New York Heartbeat:

Broadway Side-Show: Fred Allen and several other showfolks were bending over in a circle yesterday—at a 49th Street corner—when the mayor's anti-gambling crusaders swept down on them and started to lock them up . . . "Hold on there!" ejaculated Fred. "This isn't a crap game. We're saying good-by to a drafted midget!"

Midtown Vignette: It happened yesterday at a local draft board . . . One of Broadway's better known playboys was summoned a second time . . . They classified him 4F months ago . . He went through the examination again, jumping on one foot 20 times—then the other . . Bend over . . . Breathe fast . Breathe slowly, etc., etc . . When it was over, he chuckled confidently and said "Well, can I leave now, doc?" . . . "Just one moment," was the reply, "raise your right hand and repeat the following oath."

Manhattan Murals: The hard-boiled hack inspector on W. 52nd Street—a woman' . . The carts that peddle a hot dog sandwich and a drink for 5c—in the Wall Street sector—richest sector in the world

The skyline of New York from a ferry docked in Jersey—looks like an old vaudeville "street scene" backdrop . . Riverside Drive in the dimout—resembling a country lane . . The sign on the vegetable stand "Please don't squeeze me, lady, until I'm yours!"

Midtown Horatio Alger: He was the owner of a tiny luncheonette in the 50s on Broadway . . . The landlord forced him out when he raised the rent from $450 to $600 a month . . That was two and a half years ago—and the landlord couldn't find another tenant until recently . The little storekeeper took a lease on another site at 47th Street, where the Worth & Worth hat store used to be . . . In less than a year—along came the Pepsi-Cola people and decided that the location was ideal for their Service Men's Canteen . . . They gave him a young fortune to get out . . . He's retired.

Bigtown Novelette: This actually happened in San Francisco recently . . When Capt Frederick C. Sherman (now a Rear Admiral) of the ill-fated Lexington arrived there—he wore only his dungarees—and those were borrowed . He set out to buy a new outfit and, while en route to a naval tailor, he stopped at a 5 & 10 to get some tooth paste, tooth brush, shaving cream and so on . . . The salesgal handed him several small packages . . . "May I have a rubber band to put around them?" he asked . . The girl scowled and indignantly asked: "Mister—don't you know there's a war on?"

Man About New York:

The cast of "This Is the Army" (350) dined with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House . . . After they all were seated, Mrs. President walked in, and they got up . . . "Please don't get up whenever I enter or leave the room," she said graciously. "You know, I have a reputation of being quite a traveler!" . . . Capt. Dan Topping, groom of Sonja Henie, has healed the breach between her and Dennis Scanlon, her former manager. He recently won his $75,000 suit against her.

Newspaper editors hear that this problem confronts Elmer Davis: The German section of the OWI short-wave division (New York branch) is clashing over U. S. broadcasts in the German tongue. They include Socialist, Social-Democratic, Monarchist and Centrist propaganda—each fighting their own personal differences over the American short-wave lanes A few Trotskyites are also on the staff It all messes up The Big Idea . . . Orchids to Shield No. 3989 of the gendarmes. He straightened out, but flat, a West 49th Street hotel barber who charged a sailor $5 for a haircut, shave, shine and shampoo.

The Magazines: The matter of when there will be a second front is something for the military and naval biggies to decide, I. F. Stone reminds in The Nation. If the President over-ruled them, the same voices who are now yelling for it would be the first to scream "dictator" . . From G. Washington's time until now, Collier's reminds subscribers, every wartime President bickered with Congress—and the nation has bloomed in spite of them all.

Typewriter Ribbons: S. W. McGill: Political prejudice plus personal pique, prevents patriotic performance . . . G. B. Shriver: Remember that United begins with U . . . Anon: A conference is a meeting where people talk about the things they should be doing . . . Wm. Mallory: He's just the crackers in the bed of my existence . . . Ralph H. Smith: The three most important dates in recent American history: The day FDR took office, Pearl Harbor and Tomorrow.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON MEAT RATIONING

Q.—I see that my 2½ pound weekly meat ration includes the bone. Does it include my butcher's hand?

A.—There may be some way to keep your butcher's fist out of it, but it will take more than a global war.

Q.—The government says that if I have dinner in a restaurant and order a steak I should deduct its weight from my home quota. How can I weigh a steak in a restaurant?

A.—This is a complicated matter. In some restaurants the average weight of a steak is about two ounces including the plate, knife and fork. If you are lucky enough to know a restaurant that serves a real steak the waiter will give you the weight. Or you can use this formula: Let "X" equal the appetite; let "B" equal the steak and let "W" equal the price quoted on the menu. You then get the number of square feet in each room and divide by the storm windows.

Q.—Suppose some friends invite me to their home for dinner and serve roast beef. I take a second helping. Do I have to deduct this from my home ration of meat or just write it off under the heading of good neighbors?

A.—You're going to cause trouble if you try to weigh the portions served by any host.

Q.—Mr. Wickard says that there are plenty of meat products that are not rationed. He lists these as kidneys, brains and hearts. How can I learn to eat those things?

A.—Dark glasses and plenty of mustard will help.

Q.—Sausages and frankfurters are not to be rationed. Why?

A.—It would seem to prove what we have always contended: Whatever is in them, it isn't meat.

Q.—Why is it all right to eat plenty of chicken?

A.—There is plenty of chicken because it is seldom served in the army, due to the fact that the officers take everything but the neck. It is rarely offered in the navy because of a belief that it is just as well not to let sailors know there IS a food other than beans.

Q.—What is the situation about eggs?

A.—There is or will be a ceiling on eggs, which, after all, is preferable to eggs on the ceiling. The hens have had a pretty good year. They were late learning about the war and didn't worry.

* * *

Q.—What about Tootsy? That's my airedale. I've had him eight years and he has developed a habit of getting at the meat before I can reach it myself. He is very intelligent and there is no use trying to kid him by saying: "Sit up and beg and mumsy will give you a herring." Last Tuesday he bit the letter carrier. Today he bit the milkman and two neighbors. The next thing you know he may cause a national calamity by biting a Gallop Poll taker.

A.—It would seem up to all callers to wear leggings.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Rubber is not the sap of a tree, but is the latex found in tubes that run lengthwise throughout the inner part of the bark.

Individual car owners can conserve rubber Never drive over 35 miles an hour, check inflation pressure once a week, check wheel alignment every six months, rotate tires (including spares) to different wheels every 3,000 miles. It is not a difficult habit to acquire and it will keep you rolling longer.

Why balk at 35 miles an hour restrictions! In Jerusalem 8 miles an hour is the limit for automobiles, with the speed warnings printed in Arabic, Hebrew and English.

The Army is supplied by hundreds of thousands of rubber-tired trucks, just one of which for a 2½ ton vehicle, takes more than 7 times as much rubber as your passenger car.

Pontoon bridges are built on rubber floats that take more than a ton and a half of rubber.

THE FARMER AND HIS MULE

The following yarn "lifted" from Morgan's Buzz-Saw is worthy of a place in this column. Here's the story as we clipped it:

"Well, Lightning, you're just a mule, and I'm man and made in the image of God But here we work hitched up together, year in and year out, and I often wonder if you work for me or if I work for you?

'We cover the same distance but I do it on two legs and you do it on four, so I do twice as much work per leg as you do Soon we'll be putting in our corn crop When we harvest the corn, I'll give one-third to the landlord and one-third to you, and the balance is mine You will eat all but the cob I have to share mine with my wife and six children, six hogs, sixty hens, two ducks, a bantam' rooster and a banker If you and I both need shoes, you get 'em Yes Sir! Lightning, you are getting the best of me

"I ask you now is it fair for a mule, the son of a jackass, to swindle a man, the lord of creation, the most intelligent of all animals? You only help me plow and cultivate I must eat, shock, and husk the corn while you hee-haw at me over the pasture fence. All the year, the whole family has to help to scratch enough money together to pay the taxes and interest on the mortgage on you, you cnery old critter!

"The only time I've got anything on you is on election day I can vote and you can't But after election day I realize that I've been as big a jackass as your papa ever was And I begin to wonder whether politics was made for men or for jackasses, or, just to make jackasses out of men Honest now, Lightning, when you know all of these things, how can you keep a straight face and look so dumb and innocent?"

And a young lady went into one of our local stores "Have you any Lifebuoy?" she asked of the male clerk

"Set the pace, lady," said the young clerk "Set the pace!"

SENIOR CLASS NEWS
Anna Lee Brunes, Reporter

The American Literature class is studying Poes works "Ulalume," "The Raven" and "Annabel Lee." They are all about the death of beautiful woman.

We have been having speed tests in typing. Each error made during the test takes off ten words. Many of us get out the hole when we make errors.

The biology class is studying the crayfish. The crayfish belongs to the crustacean group of animals which means they have no backbone. We had a test over this chapter Friday.

In English we are studying Wm Shakespeare. We are now reading "Macbeth." We are acting it out in class. We are also writing out questions over "Macbeth."

We started the unit "Exchange" in Economics. It deals with barter which is direct exchange, and indirect exchange.

We have been working on problems dealing with angles triangles and parallel lines in Geometry. For example we know the number of degrees of two angles of a triangle and we have to find the number of the third angle.

The Bookkeeping class is taking ten different kinds of notes.

Ticket sales for our play has started. The class is having a contest to see who can sell the most tickets against the boys. At this writing the girls are slightly ahead but the boys think they will soon pass as the girls got a head start.

SOPHOMORE NEWS
Patricia Kudje, Reporter

Mr Gregory gave us a book written by Emil Ludwig for an assignment instead of a semester test. We read only part of it and then give a report on it. If we don't want to do that, we don't have to but it might be easier. We lived in the middle ages.

We are working out of a textbook for awhile in Algebra as Mr Micklick thinks it would be easier. Our workbook problems are too difficult for us to work.

This week in English II we have been writing themes on Hallowe'en about what our parents did when they were young. Now we are writing sentence and reviewing parts of speech.

We had a test Friday in Biology on the crayfish. We also had to draw pictures of it.

FRESHMAN NEWS
Ruth E. Bell, Reporter

In Science we have been studying about Water and its work.

The girls in Home Ec have begun to make skirts.

We organized a club in English. We choose new officer each day.

We have been making graphs in Algebra.

Pack a Lunch That Gives Them a Lift
(See Recipes Below.)

Victory Lunch Box

How's the vim, vigor and vitamin content on the put-up lunches for your school children and defense workers? You may not realize it, but the three "v's" have an important bearing on their intelligence quotient, for good, well balanced food makes both child and adult fit for whatever the day may bring. A poorly nourished body isn't receptive to learning exposure, nor is it capable of meeting the intensive requirements of physical or mental work.

Lunches should pull no punches. Just because they are compact, and it's difficult to have as much variety and hot food as when you are preparing the lunch in your own kitchen, is no reason for skipping over the lunch lightly, in the hope you can make up these shortages at dinner. This meal in the middle of the day should take care of a third of the day's food requirements and as such is not a matter to be considered lightly.

Yes, it's a challenge, homemakers! You may bake the best cake in miles around or turn out a roast that's proud to behold, or a dessert that's purely ambrosial, but if you don't put up a lunch that your child or defense worker husband eats with gusto, you won't get my vote for excellence.

Now, let's get to work! Sandwiches are a standby, but let's make them something more than peanut-butter and jelly or cheese between a couple slices of bread.

Sandwich Ideas.

Sliced or chopped hard-cooked eggs, combined with pickle and moistened with salad dressing.

Sliced tongue or ham with mustard or horseradish.

Liverwurst, mashed and seasoned with catsup.

Chopped ham, chopped hard-cooked eggs, minced green pepper, cooked salad dressing.

Cream cheese, grated yellow cheese, chopped pimiento, chopped green olives, salad dressing to moisten.

Ground corned beef, chopped pickle, and chopped ripe olives blended with mayonnaise.

Peanut butter and honey or cream cheese and honey.

Meat loaf, lettuce, rye bread.

Have a hot dish, too. This makes for top-notch efficiency besides giving the luncheon a hearty and substantial angle that your children or defense-plant husband will welcome.

How to do? Simply use a thermos bottle for soup or a hot drink or unwaxed paper cups and containers for hot foods. Packing the kind of lunch your family can work on should be your aim—an aim, which is fast gaining prominence because hours lost out of the plant or by children from school by illness, mean sabotage on the nutrition front.

LYNN SAYS:

Ideas in a Box: Surprises are as welcome in a lunch box as on a birthday. Try adding a few stuffed prunes (with cream, cheese, honey and peanut butter or dates) just as an extra. It will go over big, as will a few salted nuts, a bit of stuffed celery and whole carrots.

Dress up lunch with a perky salad. They'll like cooked or canned green beans with cooked or canned carrots with lettuce and French dressing. Shredded cabbage with shredded carrots, strips of green pepper, grated carrots, diced pineapple and raisins, canned peas, chopped onion, hard-cooked egg. Devilled eggs are nice, too—with a touch of paprika for color.

Creamed meat or fish in the hollow of a bun which has been scooped out, and the top of the bun held on together with a toothpick is good. Try creamed dried beef, creamed sausages, tuna fish or salmon salad, or creamed stuffed eggs.

This Week's Menu

*Recipes Given

Do you ever realize how much the family raves over your good homemade vegetable soup? Yes, they do, and it will be especially welcome in the lunch box.

Vegetable Soup.
1 soup bone
2 quarts cold water
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup diced carrots
1 cup sliced okra
1 cup green beans, cut
2 cups diced potatoes
2 cups tomatoes

Wash bone and remove all loose, small pieces of bone. Cover with water and let simmer for two hours. Remove bone from broth and cook all vegetables until tender. Season.

Salads make a complete meal of lunch besides providing the day's quota of vitamins. Neatly packed in small, waxed containers salads will retain their original freshness and appeal.

Vitamin Salad.
1½ cups spinach leaves, raw
2 tablespoons chopped, mixed pickles
½ cup diced celery
1 teaspoon chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 cup cottage cheese

Add pickles and celery, chopped onion and salt to spinach and mix well. Chill overnight in covered waxed paper container in refrigerator. Pack cottage cheese and mayonnaise in separate small paper containers to serve with spinach mixture.

Bright, fresh, juicy fruits such as oranges, pears, apples, bananas, grapes, individually wrapped in waxed paper will give a lift in the middle of the day. Then for variety's sake you might have a pudding packed in an individual paper container like this one:

Apricot Cream.
(Serves 6)

4 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
Juice and rind of 1 lemon
2 tablespoons hot water
½ cup strained apricot pulp
4 egg whites
2 tablespoons powdered sugar

Beat egg yolks, add sugar, lemon juice, water and apricot pulp. Cook over hot water until thick. Beat egg whites stiff and add powdered sugar. Fold into cooled, cooked mixture. Place in refrigerator until thick and cold.

Cookies with fruit or puddings polish off the dessert course, and child or plant worker is ready for an afternoon of real "production." Favorite cookies made with honey to keep in tune with the times are

Honey Brownies.
(Makes 2 dozen)

1 package semi-sweet chocolate chips
¼ cup shortening
2 eggs, beaten
6 tablespoons strained honey
¼ cup sifted flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup chopped nuts

Melt chocolate and shortening over hot water. Cool. Beat eggs until lemon-colored and add honey gradually. Add sifted dry ingredients. Mix in chocolate, add vanilla and nuts. Pour into greased, waxed-paper lined 8 inch square pan. Bake 35 minutes in a moderate (370-degree) oven.

CHRISTIAN NURTURE IN THE FAMILY

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 6:4-9, 20-25; II Timothy 3:14, 15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it.—Proverbs 22:6.

The religious life of the home is a determining factor in the life of the child, for it is in the home that the child's whole existence centers and from which he receives the repeated impressions, day by day, which determine character and destiny. Then too, it is in the home that the parent has the opportunity to demonstrate the reality of the faith professed in the church and to show the child that Christianity really counts in the ordinary experiences of life.

I. By Recognizing God's Word (Deut. 6:4-9).

Twice a day the orthodox Jew repeated the words of verses 4 and 5, "the Shema," in his time of prayer, morning and night. It was the foundation of his faith, declaring the oneness of God in a world of many heathen gods, and calling for complete and absolute devotion to Him.

But it was not enough that these words should be repeated in the service, they were to be taught with all diligence to the children and to be a normal and natural part of their daily conversation.

Here is a matter of great significance to us. The faith which we profess in the church must be effectively brought into the home. It is not enough to carry a Bible on Sunday, it should be in use in the home throughout the week, not only in family worship, but in the incidentals of daily life.

The family altar has gradually disappeared, and it is regrettable that it has, for the testimony of generations indicates that in family worship some of the most useful men and women of all ages have received the direction of life which made them great for God.

Let us not readily assume that it is not possible for us to have a family altar simply because of the difficulties of time, place, etc. But if we cannot have such worship regularly, let us show our children that we have a real interest by reading our Bibles, by sharing some blessing found therein with them, and by making prayer the natural thing in the home at all times, not just in hours of trial or adversity. Let us recognize God's Word in our family life.

II. By Remembering God's Blessing (Deut. 6:20-25).

The nation that forgets its past will have no future worth remembering. The Israelites were to recall that the glorious history of God's loving kindness toward them bore testimony to the truth of His Word and to the faithfulness with which He had kept them. Their young people would thus be encouraged to trust God for the future. "Hitherto the Lord hath helped," means that henceforth we may count on Him.

In every nation there are those occasions of history where only God could deliver—and He did. The recollection of such events in a way which will give the glory to God rather than to man will strengthen faith and cause men to look to God in the hour of need, and to thank Him in the day of victory.

In the family too, we should cultivate the sacred memories of God's deliverance, of His blessing, of the joy of His fellowship in bright as well as threatening moments. Children who hear such matters gratefully rehearsed in the home have an effective anchor in a time of storm.

III. By Continuing in God's Grace (II Tim. 3:14, 15).

That which we learn of Christ and of God's Word is to be translated into living for Christ. The experiences of grace and the remembrance of God's blessing of childhood are not for that period of life alone but for a continuing in God's grace. This carries our thought a bit beyond the responsibility of the parent to provide the proper surroundings and training, and stresses the duty of the child to apply, perfect, and continue that experience of Christian truth and testimony.

Too many careless individuals, who because of the desires of their own wicked hearts have abandoned the church and the Book, blame it on the parents. "They were too strict. We had to go to church too much. They made me go to Sunday school"—such are their excuses. Of course, we know that they are only excuses, not reasons. They are the refuge of the hypocrite who is not willing to face his own terrible responsibility.

The obligation is on each one of us to continue in the things we have learned, and if we do not, the judgment must come upon us. If we do, salvation and blessing will come to us, and we in turn will pass it on to others.

May this lesson turn many an American home back to God's way.

Surely Neighbor Would Be Happy to Contribute

Answering a determined tap at the door, Mrs. Jones opened it to face her neighbor, who was obviously very wrought up about something.

"It's that boy of yours," she snorted. "He's just thrown this brick through my window. It came within an inch of hitting me."

A pleased look came into Mrs. Jones' face.

"Really! How interesting!" she exclaimed. "I wonder if you will let me have the brick? We're trying to keep all the little mementoes of his youthful pranks; they'll be so interesting when he grows up."

Ev'rybody Ev'ry Pay Day

6,000,000 Women Enrolled in War Savings Payroll Plan.

WASHINGTON, D C —Women At War Week, opening Nov. 22, during which women will seek to sell the greatest single week's volume of War Bonds and Stamps will serve to put the spotlight on the mighty contribution women generally are making toward financing the war

Six million women are on War Savings payroll plans. Their monthly deductions total $70,000,000

The customers of 300 000 newspaper boys who have sold more than $50 000,000 in War Bonds and Stamps are mostly women

Volunteer saleswomen run nearly all the Bond booths in theatres from Maine to California They also are sparking the War Bond sales in retail stores

Ralph G Engelsman, Associate Field Director of the payroll savings section of the War Savings Staff, readily admits that without the support of women the phenomenal record of payroll savings enrollments would not have been achieved Payroll savings plans are now in operation in 148,000 businesses and factories Employees of twenty-five thousand of these firms are converting at least 10 percent of gross payrolls into War Bonds every payday

Associate Field Director Engelsman says that women have contributed directly and indirectly toward this record When a man devoted 10 or more percent of his pay envelope to War Bonds, the woman at home has had a powerful voice in the decision Her planning, her economies and her cheerfulness play their part in the success of payroll savings.

The Treasury Department is counting upon this woman influence in its current campaign to "top that 10 percent by New Year's" By the first of the year the Treasury hopes to enroll at least 3,000,000 women workers in a payroll savings plan and 5,000,000 more men with total deductions for War Bonds over the 10 percent mark.

Season Opens On Trapping

TRAPPING SEASON OPENED TUESDAY, NOV. 10

Muskrats And Mink Are Protected For Couple More Weeks

The trapping season on all furbearers except muskrat and mink opened Nov 10th The season on muskrat and mink opens December 1 It is good business to trap only during the open seasons This year in particular it is a patriotic duty to take only prime furs With specialist groups in the army needing specialists' equipment, including water-proof furs, it is extremely important that muskrats, the most important of all water-proof fur-bearers, reach primeness before they are trapped Because of the early litter mortality among muskrats caused by high water, the muskrat and mink season remains closed until December 1 Even at this late date many kit, or young, muskrats will be trapped that will not provide highest quality fur. Game enforcement officials have been instructed to pay particularly close attention to early trapping violations, and violators who are apprehended may expect severe penalties

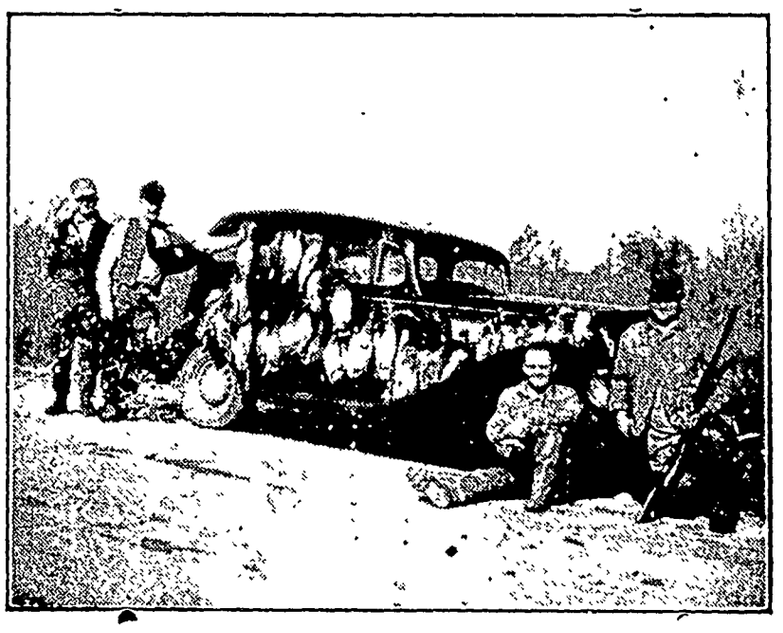
DUCK SHOOTING IMPROVING



Conservation Officer Checks Three Successful Missouri River Duck Hunters

Duck shooting is improving steadily on Iowa's duck waters with a general drift of northern ducks into this state. Both the Mississippi and the Missouri Rivers have provided some spendid shooting. The larger inland lakes have thousands of waterfowl rafted in their centers, from which they leave to feed on waste corn left in the fields by mechanical pickers. These ducks are still clock-watchers, feeding for the most part before and after shooting hours However, stormy or windy days make possible excellent shooting in these areas.

Pheasant Season November 12 to December 2

Squirrel Season Closes November 15

The 1942 squirrel season closes November 15, and for hunters in almost every section of the state it was one of the most successful in many years. The timbers have been and still are literally alive with squirrels.

DEMOCRACY STREAMLINING

If the President and the country want to get a full realization of how democracy is streamlining for action they should think back to the summer of 1941, just one year ago, when, for what seemed like unending weeks, the congress stewed over extension of the selective service act.

Senate and house isolationists were haranguing the galleries on the iniquities of keeping the boys more than one year in camp; telling the public how the navy was already convoying ships; revealing in advance that Roosevelt had sent troops to Iceland.

Finally by the thin margin of one vote, 203 to 202, and thanks to the sage generalship of Speaker Sam Rayburn, the selective service act was extended. Had it not been for that narrow victory, we should have had no army to rush to Australia, and the whole war effort would have received a tragic set-back.

But last week, a war-geared house of representatives passed the 18-19 year draft extension act in three days; and it should be passed by the senate and signed by the President inside the week.

Politically and personally, nobody wanted the 18-19 year draft extension. It was the worst time to pass it, just before elections. But congress is doing a much better job than most people realize for streamlined democracy.

ATROCITY PICTURES

A strong debate is raging among propaganda chiefs over the question of atrocity stories and pictures. The government has received a lot of such material from Allied sources, especially the Chinese and Poles, including such horrible scenes as Japanese attacking Chinese women, and pouring oil on live bodies before setting the torch to them

Opponents of publication argue that the atrocity stories of the last war were largely invented, and when so exposed left the public disillusioned; thus the people might now react unfavorably and charge the government with pulling the same tricks.

Other officials argue, however, that the material is authentic, that it is not posters and rumors, but actual photographs, and the public should know what sort of enemies we are fighting.

It is apparently a part of the German psychological warfare to treat British and Americans with reasonable humaneness in order to keep us lulled in a state of moderate warfare. They save their worst tricks for the conquered nations and the Russians

The Poles and Chinese are urging use of the material as a necessary means of fully arousing the American public to the menace.

Elmer Davis' Office of War Information is set to go, once the debate is settled

DAIRY MANPOWER

Forthright Sen. Berkeley Bunker of Nevada had a long talk with the President the other day on the war manpower problem, in which he emphasized the need of swift action to meet the labor shortage on dairy farms.

"I'm from a farm area myself and I know what these dairy people are up against," said Bunker. "Unless we move fast we will have a serious shortage next year. Already, many farmers are beginning to slaughter their dairy herds because they can't get help to tend them."

The President admitted the problem was serious, and assured Bunker that the War Manpower commission was aware of it. He added, however, that he doubted any steps the government might take to relieve the farm labor shortage would be a complete answer.

"The government can't solve this alone," said Roosevelt. "We are going to have to depend on the farmers themselves for individual initiative. I'll give you an example of what I mean."

The President then told how a neighbor of his in New York state, owning a large dairy farm, had partly solved his labor shortage by employing students from a near-by high school to milk the cows.

"Boys did the milking in the morning and a group of girls from the same school took over in the afternoons," he said

"That sounds like a good idea, Mr. President," observed Senator Bunker, "but it isn't exactly a new one. When I was a boy on a Nevada farm, I used to milk 10 cows every morning before school and 10 at night And I had to ride eight miles to school on a bus"

International Red Cross Aids, Helps to Locate War Prisoners

Instrumental in Obtaining Fair Treatment of All Internees.

Perhaps you know a soldier or sailor who is a prisoner of war? Or perhaps you have been notified that he is missing in action but have no official word that he is a prisoner?

In any case you want more information. You want to know about getting more news of him. You want to know if you can send a letter, or a parcel with warm clothes and some of those cookies he is so fond of.

The best place to get that information is through the Red Cross. Your nearest local Red Cross chapter can tell you what you want to know. If possible go to the chapter yourself, rather than write. If you don't know where it is, or can't find it in the telephone directory, call the city hall, or any government or municipal agency, and they will tell you.

The Red Cross chapter will tell you exactly how to address a letter to the prisoner, or will help you fill in a message on a special form if he is only listed as missing in action. They will tell you, too, about parcels. And they will explain what is being done by the Red Cross and other agencies to make life as bearable as possible for him while he is in enemy hands.

The situation changes frequently, but you can always be sure that if you go to the Red Cross chapter you will get the latest information on what you can do.

International Committee.

There is of course no direct contact between nations at war, but the American Red Cross can work through the International Red Cross committee in Geneva, Switzerland, which is recognized by everybody as strictly neutral, and has acted as go-between in wartime ever since it was founded for that purpose nearly 80 years ago.

Under agreements made at Geneva before the war—in 1929 to be exact—the nations promised to give humane treatment to prisoners, and drew up a set of rules for use in time of war. Long before the present war Germany and Italy were among those who agreed to abide by those rules, and in February, 1942, Japan announced that she would observe them.

Each nation agreed to set up a central bureau for prisoners of war information The United States has set up a Prisoners of War Information bureau in the office of the provost marshal general—in the war department The Japanese government established its Central Prisoners bureau in Tokyo in December, 1941

Cabled to Geneva.

Names of prisoners and civilian internees are assembled by these bureaus, cabled to the International Red Cross committee's agency in Geneva, listed and filed for reference in the committee's Central Agency for Prisoners of War, and forwarding lists of those captured in the Philippines.

If after a reasonable time you have received no word of a man believed captured, you can ask your Red Cross chapter to help you fill out an inquiry form and the Red Cross will make every effort to obtain a report.

Each nation also agreed to provide suitable prison quarters, with adequate heat and cooking facilities, and food similar to that given to its own soldiers in barracks, and to allow the prisoners to write home and receive mail and parcels. War prisoners are confined in camps, or compounds, usually surrounded by barbed wire and armed guards, in which they may move about comparatively freely, but they may not be shut up, as in a jail.

Prisoners are allowed to send a limited number of letters or postcards, depending not only on the country but the camp in which they are situated Prisoners of war and civilian internees held by the United States, for example—German, Italian, and Japanese—may send two letters and one postcard per week, and may receive an unlimited amount of incoming mail.

Letters from German prison camps are sometimes received within two or three months, but obviously mail from prisoners in the Far East must be expected to take much longer.

Parcels Delivered.

It has also been possible to deliver weekly standard Red Cross food parcels to supplement the diet of prisoners in Germany, Italy and occupied France. These supplies are distributed through the International Red Cross committee at Geneva. Delegates of the committee are allowed to inspect the prison camps to check on whether the prisoners are being treated in accordance with the international agreements, and to see that the parcels reach them safely.

Contents of the parcels vary from time to time, but at present each package, weighing approximately 11 pounds, contains milk powder, 1 lb.; cheese, 8 oz.; liver paste, 6 oz.; corned beef, 12 oz.; pork meat, 12 oz.; raisins, 16 oz.; sugar, 8 oz.; lemon powder, 12 oz.; cocoa, 8 oz.; coffee, 8 oz.; chocolate, 4 oz.; candy, 6 oz.; cigarettes, 40; tobacco, 2¼ oz.; lunch biscuit (type C), 7 oz.; matches, 2 boxes.

The sending of packages to Japan is a more difficult matter, due to the refusal of the Japanese government to allow neutral vessels in the western Pacific areas It is hoped that eventually arrangements may be made for the shipment by the Red Cross of a regular supply of standard food parcels, cigarettes, clothing and medical necessities.

In the meantime, the American Red Cross has been able to send food parcels for trans-shipment to the Far East on the neutral Swedish vessel, the Gripsholm, sailing to Portuguese East Africa, where American and Japanese diplomats and other noncombatants are exchanged.

On her first sailing the Gripsholm carried 20,000 parcels, $50,000 worth of drugs and medical supplies, 1,000,000 cigarettes, 10,000 tins of smoking tobacco, and large quantities of clothing and toilet articles supplied by the army and navy departments for their respective departments.

On her second voyage, the Gripsholm carried 60,000 of the 11-pound food parcels, 20,000,000 cigarettes, over $33,000 worth of drugs and medical supplies, $95,000 worth of blankets and toilet articles, and large quantities of underwear, shoes and other articles amounting to more than half a million items.

Distribution of supplies to prisoners in the Far East is being carried out by International Red Cross committee delegates in Tokyo, Shanghai, and Hong Kong, who will make every effort to see that part of this aid goes to the prisoners captured in the Philippines, even though the Japanese government has not yet allowed the appointment of a delegate of the International Red Cross committee in the Philippines.

There is naturally anxious speculation on the treatment of prisoners, especially in view of reports of brutality brought back to the United States by some internees, particularly newspaper correspondents returning on the exchange ship, the Gripsholm.

Political Suspects.

These latter were detained by the Japanese equivalent of the Gestapo, and were in most cases thrown into jail on the pretext that they were political suspects. The Japanese did not recognize that they came under the protection of the Geneva Prisoners of War convention. The International Red Cross committee delegates are strictly limited by the Japanese government to efforts to protect the interests of the men of the armed forces held as prisoners of war and of civilians interned in recognized camps.

These are held in prison camps or compounds. International Red Cross committee delegates permitted to inspect these camps in Japan and occupied China, and to speak to the prisoners, have reported that conditions are satisfactory and that they have received no serious complaints.

Any report of ill treatment of men in the armed forces who have been captured usually applies to the period when the prisoner is still on or near the field of battle, when the animosities engendered by hostilities are still strong. As soon as the prisoner has been placed in an organized prison camp governed by the agreements made at Geneva, his situation is usually much improved.

For War Prisoner

A Red Cross worker is shown assembling a "prisoner of war package" of food and cigarettes. Preparing these packages is only one of the many services performed by volunteer Red Cross canteen workers.

'New' Clothes

Civilians as well as prisoners of war benefit from the cargo of a Red Cross mercy ship. Evidence of distribution, through Red Cross channels, of cracked wheat is seen in the garments worn by these Chinese children.

What Is It?

This strange device is a circular filing machine. Installation of machines of this type was made necessary by the large number of messages passing through the Red Cross inquiry service at Washington, D. C.

transmitted at once to the central information bureau of the country interested.

The provost marshal general of the United States keeps a permanent official list of all names received from the International Red Cross committee, and arranges for notification to the next of kin. Names of some prisoners captured by the Japanese have been received, but there has been long delay on the part of the Japanese government in International Red Cross Grew Out of Eye Witness Story of Italian Battle

In 1862 Henri Dunant, a Swiss who had been an eye witness, wrote a graphic account of the Battle of Solferino. He told of the suffering of the wounded soldiers and discussed the possibility of organizing, in all civilized countries, "permanent societies of volunteers" to care for the wounded of all nationalities in time of war.

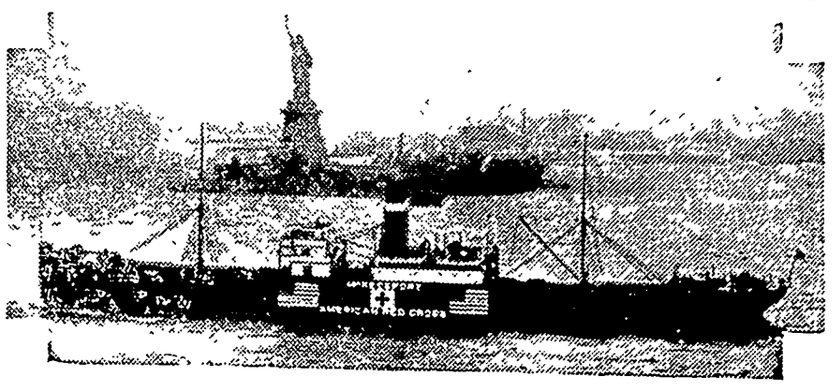
A lawyer from Geneva named Gustave Moynier read Dunant's book. As president of a local philanthropic society Moynier appointed a committee of five members of the society to consider the possibility of putting Dunant's plan into action.

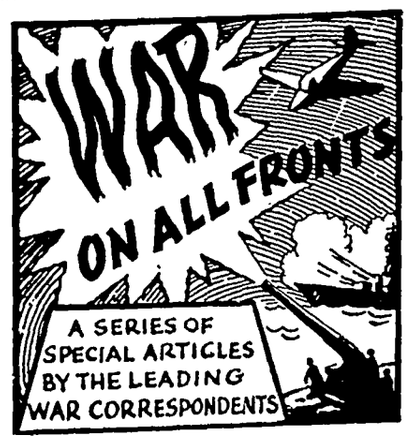
The "Committee of Five' then issued an invitation to all European governments and military, medical and philanthropic societies to send delegates to a conference to be held at Geneva on October 26, 1863.

The 36 delegates who attended the now famous Geneva convention recommended that relief societies be formed in each nation, authorized by the government of that nation and co-operating with its army.

The original "Committee of Five" became the International Red Cross committee. In 1919 the League of Red Cross Societies was founded, thus uniting all the separate national Red Cross societies And in 1928 was instituted the International Red Cross conference, governing body of the International Red Cross.

Long before this nation entered the conflict Red Cross mercy ships were sailing from the United States laden with provisions for the peoples of war-torn Europe. Here the McKeesport is shown passing the Statue of Liberty as she heads for the open sea.





Yank Fliers in Australia

By W. B. Courtney

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

I am writing this from Port Darwin in the Northern Territory of Australia. The Darwin area is about as far from Sydney and Melbourne as Death Valley is from New York. It is probably wilder in nature and ruder in its white men than any other part of earth under a United Nations flag.

Even the Australians, usually sensitive about references to whatever section of their country, admit it's "bloody Godforsaken." But it's home, for the time being at least, to many Yank bomber and pursuit kids whose advanced flying bases, hacked from the desert scrub and the moribund red earth by their own engineers and labor battalions, white and Negro, dot the "bush" hereabouts.

So very young and lean, habitually wearing only shorts and rubber sneakers, cooked to a partridge brown, raising as much beard as they can, with huge pistols dangling from web belts, these rakish and raffish airmen look, after a couple of weeks, like student pirates.

Life Without Women.

They have to be tough and ingenious to survive down here—the flies, the mosquitoes, the snakes, the heat and the eye-splitting glare that makes the inside of your head raw, the unbearable loneliness of life without women.

They eat only Aussie chow—and second best at that. When they get lump sugar, they mark it with ink for use as playing cards or dominoes. The difficulties of transportation have bogged down most of the commissary, recreational and morale services of our own army.

Cigarettes and other amenities are likely to be stolen before they can pass the long overland trek from our base ports.

When staff officers fly in for visits, they usually load their planes with comforts for the Yanks here—magazines, candy, playing cards, cigarettes and the like. I saw a whole group jump away from unfinished dinner, with shouts of boyish glee, when Gen. Ralph Royce produced out of his plane a baseball, a bat and some fielders' mitts.

American Ingenuity.

Their toughness they take out on the Nips. The only superiority we have in the air of the Southwest Pacific is skill and heart. Their ingenuity is expressed in little ways at once familiar and endearing to an American visitor.

Northern territory is the Land of the White Ant. These various termites build structures, some low mounds, some 20-foot columns, until the plains around Darwin, seen in the moonlight, give you the impression of ruined castles and villages in miniature.

The so-called "magnetic" nests are the most famous—tall, slabwise, sharply templed pillars, the ends of which always point exactly north and south. Woody substance inside, they are covered with fine clay that hardens into fortresses that repel all the termites' enemies.

The Yanks found a use for these. They ax off the tops, chisel out a hollow in the bases—and have fine barbecue or picnic stoves!

All Kinds of Hunting.

The chief unrationed recreation of the Yank airmen here is hunting—Nips in the air, kangaroos, snakes, dingoes or wild dogs, emus, ducks, buffalo, crocodiles on the ground.

The kangaroo remains of greatest interest. The boys catch young ones and try to tame them; each plans to take a 'roo home with him. But they find the 'roos dumb and unresponsible; "just misshapen rabbits."

One squad tent has a mascot—an old 'roo that, on his own, attached himself. He will eat food that's set on the ground. He comes in at night and sleeps under one of the cots. But if you try to pet him he runs out. At reveille he moves out about 30 feet from the tent; sits there all day, watching, sidestepping anyone who goes near him. In four months of this, no one has succeeded in touching him.

The Yanks try to build up auxiliary air-raid warning services with their wild-pet friends. Goannas, a type of monitor lizard, are plentiful in all the camps—roam about all day on their business of catching insects, not allowing the advent of thousands of men to disturb their lives. They are not dangerous—except that if you stand motionless, one may think you are a tree and run up you, with unfortunate results to your clothes and skin from his knife-like claws. The goannas stand on their hind legs and turn their heads when planes go over.

FBI Men Proved They Weren't Knit-Wits, Anyway

FBI men thought they were on to something big when Seattle police discovered a notebook containing this cryptic entry "K P 2, C O 8, K 5, Y O, K P 2, DECR 6, K 5, INC 4." They spent quite a while trying to decode it but finally even the cipher experts confessed they were stumped.

In desperation they set out to find the owner of the notebook who turned out to be an attractive brunette. Upon request she obligingly translated the coded entry as follows:

"Knit one, purl two, cast on eight, knit five, yarn over, knit three, purl two, decrease six, knit five, increase four."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

For years the U. S. has consumed over half the world's supply of rubber. Close to 70% of the rubber imported by the U. S. was used in the manufacture of tires and tubes and tire accessories.

Last year a 6 00 by 16 4-ply black sidewall tire weighed 21 54 pounds, of which 11 2 pounds was crude rubber. The balance of the weight was in rubber, fabric, wire and chemicals.

Several years ago a man from Seattle traded a small house for one of the earliest types of automobile tires, of which he was a collector.

The most welcome gift for a Ugandie bride of Africa is an old automobile tire, which she wears as a necklace on special occasions.

The tires on the "Spirit of St. Louis" in the Smithsonian Institution are fifteen years old and still good.

Aviation to Revolutionize America's Living Habits

Civil Aeronautics Administration Provides the Necessary Impetus; New Developments to Have Social as Well as Material Effect.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street N-W, Washington, D. C.

One thing the war will produce, upon which there is general agreement, is national airmindedness. And there will be basic changes in the living habits of the nation, produced by development of the airplane, as great or greater than were produced by the automobile.

The automobile and the good roads which made its use possible revolutionized small town life. The airplane, according to the experts who manage to snatch a moment to think beyond bombers and fighters to passenger and cargo planes, is going to change big town life and perhaps something far more important—small-world life.

Recently I had a long chat with one of the men who heads up a plant that is turning out planes for Uncle Sam. That is a fulltime job but he is a dreamer, too, and the moment he gets a chance to lean back and think out loud about the future, he paints an epic picture of the skyways of tomorrow.

"What the roads did for the automobile the airfields will do for the airplane," he said to me watching imaginary airplanes in a blue cloud of cigar smoke. "We now have 25 times as many airports as we had before the war. They are in many remote places. Those places won't be remote any more."

Nest for Warbirds

When he said that I couldn't help recalling a trip I made recently on a special plane across the country. Because we were going to see a lot of airplane secrets anyhow, we were permitted to "look"—I mean by that, the curtains weren't drawn as they are in all ordinary passenger planes these days. I won't reveal the details of what I saw, of course, but I can tell you it was hard to believe. Suddenly in the midst of nowhere the runways of a field below would be visible. A few miles away I could see automobiles or railway trains moving along like bugs or worms. I knew the passengers were looking at the landscape as they passed. But plain and hill and river were all they could see. Just out of their range of vision there would be a busy airport. Only warbirds nest on it now, but some day commercial planes will rise from these thousands of tiny intersections in the sky routes that will lace the world together in a tiny ball.

The way these dots on the air map have increased is incredible. The Civil Aeronautics administration's first airport program got under way in 1941 with 385 defense landing areas designated for construction or repair. There were 282 new airports by the end of 1941 as well as 46 new seaplane bases and anchorages. The significant increase in landing fields since then is, of course, a military secret. At the beginning of 1942 there were 2,484 airports in the country, of which 1,886 were municipal institutions, 510 were commercial. That in itself is significant for it shows how communities themselves pushed forward to open their skygates without waiting for a commercial organization to do the job. The rest of the nearly twenty-five hundred fields were army and navy, emergency or miscellaneous; 30 were private.

Airport Development

Meanwhile, with the aid of the CAA laws were drawn up in many states which in the year 1942 resulted in the passage of 42 separate acts by state legislations designed to provide municipalities or counties or other political divisions with authority to cure defects in or develop airports. Ten states passed acts to acquire land and construct facilities and operate them. Some states built flight strips beside highways from unclaimed aviation tax refund money. All this shows how aviation was becoming a part of the national political consciousness.

During this time one of the problems of the air that few people, even those who constantly use air travel, realize, increased—the traffic problem. As one pilot expressed it to me, speaking of a field where he learned most of his flying: "Our traffic problem there was a lot more complicated than the one on Times square in New York city."

It is easy to see why. Consider that the block system on the railways is divided into one-mile sections, that is, a train is warned a mile ahead of the block in which there is an obstruction to traffic. In the air a comparable block is now 15 miles. When the cruising speed of the commercial planes goes up the block will have to be increased. Traffic control is regulated by a federal airways system. In 1941 it was extended to the point where it separated and controlled traffic from 14 centers, established by the Civil Aeronautics administration. Over a million and a half aircraft operations were recorded in that year.

The increase in speed which military developments in airplane manufacture have brought about will have a social as well as a material effect.

Cruising—At 400

"Think back," my air-minded friend said, "to World War I. Our maximum speed of war planes was about 180 miles. Today, 180 miles is the cruising speed of our commercial planes. Today our fast warplanes make much more than 400 miles an hour. Let's be conservative and say that in 1965 our commercial planes will be cruising at at least 400 miles.

"In my opinion we will race the sun from New York to Los Angeles and not do a bad job, leave New York at noon and be in Los Angeles at 4 p. m.—their time.

"Going in the other direction, leave New York at 5 p. m., get to London for breakfast. Leave London at eight in the evening and get to New York in the morning."

It is easy to see that when London, New York and Los Angeles are that near together in terms of time, they will be that much nearer together in terms of thought—in habits, customs and understanding. There can be no distant places, in the natural course of existence, Americans on business or recreation will move through Singapore, Tokyo, Buenos Aires, Rio, Moscow and their citizens will be a part of our cities.

When it comes to the makeup of our own towns, large and small, it is easy to see what will happen when a normal daily commuting distance to work will be stretched to a hundred miles. The residential area of cities will fan out in monstrous circles. There will be a much more general admixture of viewpoint and attitude of city and country, of community and community. The melting pot of America will produce a much more homogeneous broth of humanity. And it will temper the world.

'Austerity' Luncheon Makes Lasting Impression

My friend from Australia dropped in suddenly in an army bomber the other day, as friends have a way of doing these days. His business has kept him in Australia many years. He likes the folks "down under" and he's doing a good job for our soldiers there and for Uncle Sam now.

"Australia is not fighting a total war yet," he said, "but she's a darnsite farther along than America. We haven't started," he told me.

"Because," I suggested, "we didn't get the scare they got and are still getting."

"Yes," he said. "Nobody expected the Japs to try to get and hold Australia, but they did fear that if there wasn't adequate protection the Japs could bomb Australian cities and the big war plants all along the coast and put them out of business."

The thing he seemed to feel that had made a great impression on the "austerity."

"Take the austerity luncheons and dinners—that is what they are called," he said. "I invited an American Big Shot to lunch. I gave him the menu. He said: 'I'll take a dozen oysters.' 'All right,' I told him, 'that will amount to three shillings and will leave you sixpence, which is enough for a cup of coffee.'"

It seems that you can buy just so much, no more. You can spend 65 cents for lunch and 85 cents for dinner. You can have your luxuries, but it doesn't leave anything over.

And instead of a limit on income of $25,000 a year which has been suggested here; after taxes are deducted, $10,000 is all that is left.

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Wireless: One famine the Nazzys can't hide from the world is their famine in ideas. The way they twisted President Roosevelt's address to hoodwink their people showed how poverty stricken Goebbels has become in lies. That's good news over here, because it lets us know that Berlin doesn't hope to fool the world any more—just its own groggy citizens . . Sen. Lister Hill made a swell speech the other night, but he did pronounce war effort "woffut" . . . Deems Taylor catalogued the song smashes in all the American crises and came up with "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition" as the theme song of the one going on now. In spite of everything he's tried to do to kill the impression, Jack Pearl is still a funny guy. He convicted himself by being comic on his comeback . The About Time Dep't Variety, reviewing the new radio programs, now gives credit to the writers, who have been, too often, the muscles for mediocre mouthpieces who got all the Crossley and most of the moola.

The Magazines: The Japs were saps to give J. B. Powell his freedom. He will be a powerful witness against them when the payoff day comes. His account, in The Nation, of their brutalities to him and other prisoners will shock and enrage you. Kyle Crichton, enthusing over "This Is the Army" in Collier's, practically gets down on his knees imploring Hollywood to let the show alone when it parades before the kodaks. Fergossakes, begs Crichton, keep the colonel's dotter out of it.

The Front Pages: An exciting UP yarn from Moscow gives you a clear line on why the Soviets are too tough for Hitler. This piece describes a battle that raged for nine days in Stalingrad for possession of one house. The Huns took countries in less time. Raoul Auernheimer recalls a piece of trick journalism by Mark Twain. The humorist caught a cop asleep on his beat. He realized his editor wouldn't print the item, so he sat and fanned the sleeping bluecoat with a cabbage leaf. That drew a crowd and made the story worth a feature spread.

FRED ALLEN and Portland Hoffa aren't going to have to worry about meat rationing if the public does as well by them this year as it did last. The star of the Sunday night oil program received gifts of meat from two governors—a smoked ham from the governor of Tennessee, a turkey from Governor Johnson of Kentucky, another ham from the University of Missouri, a roast pig from Iowa State college, a barrel of oysters from Johns Hopkins, and hundreds of other gifts, ranging from a bucket of West Virginia coal to a bottle of laughing gas!

Joel McCrea's a life member of the Officers' Club of Gardner Field, Calif. Recently, when buying cattle in that vicinity, with the thermometer at 110, he visited the camp and learned that the men were trying to raise money for a swimming pool. A Bing Crosby golf match had raised part of it, a Victory Committee show had helped, but they still lacked $2,000. McCrea said he couldn't sing, dance or play golf to raise money, but he could write a check—and did. You'll be seeing him soon in "Great Without Glory."

JOEL McCREA

Harry Carey's been in dozens of range wars in the movies; now he'd like to take part in one. Cattle thieves have been butchering beef belonging to a neighboring rancher and selling it to the black market; the neighbor, like Carey, raises cattle for the government. So, though Harry is busy in "Air Force" at Warner Bros., he's been oiling a couple of six shooters and planning action.

Fred MacMurray's added himself to the list of Hollywood farmers; he's the owner of 800 acres in northern California, which will be used for farming and cattle raising. He's slated to do "Above Suspicion" with Joan Crawford, for Metro, as the one outside picture Paramount lets him make each year. The story of a professor and his wife who act as British agents on the continent, it had been intended for Powell and Loy.

Director Richard Wallace just doesn't like plane crashes, since he was a near-victim in one in 1935 that cost five lives. So you won't be seeing the crackup scenes in "A Night to Remember," with Brian Aherne and Loretta Young, that the author put in.

One of the best of our radio shows isn't heard in this country except by the studio audience. It's "Mail Call," the war department's service show which is recorded and shortwaved from CBS' Hollywood studios to service men in all parts of the world. A recent program, staged before an audience of service men, included Amos 'n' Andy, Claudette Colbert, Joel McCrea and Betty Jane Rhodes.

In 1918 Leo McCarey wrote a song entitled "Keep Up Your Chin," but the Armistice was signed the day it was accepted for publication, and war songs were out. Now along comes another war, and the song's part of the musical score of "Once Upon a Honeymoon."

It sounds almost too pat. Dick Davis, playing a Norwegian in Warner's "Edge of Darkness," heaved a Nazi storm trooper over his head, cracked the heads of two others together, fought through a mob of them, raced 50 yards and dove off a pier. When he swam back to the beach Director Lewis Milestone called to him: "Your wife phoned that your draft board has classified you, you're 4-F—physically unfit!"

ODDS AND ENDS—Deanna Durbin will sing "Rockabye Baby" with Chinese lyrics in "Forever Yours" . . . Brenda Marshall and her husband, William Holden, are giving their Rhodesian Lion dog to the government for army service . . . Jane Wyatt spent two days in a Los Angeles hospital learning nursing technique for her role in RKO's "Army Surgeon" . . . We hear that Melvyn Douglas, turned down twice by the army, will try again when he's finished "Three Hearts for Julia" . . . Gregory Ratoff is bringing Mae Busch back to pictures; she has been cast as Don Ameche's secretary in "Something to Shout About."

SOY BEANS AND THE NATIONAL DEBT

The boys down at the Farmers Elevator were about driven crazy when the farmers began hauling in the huge crop of soy beans Beans and more beans, in fact some over 18 000 bushels were hauled in to the elevator

That vast amount of beans got the boys doing some mathematical gymnastics with the following fact

By actual count they found that there were 247 beans in one ounce There are 660 ounces to the bushel or 163 020 beans per bushel The 18 000 bushels of beans therefore contains four billion, two hundred sixty eight million one hundred and sixty thousand (4 268,160,000) grand total beans!

Now then imagine each bean is a round silver dollar and you can get some idea of how big the national debt is by multiplying that figure several times again!

Right now Uncle Sam is spending seventeen million dollars each hour of the day and night to win this war

And if all beans were soy beans it would indeed make a pile at the end of the day

JOHN CHAMBERS HAS ONE FOR RILEY

We have often heard the remark that no matter how good a man's record is among for office he may have difficulty in carrying his own precinct

In the recent election John A Chambers of Twin Lake township topped the ticket for supervisor receiving 138 votes in his home township and his opponent received only one single solitary vote That is one for the record

We believe that is a record in this county as we cannot recall where any candidate before has ever received a unanimous vote

Mr Chambers also received 34 votes in Swea township Mr Chambers carried all but three precincts in Fenton Madison and Crystal in the north part of the county

A great many of the people of Twin Lake township for back many many many hundred years have had implicit confidence and goodwill for their neighbor man

Someone should have stopped him when the soda jerk asked this sailor what the navy was doing:

"I don't know what the battlewagons are doin," he said, "but if the Heinies don't get wise, there won't be any subs left to worry 'em This destroyer I'm on is in the Green Paint Division. We carry a deck load of green paint and whenever we detect the prescence of a sub we immediately circle the suspected zone, pouring the paint all over the surface. The Nazi, hearing our motors, comes up for a look When his periscope comes out of the water it gets a film of green paint on it; they don't know they are breaking the surface so the sub keeps right on rising. We just wait until it is about 400 feet in the air and then knock it down with our anti-aircraft guns!"

And here's one from the army

Pat, a private who boasted of absolute fearlessness, was scheduled for night sentry duty He overheard two officers planning to "scare the daylights" out of him One was to dress up like Satan and accost him in his lonely vigil

"Who's there?" challenged Pat

"The Devil," said a rumbling, sepulchral voice.

'Pass Devil,' said Pat, "you know where to go"

SAILOR EVERT BARZ GOES TO UNIVERSITY

The Times received the following interesting letter from Evert Barz·

Naval Training School Elect.,
Purdue University,
Lafayette, Indiana.

Dear Friends:

Here I am at one of the largest universities of the middle west In fact, I never expected to be going to Purdue University and take electrical schooling in one of the best engineering schools in the country

The campus is one of the most beautiful I have ever been on The dormitories where we live are new and we have every convenience that any college student could have The University is situated on the banks of the Wabash river the river that some song was written about

The chow is very good, in fact it is excellent Here is one of the meals we had, and they are all equally as good scalloped potatoes, asparagus, large piece of tender steak, milk and coffee, cherry pie In fact the way they have been feeding us, I think I will really get fat with nothing to do but study

The studies, well they are really tough We are supposed to learn in four months what a student ordinarily would take nine months to master The subjects we have are Mathematics with Algebra Geometry and Trigonometry combined, Electrical Theory, Electrical Problems Electrical, Tool Laboratory, Electrical Wiring Laboratory and Electrical Laboratory Instruction It is a pretty stiff course but I am hoping to make it alright Those who pass the course come out with a rating of a Third Class Petty Officer Electrical

There really isn't so much to write about only that I enjoy it a lot more than boot camp

Rock Island

MODERN AS UNCLE SAM'S LAND BATTLESHIPS

PLANNED PROGRESS HAS MADE ROCK ISLAND ONE OF AMERICA'S GREAT RAILROAD SYSTEMS

Today Rock Island is hauling millions of ton-miles of vital war freight every 24 hours. And we are equipped to carry even more! For Rock Island was prepared for war.

We were ready, because our program of Planned Progress, embracing expenditures of millions of dollars, has made Rock Island one of America's most modern railroads. That these were wise expenditures is clearly shown by our ability to rush unprecedented shipments of men and war materials to their destinations with maximum speed and efficiency.

During the past six years many important improvements have been effected to make Rock Island the great railroad it is today. Among them are . . .

ER SWITCH ENGINES which, due to their ibility and ease of operation, have sim- fied switching problems of vital shipping classification yards.

REAMLINED" TRACK. Mile after mile of es have been eliminated or "eased"; ier rails, ties and ballast have been grades have been reduced.

NEW EQUIPMENT has e abled to rush vital war sh ments to their destinations When materials now on order are received, this efficiency will be further increased

WARTIME TRAVEL—Because of troop movements and increased travel, we urge early ticket purchases and reservations. Cancel promptly if plans change

Kidneys Must Work Well

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Honey Pumpkin Pie Inspires a Harvest Supper
(See Recipes Below)

Harvest Supper Social

One of the nicest things about fall are those harvest supper socials when folks throughout the land gather together with the fruits of their summer labors and heap high the table with steaming chicken fricassee or beefsteak pies, fruits and vegetables, and pies, anything good to eat!

It's partially the food that makes these suppers unforgettable and partially, too, the way it brings old friends together before the long winter pulls in. Whether it's the local grange who sponsors the affair or the ladies' aid, or groups, the affair will be a tremendous success

Remember the chicken fricassee?

Chicken Fricassee.
(Serves 8-10)

2 3-pound chickens
Salt, pepper, ginger
3 quarts boiling water
½ cup each, onion, carrot, celery
1 bay leaf
4 tablespoons chicken fat
4 tablespoons flour
Juice of ½ lemon
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 can mushrooms

Clean chickens, cut into pieces for serving. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and few grains of ginger. Cover with boiling water and cook slowly for one hour. Add vegetables and bay leaf and continue cooking until tender. Drain off liquid and surplus fat. Add flour to melted fat and cook until brown. Gradually add 3 cups chicken broth or 1½ cups chicken broth and 1½ cups rich milk Season and cook until smooth. Add lemon juice and mushrooms. Place chicken in gravy with minced parsley and heat.

Baking Powder Dumplings

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
2 eggs, well beaten
Milk

Sift dry ingredients, and chop in butter. Add eggs with enough milk to form a heavy drop batter. Drop quickly by spoonfuls into chicken broth. Cover closely and cook 10 minutes without removing lid.

Cabbage and Apple Coleslaw.
(Serves 6)

2 cups crisped, dried, shredded cabbage
Salt
1 cup diced apple
½ cup cooked salad dressing

Mix cabbage and apple with salad dressing and salt. Chill thoroughly and serve from a large bowl.

A highly prized and cherished favorite for these fall harvest suppers is Steak and Kidney pie, the meat floating in delicious gravy, topped with a flaky, crisp and golden crust

Steak and Kidney Pie.
(Serves 6)

2 pounds beef steak (cut ¾ inch thick)
2 pork kidneys
2 small onions, minced
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

This Week's Menu

*Chicken Fricassee
*Baking Powder Dumplings
*Cabbage and Apple Coleslaw
Spiced Crabapples
Bread-Butter Pickles
*Sauteed Corn and Green Pepper
*Honey Pumpkin Pies
Coffee Milk
*Recipes Given

1 cup flour
½ cup fat
2 teaspoons worcestershire sauce

Cut steak into 1½-inch pieces. Dredge with flour, salt and pepper. Saute with onion until brown in heavy kettle. Add sufficient water to cover meat well. Add sauce and seasoning. Place on heat to simmer.

Remove every trace of white tubes from kidneys and cut into cubes. Place in kettle, cover with cold water, bring to a boil and drain, and repeat a second time Add kidneys to meat in kettle and simmer together until tender, about two hours Continue to add a little liquid and stir from time to time to keep meat from sticking Remove meat to a casserole, add enough liquid to cover, and set aside to cool. Cover with a crust of plain pastry and bake in a hot (450-degree) oven 12-15 minutes.

There are so many good foods at this autumn banquet that unless your vegetables are pointed up, their consumption may lag. There's no danger of that if you have either of these combinations:

Sauteed Corn With Green Pepper.
(Serves 6)

3 tablespoons butter
3 cups corn, cooked
2 tablespoons green pepper
Salt, pepper
¼ cup cream

Melt butter in a frying pan. Add vegetables and seasonings with cream. Cover and cook slowly until liquid evaporates

Savory Cabbage.
(Serves 6)

1 head cabbage
1 tablespoon chicken fat
1 tablespoon flour
Salt, pepper
Hard-cooked egg

Cook cabbage in boiling salted water until tender but crisp. Drain and chop. Brown flour in melted fat, add stock, cabbage and seasonings. Cook slowly for 10 minutes. Garnish with egg.

Honey Pumpkin Pie.
(Serves 8)

2 eggs
1 cup milk
½ cup cream
1½ cups pumpkin
½ cup honey
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ginger
1 recipe all-bran pastry shells

Prepare pastry shells Beat eggs slightly, add remaining ingredients and mix thoroughly. Pour into individual, unbaked pie shells and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) for 15 minutes Reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees) and continue baking 45 minutes or until knife inserted comes out clean.

Pastry Shells.
(Makes 8)

¼ cup all-bran
1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
4 tablespoons cold water (more or less)

Roll cereal fine Combine with flour and salt. Cut in shortening. Add water, little at a time, until dough is moist enough to hold together. Roll out on a lightly floured board to about one-eighth inch thickness. Place in individual pie tins. Trim edges, leaving one-half inch beyond rim of pan. Fold under and flute Fill with pumpkin filling as directed above.

LYNN SAYS:

Sudsy Facts: Higher industrial activity and consumer income contribute to larger soap consumption, according to a Department of Agriculture report, making last year's soap consumption the largest on record.

Domestic oils and inedible tallow will take the place of imported and tropical oils for this year's soap supply.

Healthfulness dictates cleanliness, and that means not only in clothing and personal hygiene but in clean surroundings in the home, especially in the kitchen where food is prepared. Light or white floors insure cleanliness

You can restore freshness by laundering draperies, walls, rugs and upholstery by using a soap jelly made by dissolving 1 part soap to 5 parts hot water, letting cool, then whipping to a fluff with a beater.

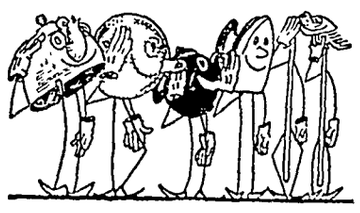
SONG FOR AN OLD METAL DRIVE

I

That good old copper kettle
My mother used so long . . .
It now will fight the Axis
And on it ring the gong;
The frying pan she cooked in
Has now gone forth to war
Where it will do some cooking
It's never done before.



II.

Farewell, my third string teapot!
You're out for victory;
And what you will be boiling
For Hitler won't be tea;
A thing so calm and placid—
So plain and so mundane—
Whoever dreamed you'd ever
Help out some bombing plane!!!

III.

Flatiron so prosaic—
To war you'll now make tracks—
The shirts that you will iron
Will be on Axis backs;
You now join freedom's battle—
I know you've got the stuff;
Henceforth no one will tell you
You are not HOT ENOUGH!

IV.

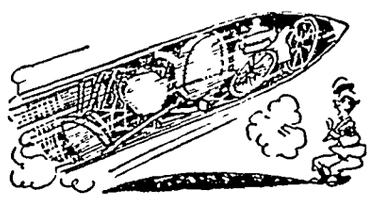
Old iron bed, get ready!
You're just a fine antique
But here's your chance, old timer,
If you some glamour seek;
This job is down your alley—
A rendezvous you'll keep.
In some new form and model
You'll put some Japs to sleep.

V

Come rake, come hoe, come shovel!
The Axis you must mace;
And you will look so pretty
Smack in the Fuehrer's face.
Lawnmower, long you've served me,
But fighting is the style
So go and clip the Jappies
On distant Kiska Isle!

VI

And, iron fence so ancient,
Around the old estate:
At you I blow the bugle—
And you won't hesitate;
You merely kept out chickens—
Now in the war perhaps
You'll keep out Nazi madmen
And keep out wild-eyed Japs.



VII

Come, bumpers from my flivver—
You've found a better job—
To help a valiant doughboy
Or airman or a gob;
You've been a kind protector
In many a little wreck,
But you'll seem even better
Wrapped 'round an Axis neck!

VIII.

Farewell, perambulator!
You've been our joy and pride
But soon you will be taking
Some adults for a ride;
It seems that I can vision
(Oh, how my fancy spins!)
Adolf and Tojo in you—
The World's Most Screwball Twins.

Deep In My Heart It's Taxes

I'm swamped with debt,
And blood and sweat,
Up to my neck in taxes—
The landlord sobs
And my head throbs,
Up to my chin in taxes—
It's lend and lease,
Or "Rest in Peace,"
It's tokens for the Axis
Let freedom ring,
Of thee I sing—
Up to my ears in taxes

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for November 15

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission

THINGS THAT MAR FAMILY LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 27 30-35, Matthew 5 31, 32, Luke 12 13-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ.—Galatians 6 2

Home is what you make it! Oh, yes, there may be circumstances which hinder us from doing what we would like—such as poverty, illness, unemployment, etc. These are things we cannot control and certainly they do have a bearing. But man or woman when of the right spirit can triumph over such matters and make even the poorest home the gateway to heaven. It is a matter of the attitude of heart and mind. Our lesson then is very practical, for it deals with those sins which mar family life.

Whatever our circumstances may be, we can and must turn away from sin—and in this case, the sins which hinder the home from being what it ought to be God has provided victory over sin through Christ for all who believe in Him

What then are the sins which stand as the enemies of the home?

I. Deceit (Gen. 27 30-35)

Whatever the circumstances of the home may be, there can be absolute honesty and candor in the dealings between members of the family.

Our recent study of the story of Jacob and Esau showed us the sad consequences of the deceit practiced by Jacob and his mother in defrauding Esau Many elements entered in, the favoritism of the mother toward one son, the envy that the brother had of his elder brother's birthright, the wicked scheming of mother and son to outwit the aged father—all a very distressing picture of a home shot through with deceitfulness To build anything of permanent value on such a foundation was quite impossible

The family in which deceitful means are used by husband or wife to gain some advantage for self or a favored child is heading for the rocks and needs to turn about and get into the channel of truth and uprightness before it is too late

II. Divorce (Matt 5 31, 32).

One of the most destructive elements of modern life is that of divorce Terrifying statistics could be quoted, but they are not nearly as moving as the knowledge most of us have of broken homes, delinquent children, decadent morals, etc., ad nauseam The victims of this deadly evil are primarily the children who are sent on into life with disordered minds and hearts.

Jesus declared that the decree of divorcement allowed by Moses was not an abrogation of God's original law in this matter Because of the "hardness of their hearts" (Mark 10:4) Moses permitted it, but the standard of God was and (note this please!) is unchanged.

Marriage, as we saw in our lesson of November 1, is God's plan for the perfect union of the man and woman whereby the two become one in the sight of God. That means that the tie is not one to be dissolved at will or on some purely legal ground; it is an inseparable union.

The only exception recognized by Scripture (v 32) is that act of unfaithfulness which is such a breach of the holy union as to virtually destroy it. Perhaps it might be called a recognition of the breaking of the union rather than an exception. Adultery is a heinous sin, an extremely serious violation of God's law. Let us press that fact home today when it is so lightly regarded in our sinful generation.

III. Desire (Luke 12:13-15).

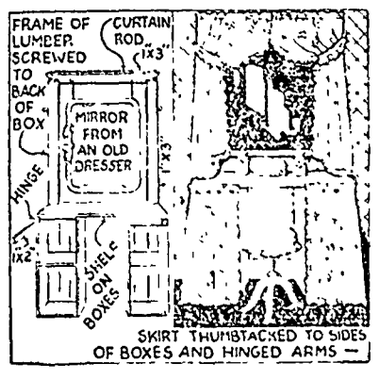
Money is necessary and may be a blessing, but the "love of money is the root of all evil" (I Tim. 6 10). That is not just a verse in the Bible. It is the true picture of the thing which has destroyed the happiness of millions.

Here was a quarrel over an inheritance, and in meeting it our Lord laid down a principle which would solve all the money quarrels in every home—and they are endless in number and great in bitter destructiveness.

"Man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (v 15) Write it large over the minds and hearts of the boys and girls in our homes! Let it control in the attitude of father and mother toward money. It will solve not only the money problems of the home, but will send the children forth into life with a foundation philosophy that will bless them to the end of their days

Notice verse 14. It is the desire for money that most often makes man desire to be a judge over his brother The big eyes of envy cause him to look with bitter desire upon what his brother has and he wants. The fine principle of sharing the family's possessions would do much to knit the home into a unit—happy, strong and useful to both God and man. The point is to say "ours" rather than "mine," and to ask, "What can we do?" not, "What can I get?"

ON THE HOME FRONT with RUTH WYETH SPEARS



THE illustration shows what became of a mirror and piano stool. To the mirror and stool were added two wooden boxes from the grocery. These were placed on end about 18 inches apart and a shelf of half-inch plywood was screwed to the top A frame was then screwed to the back of the boxes as shown. A curtain rod was placed across the top and the mirror hung lengthwise under it. An arm was then hinged to the front of each box. Paint was next White, because white furniture is smart and because it matched the woodwork.

The dressing table skirt was made with a one-inch heading at the top and tacked along the ends of the table and the hinged arms with thumbtacks through a double strip of the plain material.

Post Office Department Urges Early Mailing Of Packages

INDICATIONS ARE THAT XMAS MAIL WILL SET NEW RECORD

The Post Office department is now starting the most gigantic task in its history, the movement of a deluge of Christmas parcels, cards and letters while maintaining the regular flow of millions of pieces of mail daily to and from our armed forces all over the world

Indications are that the volume of Christmas mail will be the largest on record. Already in September, latest month for which figures are available, retail sales had reached a level second only to the record month of December 1941, according to the Department of Commerce And sales are rising Such heavy purchases always presage heavy mailings.

Address Properly

If thousands of our soldiers, sailors, marines and civilian friends are not to be disapointed at Christmastime, the public must cooperate by mailing earlier than ever before and by addressing letters and parcels properly. The best efforts of the Post Office Department alone cannot be enough, in view of wartime difficulties faced by the opstal system. The public must assist.

About 25,000 experienced postal workers already have been taken by the war services Arrangements are under way to add thousands of temporary personnel to the postal staffs, but this man-power is hard to find and is inexperienced Facilities of railroads and air lines are heavily taxed by movements of huge quantities of war materials and personnel Extra trucks are almost impossible to obtain Winter weather, hampering transportation, is beginning

Free Mailing Causes Increase

The free mailing privilege granted to members of the armed forces has raised their mailings some 30 per cent, it is estimated. Expansion of the forces also is adding rapidly to the postal burden

The deadline already is past for mailing gifts to army and navy personnel overseas with assurance that the parcels will arrive by Christmas. The New York post office reports that in late October, 70,000 such parcels were handled daily in that office alone

The Post Office department is making strenuous efforts to avoid such a terrific jam as it faced in 1918 under similar conditions, during the First World War It can succeed in those efforts, and avoid many heartaches for its patrons, if the public will cooperate by mailing early.

Record War Bond Sales Is Goal Of Women At War Week Nov. 22

WASHINGTON D C—America's women in the cities and on the farms—in war factories and offices are determined to make Women At War Week the greatest War Bond sales effort since Pearl Harbor

Mrs Henry Morgenthau, Jr., has issued the keynote for the Treasury Department's Women At War Week, Nov 22 to 28 in an appeal to women to save on "little things" to help defeat the enemy for World Peace

"We women want to work hard we want to take a part of this struggle and be proud because we are we will share the sacrifice the men will endure and share in our return and claim our share of the future responsibility for [illegible] a peaceful world" the First Lady declared

The overall direction of Women At War Week rests with the Women's Section of the War Savings Staff under the leadership of Miss Harriet Elliott Assistant Executive Director and Mrs Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Chief of the Special Activities Unit

From coast to coast women in every community have made plans for torchlight parades, fashion shows, teas, rallies store window displays, Stamp and Bond booths pageants, civic sings, balls and mardi gras In each locality administration of the one week drive rests with the local War Savings Committee which has worked out activities adapted to their areas

During Women At War Week volunteer War Bond saleswomen will wear an armband similar to the one being attached to the sleeve of Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., by Miss Harriet Elliott.

Mrs Morgenthau, in a special message for Women At War Week, declared that the spirit of America's pioneer women lives today more strongly than ever

"The average American woman began to rise to new heights on Sunday, Dec 7, 1941," Mrs Morgenthau said "This winter the average American woman will be spending less in order to save more to invest in War Bonds and Stamps. She will not, please God, ever have to fire a gun or fly a bomber. But she will, please God, always do everything she can to help buy anything—and the best of everything—that fires or flies or floats in this terrible war."

Blaze Of Unknown Origin Causes Heavy Loss At Cook Farm

NEARLY NEW BARN BURNED TO GROUND FRIDAY

All Hay And Oats And Equipment Lost In Place Friday P. M

The Klemme fire department was called to the Virgil Cook farm located by Louis Stahl last Friday afternoon where a large new barn, built two years ago, was ablaze

The fire, of unknown origin had gained considerable headway before being discovered that the firemen directed their efforts to saving other buildings endangered by the blaze

The barn, which was a modern block and frame construction, was a complete loss as well as the hay oats, milking equipment, two head of calves and all barn equipment

A large silo at one end of the barn was badly damaged by the heat and will have to be torn down

The loss was covered by insurance

The firemen were able to control the blaze and keep it from spreading to another large barn close by and to other buildings on the farm

The firemen answered the call at about 4 00 p m. and made another run to the farm early in the evening when the wind changed and it appeared that embers might blaze up and be carried to other buildings

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to take this means of thanking our neighbors and friends and the Klemme Fire Department for their kind help in helping us to fight the fire which destroyed our large new barn

Nine States To Be Blacked Out For Twenty Minute Period

Joseph D Scholtz, seventh regional director of Civilian Defense at Omaha, Nebr has ordered all farms, towns and cities in Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Minnesota, South and North Dakota, Kansas, Wyoming and Colorado to blackout beginning at 10 00 p m and to last for 20 minutes on Monday night, December 14th

Lights will go off simultaneously in all of the nine states

Explaining the blackout was ordered with the approval of governors in the nine states, Scholtz said that lights in rural areas as well as in cities and towns must be obliterated

Railroads, intercity bus and freight lines, industries engaged in war production and public safety institutions, hospitals, etc, will be required to turn off only those lights not necessary for operation

The blackout will affect a total population of nearly 15 million, including Iowa's 2,540,00 The largest area previously blacked out was territory along the Pacific coast in the ninth defense region

Approximately 20,000 civilian defense workers in Iowa will swing into action to assure a successful blackout

Complete details will be published as the time nears, so that all civilians will know exactly what they will be required to do

SILVANUS WACKER TO SERVE FOUR YEAR SENTENCE IN PENITENTIARY

Was Also Fined $500 In Federal Court On Draft Evasion Charge

Silvanus Wacker, 36, Ell township farmer was convicted of a selective service violation by a jury at Fort Dodge which deliberated less than a half hour, and was sentenced to serve four years in a penitentiary and fined $500 by United States District Judge John Delehant of Lincoln, Nebraska, Wednesday

Charges against Wacker, who chose to go on trial without the services of counsel, were based on his failure to report for army induction July 6th as ordered by the Hancock County Draft Board

Wacker pleaded religious objections to military service and claimed his duties on the 600-acre farm his father owns unencumbered, as his reasons for failing to report for induction

United States Attorney Tobias Diamond charged in a jury address that Wacker's religious scruples against war did not develop until after he was drafted, and added careful consideration had convinced the board and its appeal agent that he was not essential to the operation of the farm.

GAME STORAGE PERMITS FREE

Hunter Making Application For Extension of Time To Hold Game In Cold Storage Lockers

In 1941 a large number of prosecutions were made for illegal storage of wild game At many of the hearings the plea was made, "I didn't know that there was a time limit on possession of game that was legally taken" The game possession time limit law is one of the early game laws and has been in force in every state for a long time In recent years the establishment of cold storage lockers in almost every community has made the enforcement of this law rather difficult. In cooperation with the Cold Storage Locker Association, the Conservation Commission is making every effort to assist the hunters in legal storage of their game At the same time every effort is being made to prevent illegal game storage. The purpose of the law is obvious ,and by cooperating with the Conservation Commission and the locker operators, sportsmen are helping curtail the activities of the game hogs and the illegal meat hunters

To store game beyond 10 days after the close of the season, simply ask the locker operator for an application to hold game during closed season, fill out the blank, and mail it to the State Conservation Commission, 10th and Mulberry, Des Moines. Under permit migratory waterfowl may be held until January 22, 1943 All other legally taken game may be kept in cold storage under permit until June 30, 1943. There is no charge made for granting this privilege.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Heavy Artillery, Planes Dominate Action As British Strike at Rommel Positions; See 10½ Billion Farm Income for 1943; Baruch Urged to Make Manpower Study

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

The above radiophoto from Cairo, Egypt, shows one result of the initial Allied thrust against the Axis in the western desert. A member of Marshal Rommel's Afrika Korps lies dead in the dust following the capture of a forward strong point in the Nazi lines.

SOUTH PACIFIC
Costly Exchange

When Navy Secretary Frank Knox told his press conference that Jap fleet units had retired from the scene of action around Guadalcanal and that the "first round of the battle" was over naval experts began trying to figure out who got the decision in the encounter. U. S. citizens heard the bad news first: the navy had lost the destroyer Porter and an aircraft carrier. (This was in addition to the loss of the carrier Wasp, announced earlier.) This brought to a total of four plane carriers that have been destroyed by the Japs in this war.

Then came news of a bit brighter note: Before the Japs left the area to "lick their wounds" and return for more action, U. S. forces had damaged two aircraft carriers, two battleships and three cruisers. More than 100 enemy airplanes were destroyed and about 50 others probably destroyed in what the navy described as the greatest battle yet fought in the Solomons area.

But the most important result of this heavy sea and air fighting was that it brought at least temporary relief to the hard-pressed marine and army units holding their positions on Guadalcanal itself. The Jap objective in launching the big battle had been to dislodge these outnumbered units who in mid-August had pushed the Japs out.

Meanwhile, dispatches from U. S. headquarters in Australia revealed that land-based army planes had been slashing constantly at Jap positions in the areas of the Buin-Faisi harbor in the northern Solomons and at Rabaul, New Britain island. Forty Jap ships were reported hit in a ten-day period. All of this meant much-needed diversion of Jap strength which was directed at capture of the Solomons, and then pushing forward to cut supply lines from the U. S. to Australia.

DESERT WARFARE:
Allied Air Umbrella

Slam-bang warfare continued on the Alamein line between the Mediterranean sea and the Qattara depression in Egypt as Britain's eighth army struck sledgehammer blows at German and Italian positions.

Although Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces struck back savagely, the British infantry held on to early gains. Protected by hundreds of guns and a supreme Allied air umbrella, the infantry jolted enemy troops loose from another section of the Alamein line

The great tank battles of previous campaigns in the desert were missing in the initial onslaught of the new British drive. Heavy artillery and planes played the dominant role. American fliers strengthened the drive, sweeping over enemy areas, shooting up troop concentrations, tanks and airfields.

Cairo reports to British newspapers said that Allied forces had "trapped several thousand Axis troops" in a narrow pocket west of El Alamein near the Mediterranean coast.

While it was the avowed intention of the British command to destroy Rommel and his army, some sources saw another effect· Germany might be forced to withdraw German planes and men from Russia to meet the even more critical threat on the desert.

FARM INCOME:
Increase to Continue

Estimating the net farm income for 1942 at $9,800,000,000, including government payments, the department of agriculture forecast that next year's net income will total approximately $10,500,000,000.

The 1942 figure is about $1,000,000,000 above the previous record of 1919, the department said. Total agricultural production this year is nearly 12 per cent greater than the record set in 1941, and 40 per cent greater than in 1918.

The department stated "October estimates indicated, for the first time, that the corn crop this year may exceed the record set in 1920; and it is being grown on 12 per cent less acreage. Abundant feed supplies and good prices are expected to stimulate increased livestock production again next year. However, unless the weather is again exceptionally favorable it is unlikely that crop production will equal the volume of 1942, when per acre yields appear to be averaging 13 per cent above previous records."

The department reported that military and lend-lease food purchases next year are expected to be 50 per cent greater than in 1942 and will take one-fifth of current farm production. Civilian demands will continue to advance slowly and prices for farm products in 1943 under ceiling limitations will be about 6 per cent above the average estimated for all of 1942.

LABOR SUPPLY:
Untapped Source

Even as he disclosed tentative plans for the nation-wide registration of women for work in war industries, President Roosevelt stated that the administration has reached no decision on means of solving the critical man-power problem. He warned against premature conclusions that plans for nation service or "labor draft" legislation have been abandoned.

The President pointed out that legislation will be necessary before the registration of women could be ordered. He emphasized that plans call only for the registration of women (between 18 and 65), and that there are no plans for a labor draft of women.

He stated that his recent meeting with the AFL-CIO labor war cabinet followed this general line:

With approximately 6,000,000 men now in uniform, there are not very many remaining to fill future needs of war industries, which are expected to require from four to five million additional workers. Although the labor supply problem looks satisfactory for the immediate present, wisdom dictates that it be studied from the long-range viewpoint. The registration of women is concerned with these future war needs, it was pointed out

Baruch Study?

Meanwhile, the board of directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce proposed that the Baruch committee, which studied the rubber problem, now turn to a study of the man-power shortage. The board's statement said that "of the many serious problems now confronting this nation and its people, the problem of the proper use of man-power is undoubtedly paramount."

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

PUNCTURE: The Office of Price Administration has reiterated its approval of a proposal that retail grocers punch holes in the tops of vacuum packed coffee cans to discourage hoarding

DEPORTED: Twenty-six Germans and five Italians, alleged to have engaged in Nazi and Fascist activities, have been deported from Nicaragua to the United States.

FIRST: First man to drive a jeep over the new Alaska highway was Lieut. Robert H Gill of the U. S. army air forces. The 1,450-mile trip from Edmonton, Alberta, to White Horse, Yukon territory, took five days.

BOMBLESS: Much-bombed Malta recently had its first day free of daylight air alerts for several months.

RUSSIAN FRONT:
Initiative Reversed

While the Germans continued to grind forward across the Nalchik plains in the Caucasus sector the Russians had taken up the initiative in key regions further north. Stalingrad communiques were often similar in their content. This was typical of Russian announcements: "Soviet troops repulsed enemy attacks. In certain sectors our troops counterattacked and forged ahead somewhat."

Neutral military observers saw in the news from Russia that the Nazis had shifted the main weight of their drive to the Caucasus mountains. There the fury of the attack was unabated. Definitely the Russians were fighting defensive actions all along this front. Always the Soviet claimed the infliction of heavy losses of Nazi men and machines as they retreated before the furious, continuous onslaught.

IDLE DOLLARS:
Are Slackers

Attributing the rise of money in circulation to the demands of war financing and huge wartime payrolls, Federal Reserve officials in Washington at the same time declared in effect that "idle dollars are slacker dollars." Yet there are "comparatively few" dollars being hoarded among the more than $14,000,000,000 now in circulation.

Treasury department and Federal Reserve experts have been carefully watching for signs of hoarding but there is no indication that it is widespread among U S citizens throughout the country.

A chart showing both money in circulation and wages paid shows that the upturn in the total money in circulation exactly parallels the rise in wages. While the 14 billion dollars is the largest amount ever in circulation in U. S. history government officials explained that any upturn in business as widespread as the present war spending always increases the demand for currency because it places cash in the pockets of those people without bank connections.

FOOD PROBLEM:
Gets Attention

Although little official news came from Washington, it was reported that President Roosevelt is studying an urgent proposal for the appointment of an over-all administrator to stabilize the nation's confused food situation.

The recommendation, made by Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, with the approval of Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, named no specific candidate for the job How-

POSTWAR CHINA:
To Need Billions

China must have from five to ten billion dollars in foreign credits for postwar reconstruction, Foreign Minister T. V. Soong has reported to the People's Political council in Chungking.

The foreign minister, according to authentic reports, made the following points:

The outcome of India's demands for independence from British rule is of deep concern to China. "The future of India is closely connected with the future of China," Soong said.

Germany will be defeated by England and the United States with gigantic land forces in Europe. Japan will be defeated with overwhelming naval forces in the Pacific.

Following the war, Japan will be forced to evacuate Manchuria, Korea and the Liukiu Islands. The latter areas will become sovereign states.

CARGO PLANES:
New Contract

Andrew J. Higgins and New Orleans building facilities were back in the news again. Last July when the government cancelled his contract to build 200 freighters there was plenty of official and unofficial steam blasted in Washington. Now Higgins has disclosed that he has obtained a contract to construct 1,200 army cargo planes in the same shipyards where he was to have built the freighters last summer

RUBBER MIRAGE

Unfortunate, inside fact regarding our grandiose plans to get rubber from the Amazon valley is that we aren't going to get any more than a driblet this year. About 4,000 tons have been produced, against an expectation of around 50,000 tons.

Part of this failure is due to the jealous tug-of-war between Jesse Jones and the Board of Economic Warfare. Jones' Rubber Reserve at first delayed doing anything about Brazilian rubber. Later the BEW stepped in.

This situation, bad as it may be, is insignificant compared with the handicaps of nature. For in the jungles of the Amazon, nature has erected the most difficult barriers conceivable to protect her rubber.

Here is the tragic, inside story of what has happened.

First, the BEW, working in cooperation with Jesse Jones' Rubber Reserve, offered a higher wage to rubber workers, with the result that they flocked to the jungle. But this took men away from the lesser paid work of farming and wood-cutting, so that river steamers lacked wood fuel, and the jungle settlements lacked food.

Starve in Jungles.

The result was that a great many men actually died of starvation in the jungles. A few had been given shot-guns, but ammunition was so scanty that they were scarcely able to shoot monkeys.

Later the people in the towns from which the rubber workers were recruited heard that their friends and relatives starved to death. Now these towns won't send any more workers.

One factor contributing to the tragic situation was that a ship bringing food, firearms and more equipment to the Amazon was sunk by a Nazi submarine.

Also it takes a tremendous number of tin cups to collect rubber. A cup is tied to each tree, and catches the rubber as it slowly oozes from the trunk

However, the chief shipment of tin cups got held up on the dock in southern Brazil, missed the boat, then were further delayed by submarine warfare, and now have missed the current rubber season.

A lot of these handicaps, such as submarine warfare, are insurmountable. But the net result is that although we are spending many millions, we will get almost no rubber from Brazil this year.

HITLER'S NEW ORDER

Here is an authentic account from Dutch government sources, of what happened to Hollanders who were caught in the act of printing an anti-Nazi publication in the Netherlands.

One victim was forced to place his feet in a tub of water, which was brought slowly to the boiling point. Another patriot, who had been arrested in mid-winter, was compelled to undress and was placed upon a chair in the open courtyard of the prison, surrounded by warmly dressed Gestapo men, who questioned him as long as he could stand it.

Whenever he fainted, they poured hot drinks down his throat and rubbed his numb body until the interrogation could be continued.

Still another Hollander had his fingernails torn out; and a very common method of torture was the use of dazzling light directed upon the eyes of the suspect.

When the Nazis first took over they gave orders to their troops to deal gently with local populations. But with continued local resistance, the gloves are off. Men and women all over Europe are learning the true meaning of the "new order" now promised by Germany.

SENATOR DOXEY'S RAILROAD

The subway train between the Capitol and the Senate office building is a great help to senators shuttling back and forth to their offices, but Senator Wall Doxey of Mississippi would be the first to admit that it can prove a political liability.

Doxey seldom uses the little tramway, preferring to walk. Nonetheless, Mississippi farmers call it "Doxey's Railroad," and according to friends, it had something to do with the Mississippian's primary defeat. Here's the story:

James Eastland, who defeated Doxey, made a practice of inquiring, during speeches in farm communities, if there was a railroad nearby.

"Nope," someone would reply. "Nearest one's ten miles."

"What a shame," sighed Eastland. "You know, Senator Doxey has a private railroad in Washington which he uses to ride back and forth to his office."

THE TRIAL OF ADOLF HITLER

Bailiff—Mr. Schickelgruber to the bar!

Hitler—You can't do this to me!

A Voice—Wanna bet?

Q.—What is your occupation?

A.—I was a paper hanger until I gave it up.

Q.—Why did you give it up?

A.—My wall paper selections drove the customers crazy.

Q.—Why didn't you let them make their own selections?

A.—I wanted to be boss of everything, even then.

* * *

Q.—You also did some oil painting, did you not?

A.—Yes, but that's not among the crimes I'm being tried for, I hope.

Q. — It should be. You also were an architect?

A —Yes, sir.

Q —Did you have any clients?

A.—Not after they saw my blueprints.

Q.—When did you decide to give up honest ways of making a living and found a new order?

A.—One day when I looked into a full-length mirror.

Q.—What happened to influence you?

A.—I saw a reflection of Napoleon.

Q.—Only one?

A.—Sometimes I wonder.

Q.—To what do you attribute your rapid rise to complete domination of the German people? Was it something you ate?

A.—No. It was something THEY ate.

Q.—Where were you on the night of August 31, 1939?

A.—Ach, if I could only forget it!

Q.—Why did you invade Poland?

A.— It was not an invasion; it was counterattack with pursuit.

Q. — Do you still think anybody here will believe that one?

A.—No, but it's my only chance.

Q.—You also attacked Belgium, Holland, Norway and other small nations in violation of treaties. You are charged with the bombing of defenseless towns, wanton destruction of shrines, schools and great historic sites, machine-gunning refugees, the murder of hospital inmates and general barbarism. What is your plea?

A.—I deny everything.

Q.—On what basis?

A.—On the grounds a cooked goose can't depend on its memory.

Q.—You signed a pact of friendship with Russia and then stabbed her in the back without warning. What about that?

A.—When I sign a pact of friendship it should be warning enough!

Q. — Won't you please cease being arrogant, insolent, boastful and altogether offensive?

A.—I'm not being arrogant, insolent, etc.; it's just my radio manner.

Judge—That reminds me; I think the prisoner's radio speeches should be added to his crimes.

Q.—Do you remember that speech where you said you would never take off your uniform until you had licked the world? Whatever became of that uniform?

A.—After four years without being removed it became so infested with cooties that I became the world's outstanding subject for delousing by unanimous consent.

* * *

Judge—I think we have heard enough. The jury will retire for ten seconds and reach a verdict.

Hitler—No jury ever reached a verdict in ten seconds.

Judge—This one will.

Women Purchasers Can Aid U. S. Farmers

Fitting Family's Diet With Farm Production Helps U. S. War Effort

America's 6,000,000 farmers today aren't feeding a mere 132,000,000 citizens of the United States. They are also responsible for filling huge gaps in the food supplies of most of the free world—the uniformed and civilian.

This is a large order.

They will need all the help they can get from the consumer at home if they are to continue to fill steadily growing lend-lease orders from the United Nations.

The consumer is a woman.

If you're a man, you'll probably say, "Hey! What about me?"

Well, Mister, you're practically nobody when it comes to deciding what you'll eat and what you'll wear.

Women buy 80 per cent of the food sold and 75 per cent of the clothing. Further than that, they influence almost all customer purchasing.

This is where the housewife can offer one of the greatest contributions to winning the war. She can see to it that the diet of her family fits in with farm production and the shortages created by the war. She should be informed on the problems involved in producing the goods she wants and getting them into her hands.

As the buyers for some 34 million households from coast to coast, women have a tremendous responsibility to the families they feed and clothe.

During 1942 the farmer has marked the highest production level in history. At the same time, annual income payments nationally have increased some 20 billions of dollars.

CONSUMER'S CREED

I will buy what is plentiful.
I will buy what is fresh.
I will buy what is produced locally.
I will buy what the government asks me to buy through the Victory Food Program.
I will not hoard or waste food.

But crop goals met and passed, and an income increase of over 17 per cent, don't mean that the housewife can go out and buy whatever she wants and as much as she wants.

Since Pearl Harbor, the consumer picture has undergone radical changes "Scarcity," "ceiling price" and "rationing" have become common words.

Food is no longer readily available if the housewife has the price to pay. Some of her old-time staples are on the "scarce" list, items such as tea, bananas, coffee and sugar.

Off-the-farm consumers, the urban group, comprise over 75 per cent of the population of the United States.

Foodstuffs and clothing combined account for about 40 per cent of every dollar spent by the average urban family.

It is therefore obvious that at no previous time has women's good management in buying been more important

Give Consumer Protection.

Urging consumers—and remember that means women—to take heed of the farmer's problems, brings out the little-known fact that the U. S. department of agriculture in return does not forget consumer protection in its farming for freedom program.

When the housewife buys fresh vegetables from day to day, she is not likely to think much about the fact that the vegetables arrived on season schedule, that they were in sufficient quantity and that the price was "right." It's only when those conditions didn't exist that she might begin to wonder how her table is served.

Then she would learn that by taking the "long view" for both farmer and consumer safety, the over-all agricultural program results in uniform distribution of farm commodities, an even flow of goods into homes, prevention of market scarcities and glutted markets, and provision of benefits in price and quality.

Fresh vegetables head the market list of this housewife. Her family is well-nourished because America's farmers are doing their part for wartime health and efficiency.

The Victory Specials, announced from week to week, are a part of this plan. They use up products which are plentiful, often preventing waste and loss to the farmer, and allowing the buyer to take advantage of diet variations at a better price.

Whether or not the consumer's needs are met really depends upon the accuracy with which production has been scheduled to obtain an adequate and steady supply of food at prices fair alike to producers and consumers This is the consumer's best insurance against the problems of scarcity

Something known as "acreage allotment" is now being used to increase production of certain crops needed for the war, a part of the change-over from normal peace-time farming to all-out war production The farmer is converting his fields to war production just as surely as the manufacturer turns his machines from automobiles to airplanes.

Production without adjustment would be inexcusable waste at any time In wartime it is criminal.

What Crop Reserves Do.

Probably Mrs Average Housewife wouldn't be able to tell you what an Ever-Normal granary is—but she's enjoying the advantages of living under a farming system that provides for crop reserves. In recent years, lots of wheat, corn and other products have been stored against a time when crops might be smaller or demands greater. When drouth once pushed corn production as much as 40 per cent below normal, meat prices skyrocketed and consumers suffered hardships. But now with the Ever-Normal granary's stored reserves of more than 25 per cent of a normal year's crop, there is plenty of feed to convert into meat, eggs, and dairy products.

"Crop insurance" has a formidable sound, but it is a simple procedure that pays big dividends to the consumer as well as to the producer who meets the premiums. Such insurance keeps farmers in business producing needed goods by guaranteeing them, for example, some wheat or cotton income every year even if a crop fails. This protection gives farmers the assurance they need to go in for production of critical war crops.

That's consumer protection for everybody, even if it doesn't occur to the woman who buys a loaf of bread.

Housewives are currently faced with the necessity of cutting down on sugar, once so much a part of their regular purchases that they just took it for granted. Curtailment of shipping, due to the war, cut off important sources of raw materials, of which sugar is one. At the same time, industrial uses of sugar have increased

Today's price ceiling on sugar, however, is lower than might have been expected. For this the buyer can thank a sugar program which provides payments to growers that are helping them step up production

Conservation on the farm may seem a far cry from top quality lettuce or potatoes or green beans It may seem even farther from tender meats or milk rich in butter fat. And farther still from lower prices.

But farmers know, and consumers should be aware, that soil-building and soil-conserving practices mean larger yields and better quality Well-nourished land produces better crops than depleted soil

Wholesomeness Guaranteed.

Regulatory laws administered by the United States department of agriculture directly affect homes and consumer income and buying power Consumers are protected against mis-branding, substitutions and swindling by the Pure Food and Drug act It provides a safeguard for wholesome foodstuffs, thereby protecting both health and pocketbook

Research activities of the department are equally related to consumer interests Sixty-five research "laboratories" have experiments constantly in process

They don't just develop cloth from milk and plastics from soybeans. They also determine methods of increasing production and strengthening the quality of farm products

Foods are carefully analyzed by experts so that their vitamin and mineral content can be accurately given. Nutrition studies set up minimum food requirements, show how they may be met at the least cost and what available foods may be substituted for those on the scarce list or headed that way

Steering Food Purchases.

These nutrition studies are of particular interest to the housewife She is faced with the problem of providing her family with enough to eat to maintain health and efficiency.

This young homemaker is choosing her dinner vegetables from the wide variety sent to market every day by the nation's farmers. Her family will get plenty of vitamins.

She must steer her food buying so that supplies may be used to the best advantage and at the same time provide the highest consumer satisfaction.

The individual buyer these days must think always of her purchases as they relate to those of the 34 million other American housewives —what the result would be if that buying were multiplied by 34 million. Would it create new scarcity or make a scarce food non-existent? Or would it have the effect of utilizing the foods that are available in abundance?

Alarm over possible increased food costs has been evidenced by some homemakers. The retail cost of a basket of foods, representing annual family purchases, amounted to $405 in September, 1942, an increase of $73 over the price of the same foods in the period from 1935-39, but the cost was still $10 lower than in 1929.

Workingmen's families today can buy a basket of specified food products for the smallest share of family income on record since 1913. In September, 1942, it required only 22 per cent of the family income. During the preceding five years the same food basket accounted for 27 per cent of the income. Average family income has been rising more rapidly than food prices during the last three years and through the first 10 months of 1942. Reasons include higher wage rates, more hours of work per week with over-time payments, and more persons employed.

The family averaging five persons this fall reached a wage level 57 per cent higher than the pre-war average for 1935-39.

This seems to indicate that the housewife's food problems will not be those of capacity to buy but rather of the market's ability to supply her needs.

Reaching her goal—just as the farmer meets his production goal—will mean that scarcity of some particular type of food will be a matter of unconcern to any American, so long as he is able to eat what he needs.

Marketing his produce is the final step in the farmer's program of supplying the American table.

Paint Your House Gutters, Downspouts

Gutters and downspouts, if damaged or ruined by rust or corrosion in this wartime period of metal scarcity, are likely to result in high discomfort to the owner, to say nothing of the further damage that may be caused by inability to carry the water from rains away from the house. Many a home owner who has failed to give attention to these important parts of his house has been dismayed to find them full of holes and leaks, and sometimes actually collapsing. Such neglect is a sad waste at any time, but in wartime, with such items becoming practically irreplaceable for the duration, it becomes a near tragedy. The best insurance against such loss is thorough removal of all surface rust and corrosion, followed by prompt protection of the metal by painting or varnishing. All gutters and downspouts should be painted.

Serve the Festive Bird—Plump With Stuffing
(See Recipes Below)

Day of Praise

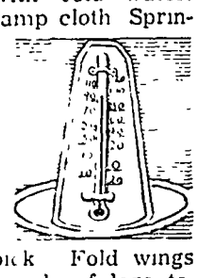
Now that the frost-nipped days have come and we've gathered the harvest, Thanksgiving time is here again. It really is a Thanksgiving, for a year of plenty if not of peace, and it's to be celebrated with a dinner symbolic of the plenty of harvest

Your family will feel a deep and heartfelt satisfaction if you place yellow-gold and deep crimson autumn leaves over the mantel, or provide a blazing fire and have bowls of lush colored grapes, crisp shelled nuts, blushing pears and apples within reach

The Bird Itself.

Select tender chicken for roasting Pick dry Singe and take out pin feathers with tweezers. Cut around vent and make split almost to tip of breastbone. Insert hand and take out entrails carefully from back and sides Pull out. Be sure lungs are removed. Push back skin of neck, and cut off neck close to body. Remove windpipe. Separate gizzard, heart and liver and cut away gall bladder which is attached to liver, being careful not to break it. Cut through gizzard and clean. Remove oil sack from tail.

Wash outside with cold water. Wipe inside with damp cloth Sprinkle inside with salt and then stuff loosely Insert toothpicks or metal pins across opening and lace them with cord Fold skin of neck over back and fasten with toothpick Fold wings across back Tie ends of legs together with a cord, then bring cord around tail and forward to tip of wings to tie Rub skin with fat (unsalted) and place on roaster rack. Roast uncovered in a moderately slow oven (325-350 degrees) 30 minutes to the pound for a chicken under 3½ pounds, 22-25 minutes for a chicken over 4 pounds.



Stuffing.
(Makes 3½ cups)

⅓ cup rice
3 cups boiling water
1½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup fat
½ cup diced celery
¼ cup chopped onion
3½ cups oven-popped rice cereal
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 tablespoon poultry seasoning
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup stock

Wash rice thoroughly in a sieve. Drain well Add rice to boiling water slowly as water continues to bubble Boil rapidly about 20 minutes until rice is tender, then drain.

Brown celery and onion in fat. Stir in rice and mix well. Crush oven-popped rice cereal into coarse crumbs, add parsley, seasonings and stock Combine with rice and mix thoroughly

Lynn Says:

Speaking of Stuffings: The old-fashioned bread dressing is easily adapted to many variations. Here is the basic idea. To 1½ pounds of dried bread cut in one-inch cubes add ½ to 1 cup melted butter, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon white pepper, ¼ cup minced onion, cooked but not browned, and 2 tablespoons of poultry dressing Toss lightly and stuff fowl

If you like crisp celery tasty dressing, add 2 cups finely chopped celery to the bread dressing.

On the other hand, if you like the crispness of chestnuts, add 1 pound of chestnuts, chopped and cooked

Giblets go well with bread dressing, cook and chop and toss into bread dressing. Mushrooms are distinctive, if simply chopped and sauteed in butter and added to bread stuffing

Oysters make a tempting dressing Use 1 pint, chopped and heated until edges curl in 3 tablespoons butter.

Yams With Oranges.
(Serves 6)

2 to 3 pounds yams
2 oranges, peeled
½ cup brown sugar
1½ cups pineapple juice

Peel raw potatoes and slice into buttered casserole. Lay sliced oranges between yam slices, sprinkle brown sugar over all, then add pineapple juice. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 1 hour or until tender.

Brussels Sprouts.

Cut off wilted leaves, leave whole, and wash thoroughly. Cook covered in a small amount of boiling, unsalted water for 10 to 15 minutes. Flavor with melted butter, salt, pepper and mix in ¼ cup chopped chestnuts.

A hot muffin with the tang of fall —these spicy apple muffins are guaranteed to whet the most listless —if there be such on Thanksgiving day—appetite:

Apple Muffins
(Makes 20)

2¼ cups sifted flour
3½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
4 tablespoons shortening
½ cup sugar
1 egg, beaten
1 cup evaporated milk (undiluted)
1 cup finely chopped, raw apples

Sift dry ingredients. Cream shortening and sugar, stir in egg and add flour alternately with milk. Fold in apples and fill greased muffin tins almost full. Sprinkle tops of muffins with additional sugar (about 2 tablespoons in all) mixed with a dash of cinnamon and nutmeg. Bake in a moderately hot (425 degree) oven 20 to 25 minutes.

Busy homemakers like to use prepared, packaged or canned mincemeat for pies, but there are still many of you, who I am sure will like putting up some right in your own kitchen. Here's how:

Grandmother's Mincemeat Pie.

2 pounds beef neck
1 pound suet
4 pounds tart apples
4 cups sugar
2 pounds currants
3 pounds seedless raisins
½ pound citron, cut
Juice and grated rind of 2 oranges
Juice and rind of 3 lemons
1 pint cider
1 tablespoon salt
1¼ teaspoons nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon mace

Cook beef slowly in hot water for 3 hours. Cool and force through food chopper with suet and apples, using coarse grinder. Add remaining ingredients, blending thoroughly. Cook slowly one hour, then seal in sterilized jars. This makes 6 quarts.

Line pie tin with pastry, then pour in mincemeat. Top with criss-cross or lattice crust and bake in a hot oven 35 minutes

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Japan now controls about 89% of the rubber plantations of the world.
Regardless of whether synthetic rubber is made from petroleum grain, shrubs or chemicals it will be some time before car owners will be able to purchase synthetic rubber tires. War purposes have first call.
A tombstone marks the spot near Sussex, England, where a tire that had served its owner 35 years was ceremoniously buried.
300 rubber parts, not including tires and tubes, are used in the modern automobile. Without rubber the car would truly be a "colt" wagon.
There is talk these days of recapping 25,000,000 tires a year. Quite a jump from the 3,600,000 recapped - retreaded mark of 1937.
Automobiles were on over 55% of all U. S. farms in 1940; 18.5% of the farms had motor trucks and 23.1% motor tractors.

NOTES OF A NEW YORKER IN WASHINGTON

Memos on the Congressional Limited:

The FBI personnel is now 13,000, of which 4,600 are agents (G-Men) in the field . . . In 1932 the FBI had only 300 of them . . . The Bureau now has sixty million sets of fingerprints—and every morning 125,000 new sets arrive . . . This is due to the many defense workers, army, navy, marines, air force, et al . . . An agent can find a set of prints within two minutes . . The exact amount of U. S. currency confiscated in the arrest of the eight saboteurs was $174,588.62 . . . In Director Hoover's reception room the No. 1 attraction used to be the kidnap letters of the Weyerheuser snatch, the Dillinger mob's weapons and so forth . . . It has been replaced by the "saboteur exhibit"—detonator caps, fuses for the high explosives, the Nazi navy cap with swastika insignia, and "the best bomb mechanism we've ever seen!" . Haupt, one of those electrocuted, was "the brainiest" . . He was 22.

Dorothy Lamour phoned the Navy Dep't and asked the operator to connect her with a Lieutenant . . "Who's calling?" was the query.

"Dorothy Lamour," lamoured Dorothy.

"Ha, ha!" said the operator. "And I'm Queen of the May!"

"Really!" replied the star. "Did you happen to see me in 'Beyond the Blue Horizon'?" . . . The operator said she had—so what?

Whereupon Lamour, for the special delight of a Navy phone girl, sang the entire chorus of the film's theme.

Another woman will eventually be arrested by the government, when it is through dealing with more important rabble-rousers. She is being watched, of course, but "she can always be taken," it was explained, after a reporter wondered why she was allowed to get away with her campaign of hate and incitement against the President During recent Federal hearings for others, Federal men trapped her attempting to "persuade a Federal juror" . . . They are holding that charge for the time they need it . When she goes to the clink—so will her daughter.

This is one way they are getting around Union Czar Petrillo . A recording is made of voice only in the U. S.—no music escort . . . That "master" is sent out of the country—where a band playing in American style provides the orchestral background . . . Both are then re-recorded to make a complete record of vocal and orchestra . . . A copy is sent here, manufactured and sold in the U. S. . . . The big idea is to avoid the A. F. of M. recent ruling that "no musician can make recordings in the U.S.A."

It's the brain child of a member of Local 802!!!

Among the famous ships that the 500 Reserve Cadets (at the Coast Guard Academy) train on is the old schooner Atlantic . . . It was commissioned in 1903 after the Vanderbilts built it to compete in the Transatlantic sailing races sponsored by Kaiser Wilhelm . . . The Atlantic was the winner, and Wilhelm, said the stories at the time, gave the Vanderbilt tribe "the most expensive gold cup in the world."

When World War I began that gold cup was turned over to our Government, which found that it was $22 worth of pewter!

Washington Rogues' Gallery:

The Washington reporters put the spotlight on the Gimme Bloc in Congress last week. It wasn't very pretty to look at either. In fact, the sight of it gave you the same kind of queasy feeling in the middle that comes when you're good and scared . And the way the Gimme Bloc was behaving, there was good reason to be scared.

The matter the Honorables were chewing up was Senator Lee's (Okla.) amendment to the 18-19-year-old draft bill . . . Sen Lee wanted to dry up the areas around the Army camps. There being Army camps practically everywhere, you wouldn't guess the measure was a prohibition wrinkle unless you looked at it . . . Sen. Lee is a smart cookie about his brothers in the two Houses. He is wise that lots of the Representatives from the corn bread and by-cracky belts haven't got the "moxie" to nix a blue nose measure . . . To show that much fight would cost the office holder his job. His job to him is one grade higher than the fate of his country.

The members of Congress frankly admitted to reporters that they hoped the measure wouldn't lead to a roll call. That would mean that their ballot would be public, with no chance to weasel . . They admitted that the Drys back home were laying on the pressure, and it wouldn't be good politics to go agin it. How do you like that? The United States is engaged in a war for survival. And these birds make no secret of the fact that getting elected is a matter much more important to them.

STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

FOR years Hollywood has complained that there were too many extras for too few jobs. Now it begins to look as if the shoe might be put on the other foot. For the extras are getting jobs in war plants. The other day at Columbia they were shooting a big banquet scene for "The Power of the Press," with Lee Tracy, Gloria Gibson, Guy Kibbee and Otto Kruger. There were also 150 dressed-up extras—and practically all of them were studying books on welding, die sinking, etc, between shots.

Pat O'Brien ("The Navy Comes Through" is keeping him busy) owes his dramatic experience to the fact that the state of Wisconsin paid ex-service men $30 a month to complete their educations, after the last war Discharged as a seaman, second class, he went to New York and enrolled in dramatic school, and landed on Broadway. "The Front Page," his first film, put him on the movie map.

Irene Dunne's going to have her work cut out for her in "Gaslight" if she gives a performance equaling Judith Evelyn's in the stage version, "Angel Street"; seems as if Metro might have done right by the public by letting them see her in it. She's had a lot of stage experience in Canada and England, and is a leading radio actress, with beauty and talent to burn. Several movie companies have been dickering with her, and why not—last year she won the Drama league's award for the season's most distinguished performance.

When the Red Cross army and navy nurses who were feted at Abbott and Costello's roller skating party left for foreign duty they took with them a book of radio scripts from the comics—material for the soldiers' own entertainments.

Raymond Massey played a touching farewell scene, his biggest one, when, in Warner's "Action in the North Atlantic," he bade good-by to his wife, played by Ruth Gordon. When the picture's done he'll join the Royal Canadian army as a major; he was an officer with them in the last war.

If you're homesick for the dear old days of vaudeville you mustn't miss Metro's "For Me and My Gal," with Judy Garland and Gene Kelly. It'll send you away singing the old songs. Judy and Kelly will do "Anchors Away" after she finishes "Girl Crazy."

"My Sister Eileen," with Rosalind Russell, Brian Aherne and Janet Blair, is as funny as the stage play, which is saying a lot. Even though the Hays office stepped on the script—but lightly—it hasn't lost much. Don't miss it!

Since Esther Williams finished work in "Andy Hardy Steps Out" she's been waiting so serenely for her next assignment that somebody asked her how she did it. "When I was badly defeated at my first swimming meet," said she, "my mother said, 'Remember, you have to lose a long time before you win.'" And that's practically perfect advice for all young actresses, most of whom need it.

On his return from South America Orson Welles saw his "Journey Into Fear" for the first time in finished form, and set out for Hollywood and the RKO studios to shoot a new ending, inspired by current world and war events. Dolores Del Rio heads the cast.

ODDS AND ENDS—John Tyers, young baritone of the St. Louis Municipal Opera company, gets the role of "Ravenal" in the re-make of "Show Boat" at Metro . . Alan Hale says he gets 90 miles to a gallon of gasoline in his bike scooter . . So Director Lloyd Bacon has bought one . . . Olivia de Havilland studied First Aid for scenes in "Princess O'Rourke"—and then learned that she was to be the victim . . There's a scarcity of artificial hair these days, so Warner Bros. ordered atmosphere and bit players for "The Adventures of Mark Twain" to grow their own beards . . Chester Morris heads a troupe which stages weekly shows at service camps.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

MOTIVES THAT STRENGTHEN FAMILY LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 2 1-4 Joshua 24 14, 15 Ephesians 5 25-31 6 1-4

GOLDEN TEXT—Love never faileth.—I Corinthians 13 8

Last week we saw the things which mar the life of the family, now we turn to those things which give strength to the home and to daily life This is a lesson much needed just now when so much of our normal home life is thrown out of joint

We begin at the right place when we say that there must be a

I. Recognition of God in the Home (Exod 2 1-4, Josh 24 14, 15)

Failure at this point is without question the great mistake of our day Christianity touches every phase of life, but nowhere is its blessed influence of greater importance than in the home

Our lesson suggests that this is to be done in two ways in our homes.

1 By Faith in God (Exod 2 1-4) The story of the birth of the babe who was to be Moses, possibly the greatest civic, social and religious leader of all time, reminds us that the Jewish people, who had found favor in the eyes of the Pharaohs in Joseph's time, were now being persecuted A decree had gone out that all boys were to be destroyed at birth

Here were two parents faced with the awful fact that their baby boy was condemned to death Did they weep in fear and despair? No, they trusted God and sent the little one forth on a venture of faith, the charming story of which follows the verses of our lesson God honored their faith by using their enemies to serve them

2 Service for God (Josh 24 14, 15) Joshua, who followed Moses as the God-appointed leader of Israel, was giving his last admonition to his people He knew how they had repeatedly turned from God in unbelief and sin, yes, that even now some were worshiping false gods

He pleads with them to turn to the one true God, but notice that his plea is made effective by the fact that he and his house were serving the Lord Every man who has a position of leadership in this world is responsible for the use of that place of power, as a testimony for God Now and then we hear of a high public official in our own land who loves and serves Christ in sincerity, and our hearts rejoice The faith of a whole nation may thus be strengthened

Every one of us has a sphere of influence, and our family life counts for or against God in our own community and among our own friends

The members of a family that recognize God have a high

II. Regard for One Another in the Home (Eph 5 23-31, 6 1-4)

It is pure hypocrisy for the family to parade an outward show of religion which does not effectively touch the relationships within the home Incidentally, it is the kind of hypocrisy which is strikingly ineffective—men see through it too easily

What then does Christianity do for the home itself? It determines, directs, sweetens—yes, glorifies the relation between

1 Husband and Wife (Eph 5: 28-31) This passage puts marriage on the highest plane, comparing it to the relationship between Christ and the church Thus marriage is the joining of man and wife in a sacred union which calls forth love in its highest and noblest sense

This means that the husband cherishes his wife as his own body, against which no man would do any harm, and for which he makes every possible provision for its comfort, health, usefulness and attractiveness Such love between parents will lead the entire home life along in a serene, happy and wholesome way It will not only double the joy, but will give strength in the hour of sorrow, dividing the griefs and burdens of life

It will set the pattern for the right relation between

2 Parents and Children (Eph 6: 1-4) The first, and one might almost say the only, law of childhood is obedience It is God's way to joy and a satisfying life experience for the child in the Christian home The command to obey carries with it the understanding that the parents are "in the Lord" What father or mother is competent to direct a child apart from faith in Christ?

Notice too, that the parent has an obligation to deal intelligently and kindly with the child We need a great deal of improvement, and perhaps instruction, at that point Authority asking obedience is necessary, but it can be wise and kind

Above all, there is to be a divine nurture, a guiding of the tender child life in the ways of God Here is life's greatest opportunity and its mightiest challenge How surprising that fathers (and mothers) who are looking for the greatest measure of usefulness to their generation fail to see it in the privilege they have to rear intelligent, godly children.

PREPAREDNESS
by the AMERICAN RED CROSS

A NATION at war must guard its health One sure guard, and one of the best forms of preparedness is proper diet.

Since World War I, the American Red Cross has offered the nation's housewives nutrition courses, designed to teach both men and women how to eat and keep well and strong. But Americans felt that since they were the best fed people of the world, they must also be the best nourished. In that belief they were mistaken.

The army reported that one-third of all applicants for war service were being rejected because of poor health—bad teeth, heart trouble, poor eyesight, skin diseases—all traceable to undernourishment. America's mothers and housewives were shocked into action.

Within the past year, more than 250,000 women have won Red Cross Food and Nutrition certificates by attending these courses held by Red Cross chapters in more than 1,850 counties throughout the United States.

In these Food and Nutrition courses, women learned the importance of preparing and serving the right amounts of the right kinds of foods—foods which contained the needed health protective qualities to keep their husbands fit for defense jobs and build their children strong.

Gallant Chap's Thoughts Were but Badly Worded

She was young and pretty, and her confusion as she fumbled vainly in her handbag for small change to pay her fare on the bus was quite charming.

"Could you change a five dollar bill for me, please?" she asked, smiling shyly.

"Sorry, miss," replied the conductor. "But don't you worry; you can pay me the ten cents some other time."

"But you may never see me again," replied the young lady.

"Well, what's the odds?" he said, meaning to be gallant. "It won't break my heart if I don't."

Dancing High-Jumpers

Tallest tribe of men in the world is the Watussi, of Belgian Congo; average height, 6 feet 6 inches. The tribal dances are strenuous, and give them springy thigh muscles, which enable them to leap prodigious heights.

Some of their best performers can fly over a bar eight feet from the ground, and on one ceremonial occasion a whole platoon of them jumped seven feet, two inches higher than the present world's high-jump record!

It is well for all of us to give over one day of the harvest season, not to feasting and revelry nor to idle boasting, but to prayerful consideration of our individual opportunity and responsibility We share with all mankind the burden of creating and producing the things needful for our physical existence The Iowa opportunity for helpfulness is without equal We rejoice in the favors of soil and climate, for habits of industry, for health, strength and a fine spirit of loyalty, for homes of peace and happiness and a community life that makes for cooperation in all that is good We are thankful for abundance for our bodily comforts and can divide our stores with those who are in need

In this darkest hour of a civilization that has lost its way and a world cod to frenzied madness by a war of lust and greed we of Iowa have the duty to consecrate ourselves anew to the gigantic task of restoring order and establishing righteousness We pray the strength of will to secure a social reconstruction that will turn humanity into the pathway leading into a glad, gracious and triumphant fraternity that will sweep away anger and hate Let us use all our spiritual powers in a supreme effort to make this a better world in which to live and labor and a part in the divine plan of human brotherhood

More Details On Wacker Draft Evasion Charge

BRITT EDITOR GIVES MORE DETAILS ON WACKER CASE

Last week the Klemme Times had a story on the Sylvanus Wacker case in which he was tried before a Federal Court and sentenced to serve four years in a penitentiary and fined $500 on a draft evasion charge

More details regarding the case appeared in the Britt News-Tribune and which we think will be of interest to our readers. Editor R R Roberts says:

"Wacker failed to appear for induction into the army when notified to appear by the draft board on July 6, 1942. He had been giving the board considerable apprehension and was given every chance to think it over and make up his mind After he failed to appear for induction his case was reported to the United States Marshal and he was picked up and placed in jail without bond

"Later he was taken to Cedar Rapids and given a hearing before the federal grand jury; was bound over to the federal court and sent to Dakota City and placed in jail to await trial At the trial he claimed to be a conscientious objector but apparently did not make a showing to that effect, as the jury was out only a few minutes arriving at a verdict of guilty. He was sentenced 4 years in federal prison and to pay a fine of $500 00 after his conviction at Fort Dodge on Wednesday, Nov 11. A fine Armistice Day gift from the country that has made it possible for him to enjoy every freedom and a just and impartial trial after he refused to be loyal to his native country.

"Wacker's family have been prosperous and are said to own 600 acres of land south of Garner. Sylvanus is not the first member of this family to show hate for the country He has a sister Jane who was under surveillance for a long time and was finally convicted in federal court and sentenced to six months imprisonment She had written a letter to Senator Clyde Herring telling him that President Roosevelt would be hung She is also said to have been in communication with the German Bund and supplied information as to railroads and bridges This was not a part of the evidence on which she was convicted but was in the hands of federal officials After her conviction she was released on parole to Charles Holly, federal probation officer at Sioux City A short time after her conviction she broke her parole and was then sent to jail and served thirty days of the six months sentence

After Bredlow Brothers

"Merle and Ellsworth Bredlow, also of Garner, and who were arrested for draft evasion and spent some time in the Britt jail earlier in the year, were still at large when Sylvanus Wacker was tried When the United States Marshal went to pick them up they were away from home in Minnesota but it is expected their case will be disposed of soon They were bound to the federal court at Fort Dodge and released under $2,500.00 bonds each. This was for the June term. Just why they have been let run at large is not certain."

ROYAL NEIGHBORS GAVE PARTY FOR MRS. WILCOX

The Royal Neighbors held a party Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Lawhorn, honoring Mrs. Lyle Wilcox, who was presented with a gift from the organization.

Lunch was served after a social hour.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. French North African Campaign Aimed at Aiding British Egyptian Drive In Annihilating All of Rommel's Army; AEF Operations Proceeding on Schedule

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Arrows near top of map show general locations of American troop landings in opening the long-heralded second front. U. S. troops struck at Algiers and other key cities, carrying out operations at a speed even greater than anticipated.

FIRST BLOWS:
Gain Objectives

Even as the city of Algiers fell to attacking United States troops, official communiques from Allied North African headquarters announced new successes in the second front drive to forestall an Axis invasion of French territory

The Algerian port of Oran was reported in American hands, as was near-by Arzew. The capitulation of Algiers, first announced by Vichy and later confirmed by Lieut Gen. Dwight D Eisenhower in North Africa, provided for American occupation of the city

Before the city had surrendered, American combat teams and Rangers had captured two air fields in that area and a third near Oran. Possession of the airdromes will enable Allied forces to beat off Axis air attacks from Sicily and Sardinia and gives Mediterranean convoys much-needed aerial protection.

From Allied headquarters in Africa came word of heavy fighting from several French naval units and shore batteries at Algiers and Oran ports, but this was dealt with by British and American naval forces Coastal defenses at Algiers, manned by Admiral Darlan's navy, sank two light Allied vessels in the harbor. Big guns from some of the greatest warships afloat put an end to the opposition.

VICHY:
Breaks Relations

Meanwhile, the government of Marshal Petain, chief of state in Vichy, France, broke relations with the United States. Pierre Laval, as chief of government, summoned S Pinkney Tuck, U. S. charge d'affaires at Vichy, and informed him that relations between France and the United States were broken off.

Thus was ended a strong bond of friendship which had persevered for many decades and which lasted through almost a year of war.

At a Washington press conference Secretary of State Cordell Hull disclosed that the United States' relations with Vichy had served their purpose and that the United States no longer cares what attitude the Vichy government takes. He pointed out that the major reason for maintaining relations was to prepare for the drive into Africa. Past relations with Vichy aided the groundwork for that operation.

Petain took his action after talking to his highest advisers, including Laval and Gen. Maxime Weygand, former pro-consul for French North Africa. Early fragments of information reaching Vichy gave isolated reports of at least 10 American landings, air and sea bombardments and De Gaullist (Fighting French) uprisings. American forces were reported ashore in an area extending over about 650 miles of France's North African coast on the Atlantic and the Mediterranean.

OPERATIONS:
'Proceeding Rapidly'

While Vichy evidenced its reluctance to believe battlefront reports, authoritative dispatches from American correspondents said that everywhere operations were proceeding rapidly

Americans were quick to seize airfields in the region of Algiers and Oran Veteran fighter pilots set their planes down on the fields immediately after ground forces overran the airports. The split-second timing was revealed when, in one case, American fighter planes coming in to land aided in the capture of the field at the last minute with a ground strafing attack which removed the last vestige of resistance.

The feat of one eager American combat force was reported in early communications. One of the few submarines which reached the convoy disabled a transport, packed with the combat force. Instead of waiting to be towed back to port by the destroyers, the army commander ordered his men to take to their assault boats, tiny, flat-bottomed craft designed only for short forays to landing beaches. With destroyers as an escort the strange armada sailed 120 miles through rough water to land at one of the many beachheads. The seasick soldiers stuck to their posts throughout the dangerous journey and achieved what was termed a feat without parallel in such an operation.

ROMMEL:
Distance Runner

The battered remnants of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's African army had new worries. Pursued relentlessly by the British Eighth army, the arrival of American troops in Algeria launched a powerfully equipped spearhead of power at Rommel's back. The pincers appeared to be closing.

Official British announcements told how the Germans abandoned their Italian allies to capture or annihilation. A Cairo dispatch said that six entire Italian divisions have been captured complete with all their equipment. "It seems clear," said a British war bulletin, "that the Germans withdrew without attempting to extricate any of the Italian infantry formations."

The fleeing Axis armies already had left Mersa Matruh far behind. Halfaya (Hellfire) pass, a narrow defile leading into Libya's arid regions, loomed ahead. Even though the Nazis get through Halfaya pass, they are confronted with new obstacles They have lost the bulk of their armored forces and most of their Italian support. They are a long way from home and face the possibility of being cut off. Should the battle be fought out in the Libyan desert, it will be possible for the British to flank the remainder of Rommel's men.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

HOROSHO—That was the word the Russians shouted through the streets of their towns and villages as they greeted the news of the American campaign opening up in Africa. "Horosho" in Russian is the equivalent of "swell."

KILLED—In Egypt, Peter Wood, son of Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the U. S., was killed in action.

REVERSAL—Capt. Fred Eldridge, editor of The Roundup, newspaper for American forces in China, Burma and India, urged sarcastically that "all you guys sweating it out up in Assam and China start writing letters to the States and sending little packages of goodies to buck up home morale." He pointed to the "terrible" hardships of gas rationing and the $25,000 limit on salaries.

INTER-UNION ROW:
Affects Detroit Firms

Because of alleged interference with their organizational efforts by members of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), 7,000 workers left their jobs in a half dozen Detroit war plants, suspending operations in the production of vital war materials.

The strike was Detroit's largest since Pearl Harbor. It was called off at the end of the first day after War Labor board intervention. In a single day it forced the shutdown of 15 Detroit factories.

The workers involved were members of the Mechanics Educational Society of America (Independent). Matthew Smith, M E S A. president, described the work stoppages as a "labor holiday" designed to "see if there is any law and order in this town—if a man can join a labor union of his own choosing." Smith said the trouble started between his union and the U.A.W. when, several weeks ago, a group of M.E.S A. officials called at the Briggs Manufacturing Co. to attempt to organize workers there. He said some U.A.W. members threw his men bodily from the plant

MANPOWER:
And Production

There was much discussion throughout government, industry and labor circles regarding the advisability of increasing the number of hours in the standard American work-week.

General opinion seemed to be that to increase the standard number of hours from 40 to 48 was a good step but further than that few wanted to go.

President Roosevelt at his press conference disclosed some interesting data on the subject. He said that intelligence reports show that last spring the German government decided to greatly increase the work-week, especially in certain munitions plants where the number of weekly hours went up from 70 to 80 For about two months, Nazi production greatly increased but then began to slip until the time came when the output of the 70-to-80-hour work-week was actually less than the former 48-hour week

Latest monthly reports of U S war production show that the nation's industrial machine continues to gain speed as it rolls along munitions production was up 7 per cent over the month before; airplane production up 10 per cent; ordnance 7 per cent, navy and army vessels 22 per cent, merchant ships 10 per cent.

VOICE:
From a Beer Cellar

Speaking at the Loewenbrau beer cellar on the anniversary of his 1923 Munich putsch Adolf Hitler spouted loud and long about the latest developments in the U S. drive into the French North African colonies He declared that the landings there would "no more win the war than the British landings in France early in the conflict."

But while his words were strong and scornful there was evidence to indicate that the recent events in Africa had given him cause for concern. Said he: "We will prepare all counter blows as thoroughly as always, and they will come in due time."

He spent much of his speech in a review of the war and was careful to stress the fact that there would be no German capitulation as in 1918. He drew a parallel between himself and the kaiser, saying that "The kaiser was a man who did not have strength to see things through . . ." But Hitler indicated that he would have more strength in the hour of crisis. "All the time from my boyhood I have kept the bad habit of having the last word."

ADOLF HITLER
"We will prepare counter blows"

Observers took the tone of his speech to mean that the trend of worrying noticed lately among German citizens had finally reached the stage where officials were inclined to counter with an answer—at least in words.

Hitler said that so far in this war 350,000 Germans had been killed.

ITALY:
Double Trouble

News of the American landing brought further pessimism to an already unhappy Italy. The first official comment came when it was announced over Rome radio that ". . . the Italian people—for this attack is directed against us—is facing a terrible trial. The maximum effort of the adversary has been directed against us, but shall we bow down before the . . . weight . . . this foe without a struggle?"

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Bernard Baruch, who has been commuting from New York whenever the President desired his services in Washington, is now looking for permanent quarters in Washington.

Librarian of Congress Archibald MacLeish has rented the old Robert E. Lee house in Alexandria, suburb of Washington.

When a New York banker came to Washington on a government job, he wanted to rent a Georgetown home belonging to Mrs. Lionel Atwill, ex-wife of both General MacArthur and actor Atwill. But the banker balked at the rent. "I can't pay that much," he said. "I gave up a $45,000 job to come here." . . . "That's nothing," retorted Mrs. Atwill, "I gave up a $50,000 husband!"

Once when Mrs. Atwill was asked if she didn't regret divorcing MacArthur, thus losing the limelight of a great hero, she replied, "Which is the greater figure—Josephine or Marie Louise?"

STEALING THE STARS

Washington is full of movie moguls all worried about the fact that their big stars are leaving them. Trouble is the $25,000 ceiling on incomes. Hollywood stars figure this is an opportunity to jump their contracts, and everybody is now out stealing each other's stars—or trying to.

The ins and outs of the new income ceiling are difficult. But in brief, here is how it affects Hollywood. The total salary which can be paid under the new ruling is $67,000, which, when tax deductions are made, gives a net income of $25,000 Certain other deductions also are allowable, but the treasury regulation specifically states that additional money to care for these deductions cannot be paid out by the companies. If they do pay them, the government may require them to make good the outlays.

This is what gripes the movie stars. Some of them have been getting salaries running up into the $200,000s, so to come down to $67,000 is quite a plop.

Furthermore, movie contracts are for one picture, with an option taken on the next and then the next. So with the companies unable to pay high salaries, the options on their stars are automatically broken.

HEROES WITHOUT HEADLINES

You don't hear much about them and their names don't get into the headlines, but some of the boys doing great jobs in Egypt are the tank repair crews of the U S. ordnance corps.

When a tank is damaged in action on the Egyptian front, an American crew goes out at night with a big auto-transport truck, not unlike those which used to carry passenger cars from Detroit to retail auto dealers. They load the crippled tank on board, haul it behind the lines where mobile machine shops have been set up, and in almost no time it is repaired.

U. S. SOLDIERS—U. S. FARMERS

Forthright Sen. Charley McNary comes from Oregon, where the farmers have had a lot of trouble this year getting men to pick their fruit and harvest their wheat.

So McNary wrote to Secretary of War Stimson pointing out that there were two army cantonments in Oregon, that it might be an excellent thing for the nation's food supply and for national co-operation generally if some of the soldiers were given furloughs and allowed to help Oregon farmers with their crops.

Secretary of War Stimson wrote back rather tartly that soldiers of the U. S. army had to work at war, and that the idea was preposterous.

A little later Senator McNary noticed newspaper accounts of the way American soldiers in England had taken time to help English farmers harvest crops. So he wrote Stimson again.

"The work of our men in training for war must be shot to pieces in England," McNary said, "in view of the fact that American soldiers are working in the harvest fields."

The secretary of war replied a little lamely that if American troops in England were working in the harvest fields, they were doing it on their own time. But he welcomed no more suggestions about helping farmers here at home.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Undersecretary of State Welles has made it clear that Chairman Ed Flynn of the Democratic national committee will be appointed to a Latin-American diplomatic post only over his dead body.

The President, always an optimist, will make one more attempt to bring the AFL and CIO together by inviting Bill Green and Phil Murray to the White House. Labor leaders say privately, however, that there will be no agreement. Both sides will patch up a jurisdictional truce and agree to refrain from membership raids for the duration.

Navy department communiques are short and sweet. In the navy department's press section, answering queries from newspaper offices, are two young officers, Lieut. Short and Lieut. Sweet.

Hippety-Hop Over the Globe

By Beverly Smith

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with American Magazine)

I landed this afternoon at an airport in Maryland. Where do you think I was last night? In Iceland. And yesterday morning I was in London.

That's the way the U. S. Army Air Transport command plays hippety-hop with global geography.

Primary jobs of the Air Transport command are: first, to take planes as they roll off factory assembly lines and fly them to army airfields in the U. S. A. or to the fighting fronts anywhere in the world; second, to pick up vital loads of men and materials, which cannot wait for surface ships, and fly them to the point where they are wanted, anywhere in the world. Simply a world-wide air delivery service, combined with a world-wide flying freight and passenger service. Sounds simple, doesn't it? But it isn't

After spending weeks talking with its mechanics and high officers, its pilots, navigators, and weathermen, I still find trouble describing the Air Transport command. It grows literally faster than you can write. Already it is larger than all the prewar air lines of the world combined. Already Brig. Gen. Harold L. George, in command, looks forward to the day when it will be ten times its present size.

But it isn't the size; it's the importance to our war effort. Not long ago, in an inaccessible part of Alaska, an important military hospital was burned to the ground. An SOS was sent to the command. Material and equipment were flown in. Within 36 hours a 24-bed emergency hospital was set up and operating. This freighting operation would have taken weeks with surface transportation

Planes Versus Ships.

"But how," I wondered, "do transport charges, with even the latest model air transport plane, carrying only 20 tons, compare with those of a ship carrying 6,000 tons?"

Here, the Air Transport command, with its world-wide operations, is proving out a new tonnage-mile arithmetic. For example, take 80 cargo planes 5 tons each. That makes 400 tons. In one month those cargo planes can make 15 trips each, while the merchant ship is making one trip. Fifteen times 400 equals 6,000. Thus, 80 such modern cargo planes can do the work of one big merchant ship. And the planes don't have to worry about submarines.

Of course, the ton-mileage cost of plane freight is still far above that of ship freight, but it is creeping down. Mass production of the big sky-trucks is just getting well under way: costs will go steadily down; efficiencies and pay-loads are going steadily up. The point where valuable express freight may find cargo planes cheaper than railroads, trucks, or ships is coming into sight. And then?

It's a Small World.

Yes, the world is making one of its swift changes under our very eyes as it did when Fulton's first steamboat chugged up the Hudson, or when the golden spike was driven into the first transcontinental railroad, or when auto pioneers began tinkering with mass-production assembly lines.

Little over a year ago, this terrestrial child prodigy was set up under the name of the Ferrying Command by a presidential order directing the army to help speed up delivery of lease-lend planes to Britain. It started with two officers and a clerk On June 9, 1941, an army pilot took off from a factory with a new plane and delivered it to the British in Montreal.

The events of December 7 boosted the infant command to world dimensions. American production of armaments and planes reached record levels. American production, we agreed, would win the war.

Recently I passed some time at a great Air Transport command field in the eastern part of the United States. A year ago this land was a potato patch. Now it is crisscrossed with runways each over a mile long.

Barracks have been built, hotels brought into service, to house the fliers and maintenance men. Dispersed about the field, as far as the eye can reach, are heavy bombers, light bombers, big transport planes. Some have just come in, others are about to take off. Tank trucks rumble about feeding fuel into the planes, while mechanics give the final checkover before the planes leave for Persia or Chungking, or Russia, England or Alaska.

This is something new under the sun—a Grand Central Station of the Air, with Destinations Unlimited.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The government's goal is to produce synthetic rubber at a rate of more than 800,000 tons per year by the end of 1943.

Even without a war program requiring tremendous quantities of rubber, the U. S. used 648,000 tons of rubber in 1940.

Any tire made in the last two or three years is good for eight to ten years if not worn out in service.

In 1933, 900 farm tractors were sold with rubber tires and 3,000 steel wheeled tractors were changed over to rubber. Six years later 161,500 rubber tired tractors were bought by American farmers and in addition 45,300 were converted to rubber wheels.

Following a steadily advancing position, tire life in the U. S. has roughly doubled in each of the past decades.

You Have, Despite War's Growing Hardships, Today Something to Be Truly Thankful For

Revolutionary War Brought Freedom People Now Take as Matter-of-Fact

It was the successful completion of the Revolutionary War which resulted in the designation of a national day of thanksgiving for the benefits obtained during the year.

One hundred and fifty years ago, George Washington recommended "a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity to establish a Constitution or government for their safety and happiness."

Just previous to this petition, in 1777, the 13 colonies, acting as one, celebrated a day of Thanksgiving when the British general, Burgoyne, was defeated.

True, popular tradition has it that the first Thanksgiving was held at Plymouth, Mass., when the Pilgrims had gathered in their first harvest. But the significant fact about Thanksgiving is to be noted in Washington's recommendation for a national observance of a day of thanks because of the opportunity given the early colonists "to establish a Constitution or government for their safety and happiness."

A national, truly sincere spirit of Thanksgiving was born out of the aftermath of the nation's first war observance of Thanksgiving is this: We are able to carry the war back to the enemy, and carry it back hard and furiously to him wherever he is

In the early days of the Revolutionary war the soldiers, the officers, the great majority of citizens didn't have to ask: "What are we fighting for?"

They knew. For the enemy was here, on this continent. They saw him. They fought him up and down the Atlantic coast.

In addition to being practical men, these early colonists were dreamers

They dreamed the great dream which has been realized today with this nation stretching from one ocean to another—from our northern neighbor, Canada, to our southern neighbor, Mexico, both of whom are now fighting a common foe with us.

Rationing, increased taxes, sons and husbands in the armed forces—this is what confronts the whole nation as the first wartime Thanksgiving in almost a quarter century is observed.

Those who ask themselves what they have to be thankful for will think at first that there is no answer

But common sense and logic will prevail A glance at almost any newspaper will convince the reader that freedom of the press is more than an expression in America So greatly valued is this freedom of the press in occupied Europe that thousands are risking immediate execution by the Gestapo to print underground newspapers with messages for the unification of the oppressed. These newspapers, proving the value of a free press, are often no larger than a handbill, but the importance of their message cannot be overemphasized.

But maybe your mind doesn't run in such a channel. Maybe you still will not be convinced as you sit at the table on Thanksgiving day. There before you are mountains of food—turkey or goose or chicken; creamy potatoes, cranberries, all kinds of vegetables; cakes, pies, puddings, desserts. So much food that the plates, knives, forks, glasses and coffee cups seem to be in the way

Food, and plenty of it before you. Enough food there to feed at least eight times more starving Frenchmen, or Poles, or Russians in territory under Hitler's oppression.

Something to be thankful for—there it is'

What do you suppose Hitler's Master Race" in Germany would say about the "New World Order" if they had half the food in front of them that millions of Americans will have on Thanksgiving day

Another thing If you don't like what your congressman is doing you are free to say so You might even write him a letter and tell him just what you think, and what you think of him If you don't like the way the war is going you say so You'll argue in public with someone who disagrees with you about national, state, or local political activities Suppose you had this inherent right taken away from you You'd be thankful for it then So why not now?

Put yourself in the place of a conquered people or imagine yourself living in an Axis country. In those places freedom of speech is limited to saying, "Yes, yes" when permitted to hear the master's voice.

Suppose the only church service you were permitted to attend was that one in which the "gospel" of the dictator was spouted by a party sycophant Suppose your church was no longer the house of worship you remembered it, but a meeting place, a club for those who were members of the dictator's gang.

Suppose you couldn't worship your God the way you wanted to, because that way was against the "ruler's" theory Suppose your friend's house of worship was entered by the "leader's" mob, sacked, religious articles destroyed, and then the building burned to the ground?

That is what has happened, and is still happening, too many times in Europe since Hitler began "saving the world."

Something for you to be thankful for? There it is: Freedom to worship your God as you see fit.

This Thanksgiving day will be remembered as being an exceptional one. It will be remembered as the day when Americans were fully thankful for the many rights which in the past have been taken for granted

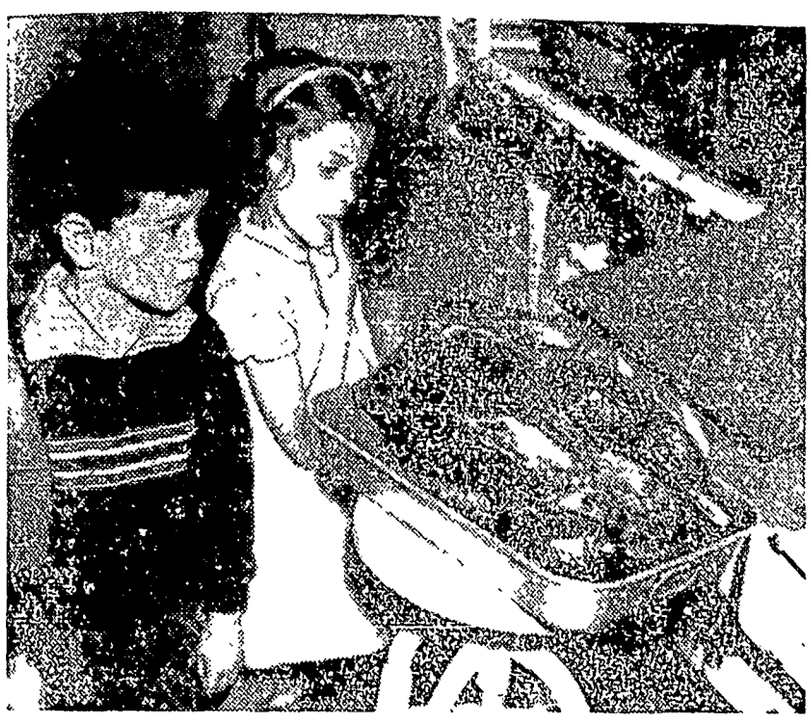
'MOTHER OF THANKSGIVING DAY'

The daughter of a Revolutionary war army captain, Mrs. Sarah Josepha Buell Hale, native of Newport, N. H., has the distinction of being the "Mother of Thanksgiving day."

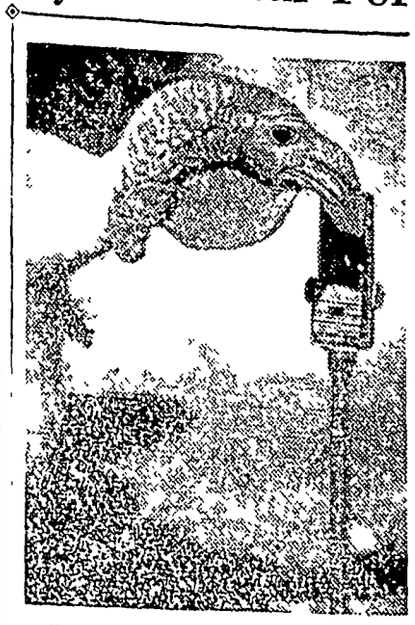
For years she tried vainly to mobilize governors of her time to have them all agree on one day which would be set aside as a day of Thanksgiving.

Finally she prevailed upon President Lincoln in 1863 to proclaim Thanksgiving as uniformly a national festival day.

Mrs. Hale, who died after 91 years of great activity, was the widowed mother of five children. She was an author, pioneer feminist, and also editor of Godey's Lady's Book in Boston during the 1830s.

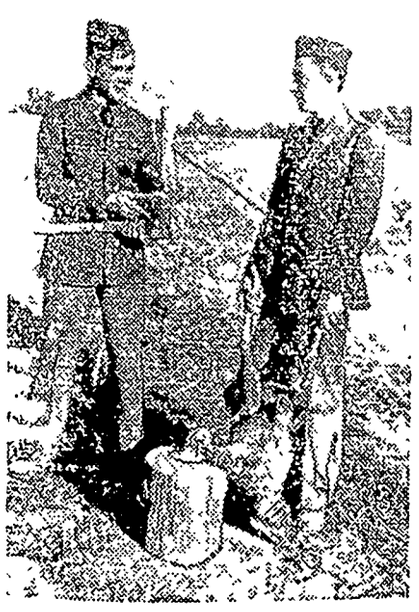


You can imagine what the thoughts are of these two kids as they look at the giant turkey which has just been taken from the oven. It doesn't seem that they are convinced it is true—that they can believe what they see. Scenes such as this one will be multiplied thousands of times Thanksgiving day.



G. Obbler, caught in the act of broadcasting a "flee for your lives" warning to his unsuspecting kin-folk, heard that not only is he going to get the ax, but also thousands like him. He doesn't know it, but his "goose is cooked" in so far as his life on this earth is concerned. Maybe you'll see him on Thanksgiving day. In a different pose.

SWING IT!



The quartermaster corps of the United States army is also making sure the men in the army are going to have the best dinner possible on Thanksgiving day. Many of those who get leave to be home with their parents on that Thursday will be doing the same thing these two Yanks are getting ready to do. Too bad for that turkey!

THOUGHTFUL

This young native of Thanksgiving, N. C., has paused for a moment before beginning decapitation ceremonies. He feels that he just couldn't possibly deprive the old gobbler one last meal.

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Magazines: Lieut. John Mason Brown takes a civilian wallop at Archibald Henderson, G. B. Shaw's biogger, in The Saturday Review. Henderson kept "I-ing" his way into the narrative, said Brown, until "what was supposed to be Shaw's life managed to become Mr. Henderson's scrapbook" . Irving Wallace quotes a couple of fabulous Hollywood shoestringers in Coronet on how they can make profitable flickers so fast "Because," explained the quickie wizards, "we don't have to struggle through red tape, stooges and relatives" . Pearl Buck's story, "The Enemy," in Harper's reminds you what wonderful things can be done with words, if you have talent Woollcott's brilliant story of a refugee in Reader's Digest points out that our first refugees were called Pilgrims—an observation that this dep't last-lined more than a year ago . . . Looky, you mag correspondents at the Fronts We aren't panting to know how bumpy your plane rides are, or how ousylay your meals. Let's have something about the war and the warriors Commenting on the news that three thousand dead Japs received medals from their gov't, Time observes. "The interesting thing was not that Japan had so many heroes, but that the heroes were dead." Punchy sarcasm

The Front Pages: With a second front raging on African sands and a third front blazing on Guadalcanal, some editorialists are still whooping it up for a second front Hanson Baldwin's lucid military essays about the Solomons, in the Times, are another glorious page of journalism's war reportage As soon as the gazettes finished patting Congress for having the moxie to pass the 'teen age draft bill before the elections, Congressional monkey-wrench throwers made certain it would be deferred until after them The editors have jumped to the defense of the AP in the gov't anti-trust action against the news service. They claim it threatens freedom of the press. Could be But who tried to defend that freedom when the racing sheets were banned from the stands?

The Intelligentsia: Carl Sandburg's epic four-volume treatise of Lincoln and the Civil War has been digested into a single meaty volume, "Storm Over the Land" (Harcourt, Brace) It's a gold mine of historical knowledge . Two decades of Thomas Mann's wisdom have been put between covers in "Order of the Day" (Knopf) You don't have to be told that it contains a shining intelligence worth wrapping around your mind . . . Like the dress suit in "Tales of Manhattan," a passport strings together the arresting story of Ed Beattie's life as a UP foreign newsboy in "Freely to Pass" (Crowell) . The typewriters of foreign correspondents may be turning out oceans of books, but each performs a vital function—painting an important segment of the background for the global struggle.

Edward W. Beattie Jr., the United Press correspondent, whose new book, "Freely to Pass," is a click, tells this one . . . At the Munich conference there was a large bowl containing a lone goldfish on a table Someone suggested that they all try to catch it . . . Daladier cautiously rolled up a starched cuff, put his hand into the water and made a grab, but the fish easily got away . Chamberlain tried to hook it with his umbrella handle and failed . . . Mussolini shot out his chin, put on his most awesome scowl and lunged with both paws. He almost got it . Hitler stepped up and started bailing out the water with a teacup . Soon there was only a little water left and the fish flopped around dismally on its side . . "Grab him, grab him!" cried Benito.

"No," said Hitler, "first he must cry for help!"

Dewey got this telegram on his election: "Congratulations and all the other headaches that go with being a winner."

Judith Evelyn of "Angel Street" relays the latest draft fable. A near-sighted youngster with thick lensed specs was put in 1A.

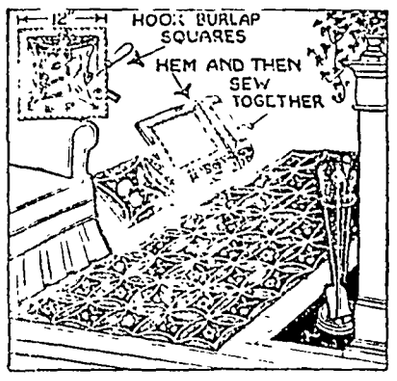
"Didn't they examine your eyes?" asked a pal.

"No," he said, "they just counted 'em!"

Typewriter Ribbons: Ring Lardner He looked at me like I was a side dish he hadn't ordered . . . Edith Wharton: A lady of energetic eyebrows . . . B. Alexander: Her wrinkles proved that time had dug in for a long stay . . . Margaret Bailey She wore conviction like a well cut gown . . Anne Parrish: A face as calm as custard O. Henry She gave him a well-manicured glance of a cultured lady . . . John G Pollard: Geneology means tracing yourself back to people better than you are.

ON THE HOME FRONT

With RUTH WYETH SPEARS



HERE is a hooked hearth rug that may some day grow up to room size So far every female member of the family has hooked at least one square, and the males are all represented by materials from cast-off suits, socks and sweaters The turquoise flowers and red cherries in the alternate squares are from dyed pieces of the old cream colored wool blankets. When the squares are hemmed and sewn together with strong carpet thread, they form a fascinating pattern of circles, flowers and fruit

Twelve-inch squares of burlap overcast around the edge made the foundation pieces. Patterns for the repeat design were cut from paper and the burlap was marked by drawing around these with wax crayon. Loops of fabric strips were drawn through with a steel rug hook. Red was used for the curved lines shown at the upper left. Tones of brown for the flower and gray for the cherry background. Mixed colors for the rest of the design.

THE OLD ARMY MULE

The jeeps, peeps and trucks in this modern war have not entirely eliminated the old Army mule, so we should know a little about the old boy

In Missouri the mule is a Mountain Canary, the Mexicans label him a Pinto and the Negroes call him a Chicksaw.

However, he answers to none of these names You can yell at him, whip him and whistle at him for hours, but he has no ear for music

The mule can sleep standing up, lying down or leaning

He is less nervous than the hoss and more reliable than the tractor. He is not temperamental if handled properly and with dignity, which gives him about the social rating of a broken-down prima donna

The mule has been honored in song and story, and nature has endowed him with the vocal apparatus so that he can attend to the matter personally

When a mule bends his ears back, opens his mouth and starts paging something that isn't there, you can hear him at a distance that would turn a green postage stamp purple

Now, a mule is stubborn, but he isn't dumb, he's darn smart. He never eats himself into a founder or drinks himself into heaves He works when he feeels like it and sleeps at will

The screwball farmer who builds a fire under a balky mule on a cold day is just giving that mule extra janiter service

The reason that mule balked is because he knew that old weed-bender would start a comfortable fire under him It is all the comforts of home without having to pay rent

Your genuine army mule isn't much concerned with gaining any ground He kicks on the first down And there is no record of anybody ever running back a kick

One old army mule-skinner said, "after I got kicked they ran me to a hospital and put mustard poultices on my stomach I asked them if they thought the shoe was still in there, but the surgeon reminded me he was only trying to draw out the nails."

Never sneak up on the east end of a mule going west

THE DRAFT DODGER

(Sent in by one of the men in the Service)

I'm writing this short letter
And every word is true,
Don't look away, draft dodger,
For it's addressed to you.

You feel at ease, in no danger,
Back in the old home town
You cooked up some pitiful story,
So the draft board would turn you down

You never think of real men,
Who leave their home day by day
You just think of their girl friends
That you get while they are away.

You sit home and read your paper
You jump and yell, "We'll win"
Just where do you get that "We'll" stuff?
This war will be won by men.

Just what do you think, draft dodger,
That this free nation would do
If all the men were slackers
And scared to fight like you.

Well I guess that's all, Mr. Slacks
I suppose your face is red.
America's no place for your kind
And I mean every word I've said.

So I'm closing this, draft dodger,
Just remember what I say.
"Keep away from my girl, you dirty bum,
For I'm coming back some day."

MAN'S BEST FRIEND

Man's best friend, they always say,
Is just a little pup;
So my fine dog runs through the house
And eats my slippers up.

He's always faithful, so they say,
When sick he's by your bed;
So puppy dear with muddy feet
Walks gaily 'cross my spread.

He will defend you to his death,
Dog-lovers always say;
So when he fights with every dog
I pass it off as play.

It keeps me broke from month to month
To feed my little pup;
But I'll sit by and calmly wait—
He'll eat my income up.

Mrs. Tom Hake Writes Interesting Story Of Work In Mountains

The following letter received by Mrs. A. G Koerner from Mrs. Tom Hake of Santa Margarita, Cal., will be of interest to our readers. The Hake family were residents of our town several years ago. Here is the letter:

October 24, 1942

Mrs. A. G Koerner,
Klemme, Iowa.
Dear Lillie:

You never can tell where I'll show up next, can you? I'm way up on top of a mountain in California now and it looks like I'll be here for some time. We came to Long Beach, Cal. last May, Tom, Boyd and I, thinking the climate would be good for Boyd as he hadn't recovered from all those operations he had last summer. It was too damp in Long Beach so we came north about 250 miles to San Luis Obispo where there isn't so much fog We liked it better here so signed up on defense work as Radio Operators in the Forest Service and were sent up here.

We are about 50 miles back from the ocean Tom and I are on one look-out post and Boyd and another man are on another about 10 miles from us.

The country is wild. Lots of deer, bear, mountain lion, bob cats, coyotes and rattle snakes. We have no neighbors and have to get our supplies packed in by mules. The Rangers take care of that and they just brought us as far as they could with a truck and we changed to horses and mules and came the last 3 or 4 miles up the side of the mountain, 40 miles from the nearest town, so the bright lights won't tempt us much.

We watch out for fires and air craft. The reports go either to the Forest Service headquarters by phone or to the Army headquarters by radio. Visitors are not encouraged and must be reported if any happen to come, but as the only way they can get here is to ride a mule or walk, we probably won't have much company.

These Posts are under the Forest Service, the Army and the F. B I. All messages go out in code and we are not allowed to tell our names or location, just our code name and number.

We have a nice little cabin with a tower, and on clear days we can see the ocean We burn gas for heat and cooking Gas comes in tanks We have Ranger kits for our dishes, a water pail, coffee pot, 2 frying pans, 2 plates, 2 cups, kettle, knives, forks, and spoons. A table, 2 cots and a couple of chairs make up our equipment. We have a kerosene lamp too but have to keep it shaded because of the dim-out regulations There is no work attached to this job, just be here. We report every two hours day and night to the main office by phone, so they will know the Japs haven't found us.

The timber around her is mostly live oak with long whiskers hanging down, and pine trees.

The Rangers bring in big cans of water every two weeks and groceries once a month. It is hot here in the day time but pretty snappy at night So far we have had no rain and there has been several bad fires. Soon the rains will start and it won't be so pleasant.

Tom killed a rattler today so maybe you think I don't step high and wide!

Wouldn't you like to see me in my cowboy clothes, astride a mule climbing up the mountain? They gave me a horse but warned me if I didn't stay here I'd have to walk or ride a mule down.

Maurine still lives in Torrington. Tommy is growing so tall, nearly as tall as she is now, is in Junior High school now, 8th grade.

I suppose the army has taken most all the boys from Klemme. It makes it pretty hard on all small towns when all the young people leave. California has already started calling married men and lots of them are enlisting in the Coast Guard and Merchant Marine.

Thousands of young people from the Middle West are working in the defense plants along the coast. They make good money but spend it fast and are broke before their next pay day.

We were in Long Beach when a part of the Fleet came in, about 25,000 sailors. It was a sight to see and they just took over the town.

Tom sends best wishes to you all. Love from Ava Hake.

SHAMROCKS DROPPED GAME TO BRITT CAGERS

The Klemme Shamrocks dropped a game of basketball to Coach Rockwood's Britt Eagles at Britt 21 to 16 Tuesday night.

The game was fairly close thru most of the frames, with Britt in front 12 to 9 at the half.

Bill Grosshuesch led the Klemme scoring with nine points. For Britt, Hughes had seven points.

The Shamrocks were handicapped when Jacobs went cut early after the half on personal fouls.

LEONARD LAU TEACHES IN SCHOOL FOR DEAF

The Times is in receipt of a letter from Leonard Lau, former cabinet-maker at the Northern Lumber Company here.

Mr. Lau teaches manual training in the State School for Deaf at Vancouver, Washington. He has twenty-five boys ranging from the third grade to the Senior Class and they are taught all kinds of carpentry and learning to operate power equipment in wood-working

Mr Lau says, "Our school lies on a beautiful hill facing the great Columbia River, and there one of the famous Kaiser Shipyards sprang up last spring, about one-fourth of a mile down the river from our school Tell the Klemme people I appreciate all they did for me or my family, and sometime next summer we will go to Klemme and once more will say Hello to many friends on the street."

Mr L. B Kallestad of Belmond was transacting business in this community Tuesday Mr Kallestad is the Pioneer Hybrid Seed Corn Co representative for this territory A few weeks ago The Times carried an adv for Mr Kallestad in which we made a slight error as we had his initials "H B" instead of L B. If you write him about Pioneer seed corn address L. B Kallestad, Belmond.

KLEMME SHAMROCKS CHALK UP FIRST WIN AGAINST BELMOND BRONCS

Coach Patterson's Shamrocks got off to a good start in basketball by nipping the Belmond Broncos 23 to 18 at Belmond Friday evening.

The game was rather ragged as it was the first game for both the teams this fall

The Shamrocks had plenty of shots but failed to ring up many counters in the first half, but managed to push out ahead 14 to 11 at the half time mark.

Jacobs led the Shamrocks attack with five buckets and two charity tosses for 12 points, while Nelson of Belmond found the loop five times for ten points to lead his five

Potatoes, Teamed With Eggs, Are a Delicious Meat-Saver
(See Recipes Below)

Meat Savers

Voluntary meat rationing is already in process. This period before the actual rationing starts—and limits—each person to 2½ pounds of meat a week is the time for every Mrs. America to take stock and plan for the days ahead—days when she neatly tucks her meat ration book beside her sugar ration books and goes to market.

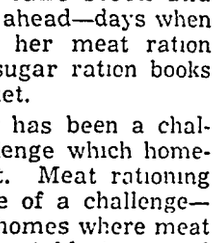
Sugar rationing has been a challenge, but a challenge which homemakers have met. Meat rationing will be even more of a challenge—for many are the homes where meat has been set on the table twice and even three times a day. But this challenge, too, will be met, for there are many ways of tiding over the day when meat supplies will be ic

Let's first look at the situation from the nutritional standpoint, for good health and well-being is a first goal. Meat is primarily preferred because it is what is known as a complete protein—containing all different types of proteins that the body needs for building and repairing down-and-out tissues.

The sources for protein you'll tap first are fish and fowl, cheese and milk. We have excellent supplies of all these so there will be no excuse for missing out on your quota.

Meat is excellent for its minerals, but the meat-savers mentioned above are also famous for their minerals—calcium, phosphorus and iron.

Now, let's get down to the business of serving these foods appetizingly and attractively. Fall is the season for many kinds of fish—and your butcher will help you out on what's a real bargain. Canned fish is now somewhat scarce, but fresh-frozen fillets are easy-to-use items, minus the cooking odor which many find objectionable. Try this idea:



Fillets in Tomato Sauce.
(Serves 6 to 8)

- 2 pounds fish fillets (halibut, perch, pike, whitefish, salmon)
- 2 cups tomato pulp
- 1 cup water
- 6 whole cloves
- 2 bay leaves
- 6 peppercorns
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar

Place fish on a greased baking sheet and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Bake or broil 15 to 20 minutes in a hot (425-degree) oven until fillets are cooked and delicately browned. Make sauce by boiling pulp with spices for 20 minutes or until thickened and well blended. Add salt and sugar. Mix and strain. Pour over fish and let stand in oven 5 to 7 minutes with sauce before serving.

Baked shrimps in a rich dressing are a boon to any menu and pick-up for any appetite.

Baked Shrimp Salad.
(Serves 6)

- 1½ pounds fresh cooked or canned shrimps
- 1 cup finely diced celery
- ¼ cup chopped green pepper
- 1½ tablespoons chopped pimiento
- Salt and pepper
- ¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- Buttered bread crumbs

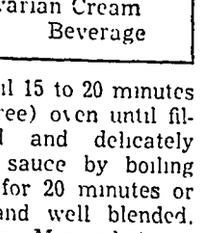
Toss together all ingredients, lightly so as not to break shrimps. Place in buttered shells or individual casserole dishes. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until the crumbs are browned. Garnish with lemon curls and serve immediately.

Cheese will be a blessing for many of the days on which you find yourself short and slim on meats. It's easy to cook if you do just two things: cook it slowly and cook it over indirect heat. There are no strings attached to cheese cooked this way:



Cheese-Macaroni Loaf.
(Serves 6)

- 3 egg yolks
- 3 egg whites
- 1 cup grated American cheese
- 1 cup milk
- 1 cup soft bread crumbs
- ½ cup macaroni, broken
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1 teaspoon minced onion
- ⅓ cup pimiento, minced
- Salt and pepper

Cook macaroni in boiling, salted water about 15 minutes or until tender. Rinse in cold water. Cook onion in butter. Beat yolks, fold in all remaining ingredients, and last mix in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 30 to 35 minutes.

Eggs snuggling in the flaky white folds of the baked potato are a smart suppertime item—and an excellent meat stretcher. This is the way to do it:

Idaho Suzettes.
(Serves 6)

- 6 medium-sized Idaho potatoes
- ½ cup hot milk
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 6 tablespoons buttered crumbs
- Salt and pepper
- 1 tablespoon grated cheese
- 6 eggs

Select medium-sized potatoes, scrub and bake at 450 degrees. When done, remove a piece of skin from side of each potato to make it boat-shaped. Scoop out carefully and mash potato thoroughly. Add butter, salt, pepper and hot milk and mix thoroughly. Pile mixture lightly back into shells, refilling almost to top. Break an egg into each nest of potatoes, season, and sprinkle with buttered crumbs mixed with cheese. Bake in a slow (250-300-degree) oven until egg is set and lightly browned. This takes about six minutes.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: The question is being asked these days as to how much meat will actually be allowed per person in the civilian Share-the-Meat program. The answer is 2½ pounds, which means meat as it is passed over the counter to you by the butcher—including meat, bone, gristle and fat.

Meats with little waste include the highly nutritious cuts like liver, heart, kidneys, sweetbreads and brains. Canned meat, sausage, scrapple, souse and similar products will not be subject to restrictions.

Fall fruit specials still include apples, grapes, pears, and delightful persimmons — good for canning or for puddings. Cranberries are brightening counters and menus.

Squash, pumpkin and sweet potatoes are holding their own, and here and there peek spinach, broccoli and brussels sprouts.

With less foods to choose, the smart homemaker will season to the best of her ability those she has. There is mustard grown here in our own country, and paprika, too. Cayenne from Louisiana, and chili, American grown, are earning a fine place on the cook's spice shelf.

RESTAURANT SCENE

Waiter—You wanna order now or after you make up your mind what I can't get you?

Customer—I'll look over the menu first.

Waiter—Don't hurry, we probably haven't got it anyhow.

Customer—There's as many things on the menu as ever.

Waiter—That's just to hold your interest.

* * *

Customer—How is your porterhouse steak?

Waiter—Pretty good, how is yours?

Customer—Listen, could you pick me out a good one?

Waiter—Extra thick?

Customer—Yes.

Waiter—Nice and juicy?

Customer—That's it.

Waiter—Very tender, with lots of gravy?

Customer—Exactly.

Waiter—You want it medium well done, with no bone?

Customer—That's the idea, garcon.

Waiter—We're all out of it!

Customer—But why lead me on like that?

Waiter—I have to consider your morale.

* * *

Customer—Well, lemme see . . . you used to serve a fine English mutton chop here.

Waiter—I recall it, too. You wouldn't care for some boiled cod, would you?

Customer—I guess you can bring me a couple of regular lamb chops and please stop laughing.

Waiter—Those were the good old days, weren't they?

Customer—What were the good old days?

Waiter—Away back when you could order chops in a restaurant without having anybody laugh at you.

Customer—This is most annoying. Haven't you any chops here?

Waiter—If we had any chops we would call in a pianist and write a song about them. Today's special might interest you. It is broiled mackerel.

Customer—I don't like fish.

Waiter—You WILL!

* * *

Customer—Ah, I see what I want. Roast beef!

Waiter—Would you mind repeating that?

Customer—You heard me.

Waiter—Yes, but it brings back such lovely memories. Say it again, please.

Customer—Very well. roast beef.

Waiter—Thanks, now we can go on with your order. How would you like some filet of sole, an egg dish or maybe some chicken?

Customer—I'm ordering this dinner!

Waiter—You're not ordering; you're just hoping. I could bring you some very nice haddock.

Customer—I've a good mind to leave here and go to another restaurant.

Waiter—If you expect to get any meat you may have to leave here and go to another country. I'm getting tired of you. I'll give you five minutes to accept fish or chicken.

Customer—Now look here . .

Waiter—Listen, how will you have it, boiled or broiled?

Customer—Have what?

Waiter—The swordfish.

Customer—I give in. War is war.

Waiter—Good. And if we're out of swordfish you'll get chicken a la king.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:15-17, Acts 1:8; 2:42; 6:1-4; 11:27-30; 13:1-3; I John 1:3.
GOLDEN TEXT—As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.—John 20:21.

The church is the greatest institution in all the world, with the most widespread membership and influence. That is true from a purely secular or worldly standpoint. Then when we realize that here is more than a human organization, for it is in fact a divine organism, that it is the means through which God is now manifesting this power toward men, we see the supreme importance of understanding the church and our relationship to it.

This week we stress the mission of the church. We note seven things.

I. Holiness of Life (Matt. 18:15-17).

In a time when general standards of decency and honesty are low, and no one wants to be his brother's keeper, the church needs to be reminded that part of its mission is to maintain holiness in life and the relationship of one to another.

Notice that man's attitude toward his fellowman is first a matter for personal attention, then it becomes of real interest to the church, and if no response is found there, the offending individual is excluded and put in the hands of God. Be sure to observe that all this is done to "gain" or win him back, not for revenge or in bitterness.

II. Witness in Divine Power (Acts 1:8).

The witness bears testimony to that which he has experienced, and in the case of Christian experience he is assured of divine power in carrying out his sacred task.

The world would have laughed (and possibly did) at the idea of a small group of humble believers making the gospel effective simply by telling others about the Saviour—but it worked, because God's power was in it.

III. Unity in Faith and Practice (Acts 2:42).

The early church had not yet been split up by the philosophies of men and the vagaries of doctrine, which have since divided God's people. It was His purpose that His people should be one in Him, something we should recall before we divide them just to promote some theory of interpretation.

Unity is not only a matter of belief, it must reach into the practice of daily life. They were steadfast not only in doctrine, but in communion and prayer. A bit more unity there might bring us closer together in belief.

IV. Service, Spiritual and Social (Acts 6:1-4).

The church rightly put the emphasis on the spiritual. The leaders who had gifts for ministry of the Word did not permit themselves to be diverted into social service. Too many in the church have failed at that point. Even the good may be the mortal enemy of the best.

At the same time the early church did not neglect social needs. Men were appointed to care for them. In all too many instances the modern church has failed to minister to the social needs even of its own people and has weakly (and one fears gladly) turned them over to social agencies. What a pity!

V. Love—in Deed as Well as in Word (Acts 11:27-30).

Talking about the need of others, wishing them God's blessing, saying a desultory prayer asking God to bless and help them, is not sufficient, in fact it is not Christian at all (see James 2:14-17).

Love acts. It gives. It serves. It proves faith by works. It translates the gospel into a language an unbelieving world can understand.

VI. Obedience to the Holy Spirit (Acts 13:1-3).

God has certain plans for the work of the church in the world, and be sure that they are no small or indifferent plans. His mighty agent in bringing His will to pass in the world is the third person of the Trinity, the Holy Spirit. If the church will respond to His guidance and be subject to His control, the work of God may go on unhindered. But just there, Christian friends, the church has most ingloriously failed.

The early church was directed of the Holy Spirit to set apart Paul and Barnabas for the work of missionaries and evangelists. Knowing as we do the marvelous results of their ministry, we shudder at the thought of what might have happened if the church had disobeyed the Holy Spirit that day!

VII. Fellowship (I John 1:3).

Here is the great secret of spiritual life and growth—Christian fellowship. And notice with care the place for it is in the church. If we do not come to the church we deprive ourselves and others of the opportunity for fellowship. The matter of church attendance (and twice on Sunday is not too much) needs to be put on our consciences lest we by our absence bear an anti-church testimony before our neighbors. But even more important is our own need of fellowship with God's people.

Treat Constipation This Gentler Way!

Many folks say that almost as bad as constipation are harsh cathartics and purges. That's because many medicinal laxatives work this way: they irritate or prod the intestines into action or draw moisture into them from other parts of the body.

Now comes news of a gentler and pleasanter way of treating constipation, for the millions of people with normal intestines whose trouble is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. This way is by eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, a crisp, delicious cereal, and drinking plenty of water. ALL-BRAN, unlike many medicinal laxatives, acts principally on the contents of the colon and helps you to have easy, normal elimination. ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, better see your doctor.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

More About Gas Rationing

GAS RATIONING EXPLAINED BY COUNTY BOARD

An explanation of how gas rationing is to be conducted· It seems there is a lot of confusion about rationing gasoline It is the intention of your Board to treat everyone fair according to their needs. It does not necessarily mean that if a person has a B or C sticker on his windshield that they are getting the full amount that you would think Your B book is tailored down to that amount and so with those that have to have more than a B book

It all sums up to the amount of miles that you actually need to carry on your business plus 90 miles per month for other driving, such as going to church, visiting, etc

We are all in this war and will all be asked to do our fair share to help win Your Board is doing its best to get this P'rogram working and take care of your needs as fast as possible The Township Boards, only, has jurisdiction over rationing of extra gas for automobiles.

Apply at the County Rationing Office for all Non-Highway gas, such as tractors, engines, cooking, etc. Please do not apply to Township Boards for anything but Supplemental gas rations.

The Klemme Shamrocks tucked away two more victories here Tuesday night when they defeated Ventura 46 to 13 in a non-conference game in which the first string saw most action.

In the second encounter in a conference game with Goodell the Little Shamrocks set the visitors back 19 to 8.

The Shamrocks go to Garner on Friday evening, Dec 4 to meet the Cardinals in a non-conference tilt.

ITS REAL WINTER WEATHER HERE IN NORTH IOWA

North Iowa had plenty of snow for Thanksgiving this year when the ground was covered with about six inches of snow.

Winter was on its way last Wednesday when snow began to fall and whipped into a new blizzard by early evening, but the weather cleared during the night and the holiday was fair but cold. Roads, however, were icy.

Since then Iowa has had more snow and colder weather. Sunday morning the thermometer registered zero at seven o'clock.

North Iowa has had an exceptionally nice fall and farmers were able to harvest crops and do a lot of fall plowing.

It looks like Iowa will again have a "white Christmas."

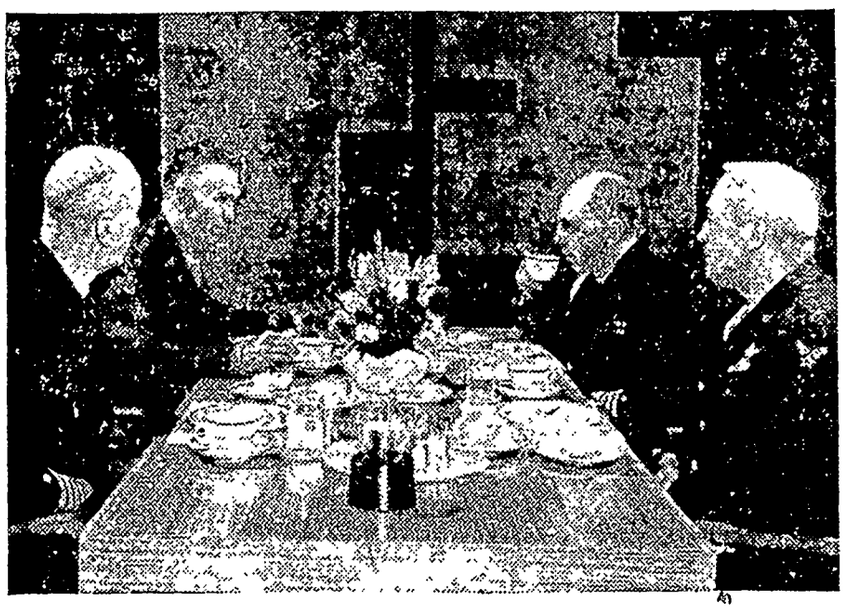
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. Troops Fighting Nazis in Tunisia As British Push West Through Libya Close Strong Pincers on Axis Forces; Ceiling Is Lifted on U. S. Farm Wages

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



Pictured at their weekly joint luncheon in Washington, U. S. chiefs of staff plan future strategy. Left to right: Admiral E. J. King, commander in chief of the U. S. fleet and chief of naval operations; Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, U. S. army; Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff to the commander in chief of the army and navy, and Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding general, U. S. army air forces.

TUNISIA:
Kick for Rommel

American soldiers battled against German troops in their first regular engagement of World War II when the British first army and a smaller United States force clashed with Axis troops defending the naval base of Bizerte in Tunisia.

While United States Rangers participated in the raid on Dieppe this was the first time that a strong force of United States soldiers and the Germans faced each other in battle.

When the Morocco radio—controlled by the Allies—announced that contact had been established between the Allied force and the Germans the broadcast was confirmed by German wireless The Morocco radio estimated at the time of the broadcast the Axis had landed 10,000 German and Italian troops in Tunisia, and said enemy forces were reported arriving in transport planes and by sea.

Early reports gave no indication of the size of the American force. However, Lieut. Gen. K. A. N. Anderson, British commander of the combined operation in Tunisia, said that it made up one-tenth of his striking force and included special units. The British nine-tenths consisted of veteran soldiers, superbly trained, who have met the Germans in previous engagements.

Lieut. Gen. Dwight E. Eisenhower announced that the drive in Tunisia was "advancing as fast as possible according to plan."

Several French garrisons were battling incoming Axis troops, concentrating on transports and shooting soldiers as they came to earth. However, the opposition from the poorly equipped French was considered more as a harassment than a serious hindrance, but was given a warm welcome by the Americans and British.

Eisenhower reported that the Mediterranean waters were "swarming with enemy submarines" detailed by the Axis to disrupt Allied landings of reinforcements and war stores. In London Prime Minister Churchill announced that Allied countermeasures had resulted in sinking 13 enemy subs in North African waters, five of them in two days.

MAXIMUM PRICES:
Amended Regulations

Office of Price Administration officials have announced amendments to the regulations covering certain essential food products such as butter, eggs and fruits.

Under this OPA policy food prepared and sold on the premises is excluded from the maximum price control. Sales by a farmers' cooperative are covered, but sales by a farmer of the products on his farm are not included, unless made to an ultimate consumer.

War procurement agencies can buy any of the products at higher than established prices. Sales deliveries to the U. S. or United Nations in some cases are exempt.

Meanwhile, after a four-week enforcement drive throughout the country, more than 4,000 grocers were served with OPA license warnings. These charge violation of the general maximum price regulation.

NEW GUINEA:
Trap Closes

Word of ever-increasing action on New Guinea came from General MacArthur's headquarters where it was announced that American and Australian ground troops, converging on the Jap invasion base at Buna, had joined forces for the attack.

Continuous air attacks supported the steady advance in New Guinea, an official communique said. The Allied forces had been closing on Buna, only Jap base in southeastern New Guinea, ever since American troops were landed by air late in October.

Australian troops have pushed down the north slope of the Owen Stanley mountain range to near Buna from the west. The Americans approached up from the south. "The enemy, under command of Lieut. Gen. Tomatore Horii, now faces the Allies to the west and south, with the jungle and the sea at his back. Our air force is attacking without respite," the communique said.

GUADALCANAL:
Touch and Go

While American and Japanese warships hammered at each other in a gigantic Solomon Island battle, Australian Navy Minister Makin warned his people that the outcome of the naval engagement will determine Japan's plan for the invasion of Australia.

A navy communique from Washington said that the fight which raged on the sea, in the skies and on Guadalcanal resulted from "a determined effort on the part of the Japanese to recapture positions in the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area" which U. S. marines had captured last August.

Navy Minister Makin warned that there should be no undue optimism or complacency over Allied successes in Africa and New Guinea. "The Solomons," he added, "are the screen between the enemy and Australia, and if the Japanese should break through the Allied naval cordon they certainly will attack Australia."

FARM WAGES:
Ceiling Lifted

It was announced by the Office of Economic Stabilization that for the time being the ceiling on agricultural wages has been lifted. According to OES Director Byrnes, this plan will be in effect until the department of agriculture can determine two things:

(1) What effect farm wages have on farm production in the more critical farm labor shortage areas; and

(2) Where increases in farm wages may threaten to cause an increase in the price ceilings on farm products.

1942 Production

Meanwhile the department of agriculture was estimating the 1942 production of principal farm crops and comparing them with last year. This is the way these figures looked:

	1942 Production	1941 Production
Corn	3,185,141,000 bu.	2,672,541,000 bu.
Wheat	984,046,000 bu.	945,937,000 bu.
Cotton	13,329,000 bales	10,800,000 bales

HIGHLIGHTS . . in the week's news

PACT: Looking forward to better commercial relations after the war, China and Cuba have signed an alliance and friendship treaty.

FOUND: Missing for three weeks on an air-flight inspection trip of Pacific bases for the army, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, World War ace, and members of his plane's crew were rescued.

CASUALTIES: Australian casualties in the British offensive against the Axis in Egypt were set at about 2,000 (mostly wounded), according to a Melbourne source.

LEND-LEASE:
Still Up

Even while the United States was undergoing the huge task of preparing for the North African invasion our allies were getting even more lend-lease aid than before. This fact was revealed by President Roosevelt when he announced that amount of goods and services furnished the other United Nations last month increased one-third over any previous month. A record-breaking $915,000,000 worth of lend-lease was chalked up in that period.

This, the President indicated, should convince all that the Axis was wrong in assuming that our aid to the United Nations would decrease once we began a strong offensive action. Also, said the President, our lend-lease aid will not decrease in the future. Production schedules are aimed at supplying both the needs of military forces and many of the needs of the United Nations.

Among items which did not show up in the cold figures of the report was news that before the U. S. aircraft carrier Wasp was sunk, that ship had carried two priceless loads of British Spitfire fighting planes to Malta and that American engineers and soldiers are expanding the capacity of railroads taking supplies into Russia.

The President pointed out that two-thirds of the goods were military items, including large numbers of planes and tanks that helped turn the tide in Egypt and to hold the lines in Russia.

DARLAN:
Legal Authority?

The status of the French fleet at Toulon appeared unchanged as the Vichy radio reported that a large number of French troops had arrived to occupy the city.

Although Adm. De La Borde, commander of the Toulon naval squadron, renewed his pledge of allegiance to Marshal Petain, crews were reported unable to leave their ships, indicating Axis mistrust of the sailors. A Nazi broadcast said that "all strategically important points on the Mediterranean coast of southern France are now protected by German and Italian arms."

Adm. Jean Darlan and the Vichy government continued their bickering over which is the legitimate authority in French North Africa. Darlan, over the Morocco radio, proclaimed that his authority is legal because it came from Marshal Petain himself. He pointed out that whatever the marshal might say now should not be heeded "because he (Petain) is unable to let the French people know his real thoughts.

ADMIRAL DARLAN

Darlan, in one of his first demonstrations of power, appointed Gen. Henry Giraud commander in chief of French forces in the region. Vichy radio replied with an order attributed to Petain "prohibiting" French colonial troops from obeying Giraud. Also it was stated that Giraud "broke his officer's word and thus lost his honor. He received his self conferred title of commander from a foreign power."

London dispatches said that the appointment of Darlan was unpopular there because he worked to assist the enemies of Britain and America since the fall of France. Hope was expressed in some quarters that Darlan's assignment was only temporary.

DOUBLE FEATURES:
Dim Out?

Meeting in New York city, the motion picture National Board of Review passed a resolution recommending theater owners suspend double features for the duration "as a saving of time, critical materials and manpower needed for winning the war."

Previously, Lowell Mellett, chief of the Office of War Information Bureau of Motion Pictures, had appeared before the board asking for the elimination of double features.

"The habit of sitting three or four or even more hours, with one's mind afloat in a fictional world, hardly equips the American population for the serious job of dealing with real life. That way lies degeneration rather than growth. And we must grow. We must grow into a people competent to win this war," he said.

Mellett also said that his bureau is trying to help the American public see what the war means to them. This is done through and with the co-operation of newsreel editors and with Hollywood producers of features and shorts.

BRAZIL AND U. S. OFFENSIVE

Though the landings on North Africa were a carefully guarded military secret between high British and American officials, one other country let in on the secret was Brazil.

In fact, Brazil, through Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha did some important spade work for the United States in regard to vital Atlantic islands, the Azores and Madeiras. These lie along the route of the American supply line to North Africa, the Madeiras close to the African coast.

Therefore, it was considered possible that the Germans might attempt to use these islands as submarine or even air bases, or that the United States in turn might need the islands for emergency bases.

Both island groups are Portuguese. So, long ago, Brazil, which looks to Portugal as its mother country, made informal diplomatic soundings to make sure that these islands would line up with the United Nations in case of emergency.

SOLOMONS vs. AFRICA

One thing that got under the skin of high U. S. army officials during the weeks just before the North African landings was the navy's policy regarding the battle of the Solomon Islands.

Though all the details had not been worked out, it had been definitely agreed with Churchill and the Russians to start some kind of second front operation this summer. However, the navy also claimed that it could start the Solomon Islands campaign simultaneously without taking any ships out of the Atlantic or disturbing the Second Front preparations. The admirals promised the war department that the number of ships used in the Solomons would be very small indeed.

But before the Solomons operations had lasted many weeks, the navy had used several times as many ships as it expected—some of them sent to the bottom of the Pacific. Ships were taken off the supply lines to Russia, despite definite promises made to Russia. Ships were also taken off the supply lines to England to such an extent that supplies to England dwindled to a driblet.

LESSON FROM ALEUTIANS

Inside the navy it is pointed out that one of the best jobs Admiral Nimitz ever did was to let the Japs get into the tip end of the Aleutian islands. This proved to be a beautiful decoy, like flies to molasses. The Aleutians were too exposed for the Japs to defend safely, too near our bases.

As a result, the Japs lost 10 destroyers—a big chunk out of any navy—and we are continuing to whittle them down with no loss to ourselves. U. S. bases are now so close to Kiska that U. S. planes bomb the Japs every day without fail—and bomb them so badly that recently no Jap fighter planes have been put in the air. Apparently they are all smashed.

But in the other end of the Pacific, army strategists fear that we may have got ourselves in the same position as the Japs have in the Aleutians—with our necks so far stuck out that, despite current successes, we have lost more ships than the Solomons were worth.

CHRISTMAS TRAVEL

The railroads have been negotiating with the schools and colleges to extend their Christmas holiday period so that it will begin before the usual Christmas home-going dates and extend beyond the usual returning dates. The purpose was to get rid of the school and college traffic before taking on the burden of the furlough movement of soldiers, going home for Christmas.

This longer vacation would be okay with a lot of girls and boys, but most of the schools and colleges have turned thumbs down. They said they could not change their schedules.

Result is that the American railroads will carry the greatest burden in history during the period from December 15 to January 5. The peak will come between December 20 and 24, when the railroads will have to carry:

(1) Home-going students; (2) the usual heavy civilian Christmas travel; (3) soldiers on furlough; (4) soldiers on week-end passes; (5) the normal troop movement, which will not be suspended for Christmas.

So between December 15 and January 5, civilians are asked to stay off the railroads!

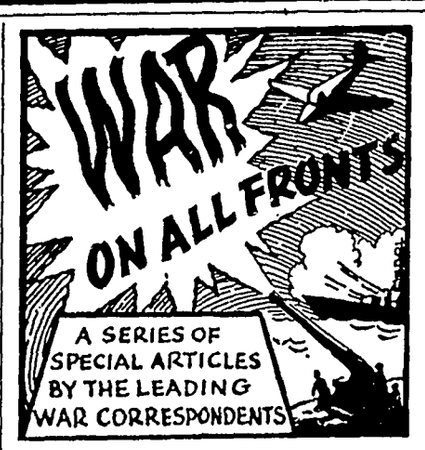
AFRICANA

¶ Frenchmen listening to Roosevelt's broadcast to the French people in the French language wondered who wrote his speech. They said it contained grammatical errors and sounded like schoolboy composition. Roosevelt's accent, however, was good.

¶ General Giraud, new French commander in North Africa, is the first Frenchman to use motorized units in cleaning up North Africa. He waged a successful campaign against the Riffs.



Chile Sitting on the Fence

By Waldo Frank

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

There are nearly 80,000 pro-Nazi Germans in Chile; 30,000 are German nationals; 50,000 are Chilean citizens of German descent who have been hypnotized, despite their democratic antecedents, by the victories of the fuehrer.

There is a drama here. To see it and Chile's importance within the Pan-American picture, we must have a sense of the Chilean people.

The Chilean is half mariner, half mountaineer. He lives in a land whose geography a famous Chilean writer has called "insane." Chile is 2,000 miles long and about 100 miles wide, shaped like an earthworm. One side of it is sea, the other ice and rock. In square miles, it is larger than France, but a bare ten per cent of its soil is cultivable, the rest being desert, mountain and poor sheep pasture. That's not the worst of it. Chile is the land of earthquakes. Every Chilean remembers "his earthquake." He may be fifty, and the frightful experience may have shaken his body when he was six, but his soul cannot forget.

Havoc of an Earthquake.

I visited Concepcion, the country's third city, where, only three years ago, a quake in 90 seconds destroyed thousands of lives and shattered hundreds of houses. The ruins are there still—the cathedral, the dwellings, the commercial structures; and on and about them Concepcion moves, disorganized and dazed, like a city bombed by an enemy which the people cannot have the satisfaction of hating.

All this has made the Chileans slow, reticent, stubborn, intellectually matter-of-fact; a people of depth and will, rather than surface sensibility and color; a long-suffering folk whose noble music is almost buried in their hearts, as different from their charming and brilliant neighbors across the Andes as their rocky land is different from the Pampa.

Chile Advanced Politically.

Politically, Chile is the most advanced nation of South America. Its industrial workers are all unionized, every Chilean belongs to a political party, and the elections are honest. The two largest parties are the Radicals (corresponding to the Liberals in this country) and the Conservatives (like our die-hard Republicans). Socialists and Communists are highly respected, important minorities with representatives in the ministry and congress. Yet this sturdy, conscious folk (with the exception of Uruguay, the most homogeneous in all South America) remains economically poor and exploited.

So hard has been the life of the Chilean worker, so hard the soil, so uncertain even the survival of his house when his earth quakes, that when he gets a bit of money, he doesn't — like the American — buy goods; he buys rest. Poor food, ragged clothes, a hovel of a house, he has got used to. What he wants is a week off, with plenty of wine to remove him from his troubles. The average labor-year of the fully employed, skilled Chilean industrial worker is 39 weeks.

The people are democratic from top to bottom. An example: The new minister of health, Dr. Miguel Etchebarne, still works as a subordinate of Dr. Orrego who, officially, is under him. At 8 a. m., the minister takes orders from Orrego in the State hospital; at 11 a. m., in his ministry, he gives orders to Orrego.

Another instance is the Church. Everywhere, there are good Catholic Democrats. In Chile alone, as far as I know, there is an organized Catholic Democratic party which works with Radicals, Socialists and Communists against the Fascist danger. Schnake, the minister of labor, is of this party.

Not far from Valdivia, heart of German Chile, in the village of San Jose de la Mariquina, lives the noblest of the country's anti-Nazis, a bishop and a full-blooded German! I went to see Guido Benedict Beck de Ramberga, Capuchin bishop. He told me of his fight against his fellow Germans and Chileans of German descent, who send him threatening letters.

The Nazis have one great virtue: They know their enemies and fight them. The Gestapo in Germany warned him of reprisals if he did not stop publishing his anti-Fascist literature. The magazines and pamphlets kept on flowing from the bishop's print shop.

This brings me back to the Nazi embassy in Chile. A few weeks ago, Minister of the Interior Morales made a speech forecasting an early break with the Axis. The Axis embassies got busy on the cables, and Morales cracked down, refusing to pass their messages.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

In the modern automobile there are 32.5 pounds of rubber in addition to that used in tires and tubes.

Last summer's national scrap rubber drive brought out 6.87 pounds per capita. Even this gratifying amount represented only a scraping of the surface of the scrap littering the backyards, cellars and attics of the country.

There are some 3,065,000 miles of roads in the United States of which 40% are of the surfaced highway type. More improved roads than any other country in the world.

There are more than 10 motor vehicles for each mile of highway in the United States. Pre-gas rationing Sundays made this ratio seem like 10 cars to each 100 feet of road.

In 1940 it was estimated that the market value of passenger cars in the U.S. was $7,209,000,000; trucks had a value of $1,165,000,000.

STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

HARD up for leading men as more and more of the famous stand-bys go into the army, Hollywood is busily recruiting newcomers to the screen, and hoping that you'll like them. Columbia will introduce the public to Robert Hymes, formerly a singer with Freddy Martin's orchestra, in "What's Buzzin', Cousin?" with Ann Miller, Phil Harris and his orchestra, and Rochester. Metro's signed James Davis, a Kansas City oil salesman; he has a supporting role in "Salute to the Marines," and the male lead in "Swing Shift Maizie."

Meanwhile Franchot Tone's agent has said: "When Franchot wants to work for nothing he'll work for the government." Tone had agreed orally to make one picture for Warners for $60,000, but the wage ceiling forbids him to make more this year than he did last. Last year he was idle several months because of illness; he's already earned almost as much this year as he did last. He'd be able to keep just $20,000 of that Warner money, and would have to work the rest of the year for nothing. "Old Acquaintance" was the picture involved.

Georgia Gibbs recently signed a 13 week contract as the new singing star on the CBS Caravan Hour, but she was more thrilled when Producer Bill Bacher gave her a chance to act. She'd never spoken lines on any stage before. So she was practically breathless when the big moment came: Lanny Ross asked: "Do you conga, Miss Gibbs?" and Georgia replied: "Of course I conga, Mr. Ross." Momentous!

Myrna Loy doesn't care about making more pictures, since her recent marriage, so she's been turning down all assignments, and Metro has engaged a new wife for William Powell for the new "Thin Man" picture—Irene Dunne.

—*—

Beatrice Kay, who sings those ballads of the past on the air's "Gay Nineties" show, has yielded to the call of Hollywood, and will make a picture laid in old New Orleans early next year. So all the people who've thought she was an old lady—and a lot of radio listeners do, because of the songs she sings—are going to find out that she's both young and pretty.

—*—

Leslie Brooks has been studying jiujitsu to such good effect that she's been asked to tone it down. Told to put up a good fight in a scene with Linda Darnell, Doris Dudley and Glenda Farrell in Columbia's "City Without Men," she tossed 'em around like bean bags!

Charles Boyer has five leading ladies in "The Constant Nymph"; in the order that they hold in his affections on the screen they are Joan Fontaine, Alexis Smith, Brenda Marshall, Jean Muir and Joyce Reynolds.

At the request of the council of chiefs of the Navajo reservation, Harry Carey will film a series of shorts dealing with the history and traditions of the tribe. He speaks Navajo, and is one of our best authorities on the tribe.

Jane Wyatt, whom you'll see in "The Navy Comes Through," has sold 5,000 feet of 16 mm. color film on birds to RKO; they'll release it as a two-reel short. Ornithology has been her hobby for years. The film shows the life and habits of virtually all western birds, including sea gulls and eagles; the color pictures she's sold were several years in production.

Geography Makes Modern History in Huge Mediterranean Theater of War

(Specially prepared for Western Newspaper Union by the National Geographic Society.)

OF THE many regions that stretch behind the world's shifting battle lines, none is more fantastic than those of the Eastern Mediterranean and the Near East (the "Middle East" in British geography). In size alone this theater of war, and preparations for war, is spectacular. It covers a broad band of land and sea that extends from somewhere in the vicinity of bomb-shaken Malta to the shores of the Black and Caspian seas.

Within this general area, four significant campaigns already have been fought with varying degrees of intensity and bloodshed: The battles for Greece, Libya, Syria and Iraq—plus a fifth struggle near by for East Africa, which resulted in the return of the Ethiopian King of Kings to his ancient throne.

Today, the east Mediterranean and the adjacent land-bridge of nations, which links the continents of Europe, Africa, and Asia, form a gigantic chessboard, made up of independent and occupied countries, of opposing colonies and island bases. It includes Axis-occupied Greece and Libya, British-held Egypt; technically at peace while bombs fall on her cities and battles rage in her deserts, and uneasy, neutral Turkey. It holds the all-important approaches to the Egyptian and Russian fronts by way of the Red sea and the Persian gulf, through Iran and Iraq, across the Levant States (Syria), Trans-Jordan and Palestine.

The mere list of place names on the routes of men and materials bound for the battle lines indicates the international complications and physical difficulties. To these far-flung regions, the war has brought innumerable problems for technicians and diplomats—and ceaseless activity. New motor roads appear and airports spring up in desert wastes. New harbor facilities are built in old ports, toward which convoys of troopships, oil tankers, freighters and vessels of all kinds, race under the constant threat of the enemy in the air.

Key Points Manned.

At key points throughout the eastern Mediterranean and beyond, the armies of fighting men and machines have gathered. Axis forces may operate from Italian Taranto, Greek Piraeus, Libyan Tobruch; from the German-captured island of Crete; and Italy's Pantelleria and Dodecanese islands.

On their side, the United Nations stand at such vital spots as Suez and the Nile delta, in the Egyptian deserts and on the island of Cyprus, at Syrian and Palestine ports and inland oil fields of Iran and Iraq.

On a map you can see at a glance how geography dictates the war's movements. You understand why the British base of Malta, athwart the Axis life line to Libya and the Egyptian front—and less than 60 miles from Italian Sicily—is the most bombed spot on earth: How the oil pipe lines from the Caspian fuel the Russian fleet on the Black sea: How variations in the earth's surface, from the sunburnt Qattara Depression of Egypt to the eternally snow-capped mountains of the Soviet Caucasus, determine the methods and tools of warfare.

No man may wear his street shoes into a Mosque, the Mohammedan house of worship. Since Moslems (or Mohammedans) dominate the theater of war in North Africa, scenes like this are customary.

The Mediterranean and Near East areas, however, are extraordinary for more reasons than contrasting battlegrounds and governments. There, where East meets West, today's machine-age conflict is being played out against a background as old as the recorded history of man.

Where New Meets Old.

Multi-motored bombers fly over the traditional Garden of Eden, now largely desert, and over the City of Babylon, seat of empires that rose and waned thousands of years before Christ. Flying boats land on the Sea of Galilee, and tanks rumble along routes that once were caravan trails such as the Three Wise Men followed to Bethlehem. British and American engineers set up anti-aircraft positions, and plan underground storage tanks for gasoline and water for their winged forces near ancient routes followed by the Children of Israel and the foot-weary armies of Alexander and the Crusaders. They install modern machinery for unloading mass war shipments in Persian Gulf ports of Arabian Nights romance, such as Sindbad the Sailor knew.

The Pyramids of Giza and the Sphinx rise within sight of busy, crowded Cairo on the Nile, British base and capital of Egypt. In the bazaars of Damascus (probably the earth's oldest inhabited city), American soldiers from Boston or St. Louis, Oregon or Florida, may bargain for candied fruits, or sit around smoking braziers where Oriental chefs fan spitted mutton with a chicken wing, or serve such clabbered milk of sheep or goat as has been a mainstay in the Levantine diet for thousands of years.

Cradle of Civilization.

This part of the world has often been called the "Cradle of Western Civilization." From the regions of the eastern Mediterranean spread the alphabet, knowledge of mathematics, medicine, politics, and philosophy; lessons in sculpture, architecture and drama. There primitive wheels turned on their bulky axles, and men learned to use sails and save their arms from the heavy pull of galley oars.

Near the Euphrates in what was Mesopotamia (now Iraq) is Ur of the Chaldees, birthplace of Abraham. For Bible students these are the Holy Lands. Land of Goshen, where the Israelites toiled; Mount Sinai of the Ten Commandments; Jerusalem, Jericho, and the River Jordan.

The world's three major religions, Judaism, Christianity and Mohammedanism, were born in this corner of the globe. In Jerusalem are found three shrines, sacred to the adherents of these faiths—the Wailing Wall, where reverent Jews come to pray and lament, the Christian Church of the Holy Sepulchre, and the Moslem Mosque of Omar. Legendary site where Jesus was buried, the Church of the Holy Sepulchre is shared by most of the world's Christian religions, including the Greek Orthodox, Roman Catholic, Armenian, Jacobite, and Coptic.

And Now—

And now, what? Fast action and stirring deeds on the African front have replaced the earlier talk about that continent's possible strategic importance. But the prophets, aware that anything can happen (and often does), are maintaining a Sphinx-like silence. Here an Indian soldier is shown chatting with an Egyptian.

Moslem World in Allied Sphere.

The eastern-Mediterranean and Near-East areas within the wartime sphere of the United Nations are, however, predominantly Moslem countries. There is found the world's heaviest concentration of the followers of Mohammed, whose ways may seem strange to many a British Tommy and Anzac, many an American Doughboy, engineer, or technician meeting them for the first time.

The Moslem disciple lives according to dogmatic religious rules, including prayer, fasting, and the holy pilgrimage, especially to Mecca. Pork and wine are strictly forbidden. During Ramadam, the sacred ninth month of the Moslem calendar, good Mohammedans observe a rigid fast between dawn and dark, when they neither eat nor drink, or engage in any activity that might come under the head of pleasure or comfort, from smoking to smelling perfume or flowers.

From Egypt to Iran, this is Arab country, where the flapping burnoose, the mosque, and the "ship of the desert"—the camel—are still typical features of the scenery. Yet, more and more, long before the outbreak of the war, the "Changeless East," was changing fast under the impact of Westernized industry and Western habits.

Radios, electricity, movies and air-cooled cafes were becoming familiar in the cities of the Near East, along with modernistic apartment houses, smart shops and night clubs. On the streets, girls in modern dress, with bobbed hair and high heels—and the vote—were replacing the oldtime shrouded, veiled woman. Across the desert, fleets of motor buses streaked, regular peacetime airplane service was maintained; and on new railway lines, trains drawn by oil-burning locomotives were equipped with Pullman sleepers.

Old Meets New on the African Front

This picture tells its own story! The camel (sometimes humorously called the "ship of the desert") is valuable in desert warfare. But for combat and for swift maneuvers the airplane is still indispensable.

Moslems—Spiritual Rulers of North Africa

Founded by Mohammed, the faith which bears his name dates its era from the year 622, when Mohammed and his disciples were driven from Mecca to Medina by Arabs who supported the traditional form of idolatry, against which Mohammed preached. Later, however, Mohammed's power increased sufficiently to enable him and his followers to retake Mecca two years before his death in 632. Mecca has remained the capital of the Moslem world.

The Moslem religion has no sacraments and neither altars nor images. The mosques, the Moslem houses of worship, contain a pulpit and a reading desk, but no chairs. A niche indicates the direction of Mecca, toward which a Mohammedan must turn when he prays. The mosques are always open and are used as general meeting places. They even serve as quarters for travelers and as schoolrooms for the local teachers.

POPPER EXPLAINS INFLATION

"Popper, can you explain inflation so I can understand it?"

"Don't bother me now, son, I'm too busy."

"How long will you be busy, popper?"

"I'll always be too busy when anybody wants me to explain inflation."

(Voice from Mother—"Aw, go on and help Junior out! He's got to write a school essay.")

* * *

"Well, ahem, sonny, it's like this, ahem . . . inflation means a condition under which the dollar will be worth less.

"But it will still be a dollar, won't it?"

"Yes. A dollar bill will still be a dollar bill, but it won't be the dollar that we used to know. What I mean is that while a dollar may still be a dollar, strictly speaking, its value as a dollar will not be the same value as it would have been if there had been no change in values . . . ahem . . . Is that quite clear to you?"

"No. Is it to you?"

"No. Let's try it a different way. Let us take meat for example. Take a $100 bill. Now let us assume that this $100 will buy a stack of steaks piled up 45 feet in the air. Got that?"

"Forty-five dollars will buy 100 steaks piled up how high, popper?"

"No. Now, take your time. We've got our steaks piled up 45 feet. And right now we can buy them for the $100 bill."

"What hundred dollar bill, popper?"

"Shush! Now, then, comes inflation . . . What happens?"

"That's what I'm asking, popper?"

* * *

"Well, we suddenly look around and find that while the steak pile is still 45 feet high the $100 bill has shrunk down to $32 79."

"Huh?"

"No, that's wrong. Let's make it easier. The $100 bill is still O. K. but the steaks have changed. In fact, the pile is now only 20 feet high. See?"

"Is that in regular steak or hamburger, popper?"

"Omigosh! Any steak. I don't even have to use steak in this story. I could use eggs or liver or even codfish cakes. I could make it just as clear if I used a suit of clothes, a new tie, a pair of shoes or a bicycle."

"Let's do it with codfish cakes and bicycles, popper."

"Why!!!"

"It'll be more fun."

(Voice from Mother—"Gee, Clinton, I don't think you're explaining it to Junior very simply.")

"Very well. Now lissen, son. Let us take house paint. Today $25 will get me enough paint to paint our garage two coats."

"We haven't any garage."

"Don't interrupt. Let's paint it, anyhow. Comes inflation, and what happens if we want to paint it a year from now? Twenty-five dollars will only buy enough to paint three sides, and only one coat. Do you see what happens?"

"Yes. We write Mr. Roosevelt and he paints the other side at government expense, popper. But what CAUSES inflation?"

"Awah-h-h!"

THE SMITHY

Beside the empty used car mart
The village smithy stands;
The smith is mighty glad of heart,
For business still expands.

The busy forge he engineers
Is, like his heart, aglow—
This man has waited fifty years
To say, "I told you so!"
—Gerald Raftery in the N. Y. Times.

He hears a motor, and its noise
Comes to him from afar;
It passes and he says, "Look, boys,
It IS a motorcar!"

Then once again his sledge he swings
And says, as well he may,
"I knew when I first saw them things
They wasn't here to stay!"

When Your Back Hurts

And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

Ode to Yuletide . . . Plum Pudding and Fruit Cake
(See Recipes Below.)

Cakes 'n' Puddin's

Home is where the heart is and Christmas is what tradition is. And that tradition is to a large extent what foods you serve. If you really want to make it a season for starry-eyed brightness and plain honest-to-goodness good cheer, have a holiday with all the food trimmings like frosted fruited cookies, dark, spicy fruit cake and a plum pudding mellowed to wonderful goodness.

Begin these preparations now—for the ingredients of Xmas cakes, puddings and cookies take on a charm—and flavor—with age. Preparations can be a snap if you budget a day for cutting up fruit and nuts, another day for mixing and baking, and a third day for packing.

First, for fruit cake—the cake with almost two dozen extra special ingredients. This year's fruit cake is tuned to the times, uses honey and molasses to save on your precious sugar ration:

Fruit Cake.
(Makes 10 pounds)

1 pound butter or other shortening
1 pound brown sugar
10 eggs, well beaten
1 cup honey
1 cup molasses
½ cup sweet cider
1 pound sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon mace
½ pound candied pineapple
½ pound candied cherries
1 pound dates, seeded and sliced
1 pound raisins
1 pound currants
½ pound citron, thinly sliced
½ pound candied lemon and orange peel
½ pound nutmeats, chopped

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and spices and sift again. Cream the shortening thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, fruits, peel, nuts, honey, molasses and cider. Add flour gradually. Bake in 4 (8 by 8 by 2 inches) pans, lined with greased paper, in slow oven (250 degrees) 3 to 3½ hours.

Plum pudding gets my vote as being highly desirable for the family feast at Christmas.

Plum Pudding.
(Makes 3 1-quart molds)

2 cups prunes, cooked
1½ cups currants
1 cup raisins
1½ cups citron, chopped
¾ cup preserved orange peel
1 cup candied cherries, chopped
1 cup nutmeats, broken
1 cup all-bran
½ cup juice, from prunes
1½ cups butter or substitute
1½ cups sugar
4 eggs, beaten
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
2 cups soft white bread crumbs
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon each, cloves, nutmeg, ginger

Cut prunes into small pieces, combine with other fruits and all-bran. Add prune juice, and mix well. Blend butter and sugar thoroughly, add eggs and flavoring. Add bread crumbs and flour sifted with spices. Blend in fruit mixture. Stir until all fruit is well distributed. Fill greased pudding molds two-thirds full, cover and steam 3½ to 4 hours.

I think the spicy lemon sauce goes well with the bland pudding. You'll like this one:

Lemon Sauce.
(Makes 1¼ cups)

1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon
1 egg yolk
1 tablespoon butter

Mix cornstarch, sugar and salt thoroughly. Add water. Heat to boiling and cook until clear and thick, stirring constantly. Add lemon juice, rind, and pour slowly over beaten egg yolks. Cook another minute and add butter.

Fig Maple Pudding.
(Serves 5)

¼ pound figs
¾ cup maple syrup
½ cup boiling water
¾ cup sifted flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1½ tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons shortening
¼ to ½ cup milk

Soften figs in cold water, cut in halves and place in greased baking dish. Mix syrup with boiling water and pour over figs. Cover dish and steam for ½ hour. Sift dry ingredients together, cut in shortening with pastry blender or knives, add milk and mix lightly. Remove baking dish from steamer. Pour batter over figs, return to steamer for 1 hour. This pudding provides its own sauce.

Ever hear of putting a raw apple or slice of one in the cookie jar—or tin—if you still have one to keep cookies fresh? You've no idea how delicious these fruity cookies will taste if you follow the above prescription. Made-with-honey cookies are much akin to fruit cakes and plum pudding in that they need to ripen and mellow:

Christmas Fruit Nuggets.

½ cup shortening
1½ cups honey
2 eggs
3 cups cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon each, cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg
½ cup milk
½ cup candied pineapple
1 cup each, candied cherries, raisins, nuts

Cream shortening, drizzle in honey and cream together. Add beaten eggs, and mix thoroughly. Sift dry ingredients together and add alternately with milk. Chop fruits, mix together and dredge with flour before folding into mixture. Drop by teaspoonfuls into greased tins or tiny paper cups. Bake in moderate (375-degree) oven for about 15 minutes.

Lynn Says:

Let's Decorate! The fruit cakes and puddings, of course! A cluster of candied cherries in the middle with leaves fashioned of artificial rose leaves makes an attractive cake.

You'll be praised for a rose garnish made of gelatin candies shaped like lemon and orange segments into thin, lengthwise slices. Roll a slice tightly to form center of rose and press other slices around it to make petals.

Simpler decorations can be made of almonds or other nutmeats forming flowers with candied peel as petals or centers.

To store cake, place it in airtight container for several weeks. Sound apples may be placed in container, and changed as they become shriveled, to provide moisture.

Lynn Chambers can tell you how to dress up your table for family dinner or festivities, give you menus for your parties or tell you how to balance your meals in accordance with nutritional standards. THE MEANING OF CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Colossians 3 1-17
GOLDEN TEXT—Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular.—I Corinthians 12 27

Church membership means a great deal; a fact which has been obscured by the prevalent idea that joining the church is just like joining any other organization. We need to be reminded again and again that the local or denominational organization has real meaning only as it represents in the world a fellowship of true believers who, by the new birth, have become part of the living and true church, which is the body of which Christ is the Head.

It is likewise essential that believers know what their membership in the church means, so that they may fully appreciate it and properly present it to the world.

I. A New Life (vv. 1-3).

The church member is (or should be) a Christian, that is, one who has passed from death to life through the regenerating work of God in Christ (John 3 6, 7). Thus he has become "a new creature; old things have passed away; behold all things are become new" (II Cor. 5 17).

This new spiritual being has entirely changed interests and desires. The things of the world which he used to love have now become distasteful to him. The things of the Spirit which used to seem strange and not understandable to him (I Cor. 2·14) now become the center of his life. Being risen with Christ in newness of life he seeks those things which are above.

II. A Changed Life (vv. 4-13).

Setting one's heart upon things above means that the life will be changed. There will be a putting off of the things of earth and a putting on of the new man, in practice as well as in creed.

Although the Christian is a new creature in Christ, he bears with him until he dies (or Jesus comes) the old nature, which tries to hold him down, to draw him back to the worldly and fleshly things from which he was saved.

But the Christian is to "make no provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof" (Rom. 13.14). He is rather to "reckon" himself "to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive into God through Jesus Christ our Lord."

This calls for an act of his will (and a repeated or continuous act) by which he puts away the sinful things mentioned in verses 5-9. One might sum them up in two groups: (1) sexual indecency and immorality (v. 5), and (2) wicked words and attitudes (vv. 8, 9). The early church had no corner on such sins. They mar Christian fellowship now. They ought not do so, for the church member should show the new life of the soul by a changed life before his fellowman.

III. A Gracious Life (vv. 14-17).

Too often, following Christ—and church membership—has not seemed attractive to the unbeliever, nor has it recommended the grace of God, because it has been a sad, unpleasant, negative thing which God never intended it to be.

To the average non-Christian (rightly or wrongly), the matter of being a Christian seems to be a rather drab affair of denying one's self the interesting and pleasant things of life. Those who feel that way have never seen the real thing, for if they had, they would sense (even though they could not understand it) that here was the fulfillment of all that is best in life.

The purpose and plan of God for man is that he should be in fellowship with Him, and thus to be set free from the limitations and the disappointments of human life apart from God. The normal life of the Christian is one of love, peace, joy, fellowship, praise and thankfulness. Let us make it just that in this world of hatred, war, sorrow, division, weeping and ingratitude.

This portion of Scripture merits a closer examination. Note first that love (use "love" for charity in v. 14) is the bond which unites these Christian graces into a whole which is harmonious and well-balanced.

Naturally, the peace of Christ will be the ruling factor in such a life, controlling the heart, the seat of man's emotions and affections.

Such a life is cultivated and developed by the indwelling of God's Word and (note it) "richly." The weakness of many a church is found right here—there is so little teaching and receiving of the Word into the heart.

Christian faith expresses itself in song. "Thou hast put gladness in my heart" (Ps. 4:7), and that means a song. How true it is that hymns and songs teach and admonish us.

The life of the Christian church member is always conditioned by one perfect controlling influence—the will of God. He does all things, even the supposedly little or secular things, in the name of the Lord Jesus, with a constant thankfulness which goes up like a sweet incense to the Father through Christ.

Wolfram Lists Blackout Rules For Monday Night, Dec. 14

FARMS AS WELL AS TOWNS AND CITIES MUST OBEY BLACKOUT RULES

Plans Completed In Klemme For Blackout Test

W. T. Wolfram, chairman of the County Civilian Defense Council, has announced the following instructions to the public for the blackout to be held Monday, Dec 14 from 10.00 to 10 30 p m He advises rural people to set their clock that day by radio time so that the blackout will be simultaneous over the entire area. The instructions are as follows:

1. Stay in your homes if possible
2. Keep your radio turned on low during the test period
3. It is better to cover your windows and leave some lights on than to extinguish all lights You may have to live under blackout conditions for several hours under an actual raid. Prepare your home so that you can cook, so that you can read, so that you can use the bathroom.
4. Do not, under and circumstances get into the streets, but if unavoidably caught on the street don't hurry, push or crowd Be calm and cool.
5. At the warning signal of the siren whistle or bell, whatever the local signal may be, all traffic must cease. Park your car parrallel to the curb and extinguish all lights at once. Remain nearby You may remain seated therein but do not smoke, light matches or flash lights or use any lights whatever You may double park when so directed by the police.
6. No smoking, lighting of matches or flashlights is permitted on sidewalks, in doorways, in alleys or any open places.
7. At the all clear signal of the siren, or bell, you may resume your activities but do not hurry Traffic will be congested and the danger of accidents caused by too much hurry will be present
8. All lights in homes, stores, public buildings, apartments, etc must be blacked out until all clear signal of the warning whistle
9. Emergency vehicles such as fire department trucks, ambulances, police cars, doctor's cars, and special emergency cars must be equipped with approved blackout devices and be authorized to travel only if such blackout devices are in operation. Special lighting, only for use during this test blackout, may be allowed by certain necessary industries which would not be allowed during a real blackout. (This is so as not to slow up necessary defense production.) In the event of a fire alarm, the fire department will proceed as usual and street lights may be turned on during their run to such fire Such emergency and official vehicles will proceed cautiously so as not to endanger persons or property
10. Merchants should have a member of their organization at their places of business to extinguish all lights and to guard such establishments. All signs and window lights must be extinguished
11. Sky lights must be effectively covered and all lights out
12. Keep off the roofs. Certain building owner have granted the use of the roofs of their buildings to military and civilian defense officials or the purpose of viewing the results but this is not to be allowed to all. Damage to the roofs and the danger of accidents during total darkness makes it impossible for the building owners to allow it
13. Do not use the telephone during the period of the blackout or for 30 minutes thereafter, except for vital necessities such as calling the fire or police departments, doctors, etc. (This is to relieve congestion in our local telephone exchange.)
12. Follow the instructions given you by the air raid wardens, police, auxiliary police, firemen and auxiliary firemen and all civilan defense officers They have been specially trained for your protection They are identified by their regular uniforms or armbands

Klemme Organization Ready

C G Waterman, Civilian Defense Chairman for Klemme completed the local organization Monday night and has a warden in each of ten sections of Klemme These men were administered the oath of office and given full police powers by Mayor W C Keraus, who received his authority from the state and national authorities to administer the oath of office to the following and the section of Klemme assigned to them 1 Walt Kimball, 2 Geo Lawhorn, 3 Harvey Hubbard, 4 Orville Bridges, 5 Martin Barz, 6 P W Johnson 7 Reuben Lemke 8 Glen Bridges, 9 Orville Stokesbary, 10 Leonard Swanson

In Klemme the street lights will be blinked four times and then the fire bell will ring to start the black out at 10.00 p. m. and the fire bell will ring the all clear signal again at 10 30 p. m.

Remember, the wardens have full police powers and their warnings must be obeyed

They will patrol their respective districts and ask that everyone cooperate so it will not be necessary for them to have to make you a personal call

Arrange your home so that no light is visible from outside. Keep off the street.

Strong Allied Forces Solidify Gains As Violent Fighting Rages in Tunisia; Russ Shatter Nazi Stalingrad Lines; Japs Lose Strongholds in New Guinea

TUNISIA:

Rising Tide

The tide of battle was rising even higher against the battered Axis forces in Africa. Veteran British soldiers, familiar with the Nazi type of warfare, inflicted heavy damage on a German armored column in Tunisia while French allies battered down two German assaults on their positions.

A communique from Allied force headquarters in North Africa announced that French patrols are operating "far to the rear of Axis advance positions" and that American Flying Fortress and pursuit planes shot down or destroyed nine German planes in a raid on the Tunis airport. Even as the advance guards were testing the enemy's strength, a continuous flow of guns and tanks made its way eastward for the decisive blow.

However, a spokesman at Allied headquarters voiced a warning that the Germans are well entrenched in the Tunisian cities of Tunis and Bizerte "with large air forces and there will be severe fighting before they are ousted." He said that Allied action around Bizerte is "growing heavier." The Allied forces had driven two strong wedges across Tunisia, reaching the the Mediterranean at two points.

Rommel's Race

Mobile armored units of the British eighth army were reported 35 miles from El Agheila, which offered Marshal Erwin Rommel's tattered Africa Corps its best chance to make a stand. But Rommel knew he would find no rest from Allied bombs.

Bad weather prevented Allied airmen from maintaining their deadly attacks on the retreating Germans.

A British military commentator pointed out that "If the Axis armies still are planning to make a fight of it, it certainly will be at El Agheila . . ." He said there was considerable evidence that the Axis forces were close to exhaustion after fleeing across North Africa at such a fast clip. But he added that Rommel apparently had received some tanks which had been left at rear line repair stations.

LAVAL SCHEMES:

For Axis Alliance

Climaxing a long series of moves by the Vichy government, Dictator Pierre Laval revealed that his French government is seeking an open alliance with Germany as "the sole guarantee for peace in Europe."

In his first speech since being invested with full political powers by Marshal Henri Petain, Laval said that "It is in the interests of France and peace in the future that we are seeking with Germany a reconciliation and an entente. It is to try to save our territory and our empire that we are following this policy..."

Laval, the Quisling of France, ridiculed Allied promises to return the seized portions of the French empire in the future, pointing to the British possession of French Canada and parts of the West Indies long ago.

"On the other side of the world," Laval continued, "Japan, an old nation by its history and a young one by its dynamism, has just taken from Britain and the United States immense territories, treasures and raw materials.

"It is with complete independence of action we are choosing this course. I am convinced Germany will be victorious."

METEOROLOGY:

Offered 18-19-Year Olds

A new program offering training leading to commissions as meteorological officers in the army air forces, particularly to the 18-19 age groups was announced in Chicago by the University Meteorological committee, representing five universities.

To be eligible, a man must be between 18 and 30 years of age with a high school diploma or its equivalent.

OFFENSIVE:

Russia Moves

For weeks there had been little important news from Stalingrad except that the Soviet forces were holding their positions within that stronghold city. Then a special communique from Moscow told of the beginning of the Russian drive which was to rip open two wide gaps in the Nazi lines ringing the city and then push the Germans steadily westward, away from the Don river.

First reports of this struggle said that 15,000 Germans had been killed in its opening phases and that the Nazis had retreated 40 to 50 miles. Also 13,000 prisoners were taken, said the Russians, while even German sources were admitting that their troops had been forced to take new strategic positions further away from the Don.

This latest campaign began just three months after the Nazis began their siege of Stalingrad and during that time they had often claimed it for their own. Now the Russians had the initiative and for the first time were meeting the Germans on a basis of near-equality of manpower and equipment. Front line dispatches said that these forces were taking the enemy's full measure by outfighting and outgeneraling him in all sectors.

This Russian victory was looked upon as one of great importance by military strategists, many of whom claimed it would have a direct bearing on the whole outcome of the war. For most, however, it was too early to make such a claim definitely. A more complete report of the Nazi losses had to be heard from a neutral source before such reasoning could be accepted.

One thing was clearly evident: the Russians had been taking advantage of the long lull in the fighting by carefully preparing their operations. Further, this campaign was timed to harass the Germans just as the British and American forces were blasting their full strength at Tunis and Bizerte in the North African theater.

NEW GUINEA:

Japs Lose Destroyer

The battle in New Guinea had been hard. Despite the loss of a destroyer, the Japs had succeeded in landing additional troops under cover of darkness. But that didn't prevent the Allies from closing in on all sides of the enemy positions at Buna.

Dispatches from the battlefield reported that the Jap destroyer and two smaller craft were sunk by medium bombers. Other medium bombers supported ground troops by bombing and strafing the enemy.

Some Australian units managed to get into Buna itself for a short time, inflicting heavy damage before retiring. American forces were said to be threatening the Japanese from three sides, apparently severing the enemy communications to Gona, 12 miles northwest. U. S. dive bombers blasted the Jap airdrome at Buna with more than 100 allied aerial sorties in one day, aimed at softening up the enemy base for a knockout blow.

The destroyer sunk in late action was the third warship the Japs have lost at Buna. Previously when a reinforcing Jap fleet appeared and attempted to land help, Allied bombers sank a cruiser and a destroyer, forcing a third destroyer to flee.

From Washington came word that an additional American destroyer had been sunk in the great naval battle of the Solomons in mid-November. This brought the total of American losses in the action, which smashed a Jap invasion armada, to two light cruisers and seven destroyers. The Japs lost 28 ships, 16 of them warships and 12 transports.

BRIEFS:

SILENCE: December 7, 1942, first anniversary of Pearl Harbor, will come and go without any special message from President Roosevelt. A White House announcement said that the President will not deliver an address on that day, "nor take official notice of that anniversary." Rather it is felt that December 7 should be observed "as a day of silence in remembrance of a great infamy."

BASES: President Arroyo Del Rio of Ecuador revealed that his country was the first in South America to give military bases to the United States on that continent.

DUKES: As a projected Austrian volunteer unit of the U. S. army began its development three of the royal archdukes were reported to have offered their services. They are brothers of Archduke Otto, pretender to the throne, who is president of a military committee organizing the unit.

Cranky Tank

Corp. Bernard J. Kessel, Brooklyn, N. Y., was one of the crew of a General Grant tank which went on a rampage, ramming and destroying 75-mm. guns and 50 motor vehicles in Oran after being separated from their unit. They penetrated the city hours before other Allied units entered, emerging without undue mishap. Such stories reflect the morale of U. S. troops now fighting the Axis in North Africa.

COMPULSORY LOANS:

Congress May Decide

Legislation in the new session of congress will be topped by a plan for compulsory loans to the government. Sen. Walter F. George (D., Ga.), chairman of the senate finance committee, said in an interview.

George commented that congress should take the initiative if the treasury and other agencies are not ready with a program shortly after the first of the year.

Various estimates of the amount covered by such a program range up to 15 billion dollars a year. Reports indicate it would involve such pronounced increases in levies as to take almost 30 per cent of the income from citizens in the low income brackets.

As far as possible, George said, he intended to see that taxation did not become unbearable for individuals and corporations. He pointed out that the legislation might involve some readjustments of present high tax rates to compensate for the expected compulsory savings demand

BRITISH CABINET:

Shake-Up

In an unexpected shake-up, Sir Stafford Cripps stepped down from the British seven-man war cabinet to become minister of aircraft production. Capt. Anthony Eden took over Cripps' leadership in the house of commons while Herbert Morrison, minister of home security, replaced Cripps in the war cabinet.

Just why Cripps left the cabinet was not immediately made clear but for some time he is known to have disliked certain phases of the war effort and it is felt he may have left because he could not agree with many actions of Winston Churchill's advisers.

That there were stronger motives in the action was the belief of many observers who pointed out that this was a bad time politically for Cripps to disassociate himself from Churchill. British successes in Egypt and elsewhere in Africa have given much strength recently to the Churchill government. Other sources claimed that Cripps had been wanting to get out of the cabinet for some time but had refrained from doing so previously to save embarrassment for Churchill.

When Cripps left and Anthony Eden took over his leadership in commons, many British citizens saw a further grooming for Eden to some time succeed Winston Churchill as prime minister.

AIR ACTION:

Hits Japs

While the Jap has had plenty of reason to feel the impact of United Nations' airpower in the Southwest Pacific, until a few weeks ago he had been getting off fairly comfortably in Burma and China. But now a new air offensive in these areas seems to be taking shape. Both the Chinese and American bomber commands are taking part in it.

Two Chinese bomber squadrons countered a Jap drive in Central China by blasting munitions warehouses and an airfield near Shasi. This air force gave needed strength to the Chinese ground forces which were putting up stiff resistance to an all-out Jap attempt to push them out of the area.

Meanwhile, in Burma, the largest force of U. S. bombers yet to attack the Japs there, blasted the railway center at Mandalay. Enemy defenses were reported weak and large fires in warehouses and in the railway yards were started.

BUTTER:

Frozen

One-half of all cold storage butter reserves in the 35 principal markets of the United States has been set aside for the exclusive use of federal agencies upon order of the War Production board.

The move was taken to assure butter for the armed forces and for lend-lease requirements. War demands and increased civilian consumption were said to be responsible for the shortage.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

NOT ONLY A FIGHTER, BUT ALSO A DIPLOMAT

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower has a lot of tough jobs in Africa, and one of them, which doesn't get into the headlines, is to be the diplomatic negotiator among high French officials.

Among other things, he has been very adroit in handling General Giraud, who escaped from France dressed as an old woman and who now is in command of French forces in North Africa.

Actually, General Giraud expected to be commander of all forces in North Africa, both French and American. He is one of the highest generals in the French army, and before France fell, would have replaced General Gamelin as chief of staff had he not been taken prisoner. Therefore, since he outranks Eisenhower and has had much more varied experience, it is not unnatural that Giraud should aspire to be commander-in-chief of the entire North African operation, including the U. S. army.

Eisenhower, however, has a charming personality, a broad grin, a smattering of French, and had little trouble in handling General Giraud.

Another complication was the fact that Giraud hates Admiral Darlan. Yet Darlan, as a member of the cabinet, outranks him. In addition, there is General Nogues, another top-ranking officer. So it has been worked out that Nogues commands the French civil population, Giraud the French army, and Darlan the French fleet.

SIDETRACKED PLANES

When Wendell Willkie conferred with Stalin in Moscow, the Russian leader was critical of the British for sidetracking American lend-lease goods in Scotland and substituting for them inferior British war supplies.

The inside story of this can now be told.

Last summer, a shipment of Airacobras was en route to Russia from the United States and the convoy stopped to refuel in the British Isles. At that time, General Eisenhower, preparing for the second front in Africa, asked that these fast fighting planes be given to him instead of being sent on to Russia.

General Eisenhower was so insistent that he finally went to Prime Minister Churchill personally, who finally agreed that the Airacobras be sidetracked for use on the forthcoming African front.

OVERRULING ROOSEVELT

More and more it looks as if Ferdinand Eberstadt, the Wall Street broker, is becoming the most powerful man in the War Production board and one of the most powerful in the government. It hasn't leaked out yet, but recently he managed to overrule the vice president of the United States, the undersecretary of state, and Lend-Lease Administrator Ed Stettinius.

Some time ago, Eberstadt appointed as chief of WPB export priorities, Major Tom Armstrong, of Standard Oil of New Jersey, who had operated in various Latin American countries. Armstrong had been vigorous in bucking the development of Latin American government-owned oil companies, and the Latin Americans don't like him. Therefore, they squawked when they heard he would now sit in their all-important priorities position where he could decide whether they could, or could not, receive oil equipment to develop their government-owned industries in competition with Standard and private companies.

Undersecretary of State Welles agreed with the Latin Americans, and protested to the President. So did Vice President Wallace of the BEW, and also Stettinius, who buys lend-lease oil equipment for Latin American governments.

As a result of these protests, Roosevelt ordered Donald Nelson to dismiss Major Armstrong. However, Eberstadt in effect has overruled the President. He insisted that Armstrong remain. And he is still on the job.

CAPITAL CHAFF

¶ Mrs. Roosevelt, looking from an airplane on the new marble structure known as the Jefferson Memorial, remarked, "I doubt if Jefferson would have liked to see money spent that way."

¶ There are already 225,000 applications on file for commissions from civilian life.

¶ Except for a few rare specialists, the only route to a commission nowadays is to get into the army as a private, then attend an officer candidates school.

¶ Not to be stalled by lack of gasoline, one sightseeing company in Washington has hired and repainted an old two-horse ten-passenger wagon, which drives around the capital as "Victory Sightseeing."

¶ Warning that the war department will dispense no more "cellophane commissions," Secretary Stimson says it does no good for applicants to write appealing letters to him, which open with the catch phrase, "I know what a busy man you are, but—" . . . Some people write to Stimson at his home, expecting personal attention.

Reading the Papers Out Loud:

This is not the first time that American battle flags have been carried to the Mediterranean. They were there over a century ago—for the same purpose—the extermination of pirates . . . At that time we fought for the freedom of the seas. Now we fight for the freedom of America . . . If you said that a little while ago, you were called a warmonger, an interventionist or a soandso . . . But no one today doubts that America is safer because men from Montana and Georgia, Vermont and Nevada are throwing pirates out of Tunis and Algeria . . . This AEF is more than a lesson in geography. It is a milestone in national responsibility.

Rome and Berlin now know that Tripoli and Libya are our next military objectives. But their chief worry is that world freedom is our war aim . . . They know that while one concentration camp exists—while one Nazi propaganda cell functions—and while one squad of Axis troops resists—our arms will remain in the field . . . America has liberated North Africa because a free America can only exist in a free world . . . The full strength of America will continue to march . . . Because the road to Berlin is the only way back to Main St.

The whispering that went on against the British is now being directed against the French . . . Maybe it's wrong to keep Darlan on the job, but Gen. Eisenhower got that far by ignoring the clamor clique, so why should he listen to them now? You can get a rap against Giraud, too, if you turn your ear in a certain direction . . . DeGaulle has an enemy section over here, and so have most of the French military leaders our forces are dealing with . . . It's the same old line you heard against Churchill, Wavell, Ritchie, etc. You'll hear it again if we happen to line up with the Arabs or the Hottentots. Because it's easier to say something than to know something.

Nobody has lined up more eagerly for the war causes than the Hollywood workers . . . They have contributed their time and their talents to amusing the service men and building up bond sales. The spirit out there is right, too . . . Then they tip over the works by making a flicker that gives people the idea that it's still 1928 in California. The latest to get the hammers is "Once Upon a Honeymoon." Several of the N. Y. reviewers were shocked that a picture could take ruined Warsaw as the setting for a piece of low comedy. This is the third flicker that has earned rebukes for the movie makers. They will soon have to start reading the New York reviews with smoked glasses. They're too blinding for the naked eye.

There's no group as superstitious as show people. They fear more jinxes than a voodoo tribe . . . One of their pet superstitions is that their colleagues always die in threes. It's just happened again, with May Robson, Edna Mae Oliver and Laura Hope Crews passing away Earlier in the year a Hollywood trio died within a short time of each other—John Barrymore and two producers, J. Walter Ruben and Bernie Hyman.

Brooks Atkinson gave a tender column to George M. Cohan. Best of all was his discussion of "Over There," which was the "theme song" of the last war. Mr. Atkinson tells you why. "Although 'Over There' has the strangest and most unlikely tune," said Mr. A., "it is one of the songs almost any American can sing on the spur of the moment. It is a perfect expression of a popular emotion" . . . What more could you ask of a war song? So far there have been good ditties for the service branches—Air Corps, Marines, etc.—but nothing for the civilians to get hot about . . . Mr. Cohan knew how to stir up people. He might have spun out another "Over There." For that reason, and too many others, he died too soon.

Two lasses were schmoosing over their daiquiris, wishing the war would end and things get back to normal. What's normal? . . . That's when the Stock Market fell on its kisser and bankrupted everybody who's anybody . . . That's when Bundists strutted in Madison Square Garden and challenged the law to make something of it . . . That's when people lived in tar paper shacks and peddled apples on the corner . . . That's when the dust storms shooed okies all over the nation.

Things I Never Knew 'Til Now:

That you shouldn't applaud at the end of "The Star Spangled Banner." (It would be just as correct to applaud a minister's prayer.)

That when your doctor writes on the prescription: "Gossypium purifactum" don't get panicky. (It only means absorbent cotton.)

That Miles Standish was one of the few warriors correctly christened. Miles, in Latin, means soldier. (Oh, I read it somewhere!)

America Girds for Still Greater Effort As Pearl Harbor Anniversary Nears

A Review of Outstanding Engagements of Our Country's First Year at War.

By CHARLES A. SINGLER
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

With the approach of December 7—the "date of infamy"—Americans everywhere will reaffirm their determination to work, fight and sacrifice to win the war, and spend a little time in retrospect. No attempt will be made here to given an overall picture of what has happened during this fateful year, but rather a review of some of the great battles in which American soldiers, sailors, marines and fliers have been engaged.

Without difficulty we recall that fateful Sunday afternoon when, over a radio suddenly gone wild, the shocking and bewildering reports came in. Pearl Harbor had been attacked! People could hardly believe it. But it was true. The next day the United States declared war on Japan, and on December 16 war was declared on Japan's partners in crime, Germany and Italy.

Since then many thousands of brave American boys have been wrapped in the flag they loved, or have found a last resting place beneath the ocean's swell. These men have illuminated the pages of American history with deeds as bright as the orange flash of a cruiser's guns.

Fall of Wake Island.

All will remember with reverence the epic of Wake island, when a handful of U. S. marines, marooned on a tiny atoll in the Southwest Pacific, made history in Courage. On this occasion a heroic garrison of less than 400 marines defended Wake Island against a powerful Japanese attacking force, from December 2 to 22, until they were overwhelmed by sheer numbers With a few out-dated planes and a gun or two our boys sank seven Jap warships, one cruiser, four destroyers, one submarine and one gunboat.

Fall of Bataan.

The next staggering shock of the war was the fall of Manila and the U. S. naval base of Cavite, in the Philippines. America took heart, though, when it learned of the magnificent defense which was put up by U. S. and Filipino troops in the rugged terrain of Bataan peninsula, under the leadership of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. As it was impossible to get reinforcements through the Japanese naval blockade of the Philippines, Bataan appeared doomed. We recall that in Bataan's darkest hour MacArthur was spirited out of the islands in a remarkable under-cover dash to Australia by the "mosquito boat" hero of Subic Bay, Lieut. John D. Bulkeley.

Lieut. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright took over on Bataan—Wainwright, the stony-faced general whom the boys loved as much as MacArthur. Lacking food, heavy guns, planes and tanks, and facing an overwhelming superiority in enemy forces, Wainwright's men were finally overwhelmed by Jap forces estimated at 200,000 on April 9.

Long after the guns on Bataan ceased firing, the guns of Corregidor (Wainwright's Rock) kept firing. Wainwright and some of his men had, fortunately enough, succeeded in getting on the Rock before Bataan fell. Completely cut off from reinforcements, and heavily outnumbered, Corregidor surrendered to the Japs on May 6. Wainwright and his gallant band are now presumed to be prisoners of the Japs.

Battle of Java Sea.

The battle of the Java sea began February 27, when the Allied fleet attacked the superior Japanese fleet, off the Netherlands East Indies. In this engagement 13 United Nations warships totaling 47,708 tons were lost in a series of engagements lasting from February 27 to March 1. Included in the U. S. losses was the 9,050-ton cruiser "Houston," and the 1,193 ton destroyer "Pope." The Allies lost all five cruisers which participated in the action.

These losses were hard to take, but America began to smile again—in fact it howled with delight—when the big news broke that Brig. Gen. James ("Jimmy") Doolittle, famous speed flier and World War I ace, had dropped plenty of "eggs" over Tokyo with a squadron of North American B-25s. That "mission" was fulfilled on April 18, and it went over big, both here in America and in Tokyo.

First Real Victory of War.

In the battle of that island-studded ocean known as the Coral sea, which is near the Solomon islands and about 1,000 miles northeast of Australia, America's first real victory of the war with Japan was scored The action occurred on May 4 and called forth deeds of valor as thrilling as any in all American history. The Coral Sea battle was the first great naval defeat ever dealt the imperial Japanese fleets. And yet this great battle was fought entirely in the air, by the planes of opposing aircraft carriers.

The ships engaged in this battle never got sight of each other. They slugged it out without firing a single gun at another ship—the first engagement of its kind in history. In this first great victory for the U. S. in this global war the Japs lost more than 15 ships sunk and at least 20 others severely damaged. The action perhaps saved Australia from invasion.

However, America paid a price for her victory in the sultry Coral sea. In this engagement the 880-foot aircraft carrier Lexington, famed ship that laid the foundation for our modern navy's aircraft carrier operations, went to the bottom. This happened on May 7.

The destruction of a Japanese armada some hundreds of miles off Midway island, on June 4 and 5, was another action of the same kind. In this engagement U. S. army bombers roared off from their bases on Midway island—just another dot on the Pacific—to meet the most formidable array of warships that imperial Japan ever sent steaming against a foe. The armada was put to complete rout.

The carrier Yorktown was lost in the Battle of Midway. It went to the bottom on June 7 in the final phases of the great sea-air battle. But before the grand old "Y" went down she catapulted from her flight deck the dive bombers, fighters and torpedo planes that swung the tide of battle in favor of Old Glory. A heavy toll of Jap ships was taken.

Japs Invade Aleutians.

Early in June, after bombing Dutch Harbor in Alaska, Jap forces invaded several of the Aleutian islands, in the North Pacific. They made their main stronghold Kiska, and evidently believed that the everlasting fogs that shroud these islands would be their protection. But Uncle Sam was up there, too, and soon the fleet's heavy guns, Catalina Flying Boats, B-17s and B-24s (Flying Fortresses and Liberators) began bombing and blasting them out. On August 8, a U. S. navy task force, consisting of a great concentration of cruisers and destroyers, glided through the Aleutian fogs almost to the very guns of the invaders and hurled 400 tons of TNT and steel into Jap shipping and shore installations in Kiska harbor. In the battle of Kiska only one observation plane was lost Not as much as a machine gun bullet hit the fleet.

Since that time the Japs have pulled out of the Aleutians, with the exception of Kiska, their main stronghold, and the United States has strengthened its position against them by occupation of the Andreanof group of the Aleutians—much closer to Jap-held Kiska.

Old Glory Hoisted in Solomons.

On the very day when the Japs in Kiska took such a pounding from U. S. forces—exactly eight months to the day after Pearl Harbor—Old Glory was hoisted by U. S. marines over the first territory taken back from the Japs. This glorious event took place on the mountainous island of Guadalcanal, key to the Solomon Islands in the Southwest Pacific This 100-mile long island lies athwart the strategic route to Australia.

The Japs had labored long in hacking an airfield out of the tropical wilderness of Guadalcanal. The marines took it away from them, and there has been a continuing day and night battle for possession of the airfield ever since. In their efforts to recover this vital airfield (Henderson Field) and the key island, the Japs have risked placing the main force of their navy within range of MacArthur's deadly Flying Fortresses and the "Forts" that roar up off of Henderson Field.

We have lost some fine ships in the region of Guadalcanal, but losses on the island have been light compared to what the Japs have lost—according to navy reports their losses run four or five times as heavy as ours. However, there has been a running battle for continued possession of the island on the part of the U. S., and for re-possession on part of the Japs. Day and night the pounding goes on, from sea and sky, but the marines, backed by the army and navy, have hung on and have made some gains.

A real show-down between U. S. and Jap forces in the Solomons came about in mid-November when the greatest naval battle since Jutland in 1916 was fought. Supported by MacArthur's big bombers the navy, in a three-day running battle, smashed a tremendous enemy armada, lifting the immediate threat to U. S. positions on Guadalcanal.

As we pause to remember Pearl Harbor, we must, to get the overall picture, have in mind the heroic work of U. S. air pilots over China, and U. S. air pilots co-operating with the Royal Air Force in almost daily or nightly operations over Hitler's Reich, and over what was known as Occupied France. We must remember the fine work done by American troops in co-operation with Australians, who have pushed back the Japs in New Guinea, turning the tide of battle in the Owen Stanley mountains, saving Port Moresby, and helping to remove the threat from Australia. Day by day through all the months this has been going on—brave men dying—while we take time out to read about it.

Opening of the Second Front.

Things came to a head in the African desert early in November. Thousands of American boys, tank men and aviators participated in the great push of the British Eighth army against Gen. Erwin Rommel's Afrika Korps, which at one time was dangerously close to the Suez canal — one of Britain's darkest hours. Swiftly on the heels of this battle, which became a rout as British forces broke through the El Alamein line, America got the world-shaking news of the opening of the long expected Second Front at an unexpected spot in North Africa, on Saturday, November 7.

Ah, we've forgotten for the moment that raid on Dieppe, in Occupied France—that dangerous, costly raid last August when American Rangers were the first actual units to participate in land operations on the continent during this war. The Dieppe raid was not only a rehearsal for the second front, but also a red herring drawn across the bloody Nazi trail. The Dieppe raid was the foundation of the magnificent success with which the AEF in North Africa was launched, under the brilliant leader, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

When Major General Wainwright, hero of Corregidor, saw that defeat was inevitable he said, "I'll stay with my men." And he did. General Wainwright (shown above) is now a prisoner of the Japs.

Hero Ship Sails Into Enemy Fleet, All Guns Blazing

In the second round of the battle for Guadalcanal, in mid-November, when the Japs threw in all they had to recapture the island with its strategic airfield, the navy did a magnificent job. In this engagement, despite their great numerical superiority in ships, enemy losses were about three to our one.

At the height of the action the cruiser San Francisco sailed right into the enemy fleet—right through the enemy fleet, as President Roosevelt told the story. All guns were blazing. At point blank range she engaged a Japanese battleship and disabled her so she could be sunk by torpedoes.

Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan, a close friend of President Roosevelt, who was aboard the San Francisco in command of the spearhead of the attacking force, gave his life for his country in this battle. The San Francisco, although hit many times, was brought back to port.

IMAGINARY INTERVIEWS: ADOLF AND WILHELM

("The kaiser was a man who lacked any strength or power of resistance. But in me our enemies have found a man who does not know the word 'capitulate'."—Herr Hitler.)

Spirit of Wilhelm—Ach! Can't you leave me out of this?

Adolf—What for? At a time like this I need you for contrast.

Wilhelm—Don't be too sure it's in your favor! It's not very nice of you to pan me in your speeches. What's the idea saying I lacked strength? I was just as tough as you so long as the going was good.

Adolf—I will always be tough whether it's good or bad.

Wilhelm—That's just what I used to say.

* * *

Adolf—I insist there is a big difference between your type and my type.

Wilhelm — I'll never argue with you on that. I concede it!

Adolf—After all, you ran away. I am incapable of that.

Wilhelm—How do you know? You haven't come to the test yet. If I were you I wouldn't boast so much.

Adolf—All Germans boast.

Wilhelm—But it seems strange to hear you dragging me into the picture Why don't you let me rest in peace?

Adolf—I can't rest in peace; why should anybody else? It's a sign of weakness to rest in peace.

Wilhelm—The last I heard of you you were going full speed ahead. You weren't even thinking about relative capacities for capitulation. What's happened?

Adolf—Nothing's happened . . yet. I've got more territory than ever. I've made deeper advances than any German in all history. Do you understand what that means?

Wilhelm—If I don't nobody does.

Adolf—I've overrun a vast part of Europe. No German armies have performed such feats of arms. My victories have been stupendous.

Wilhelm—True. And I understand just how nervous and worried you must be at this point.

Adolf—I am not nervous or worried.

Wilhelm—Oh, come, Adolf, you can't stuff me. I was on top of the world, too, once.

* * *

Adolf—Never did you get as deep into as many countries as I have.

Wilhelm—That's why I appreciate what a mess you're in. I went all to pieces on half your victories.

Adolf—You lacked nerve, firmness, strength. I have all these.

Wilhelm—I was as full of bluster as you until America came in. And look where I wound up.

Adolf—There's different stuff in me.

Wilhelm—It's the same stuff; only you slice it thicker.

* * *

Adolf—And don't mention America. It is decadent, weak, pleasure loving and inept in arms.

Wilhelm—That's what I thought!

Adolf—I can never be defeated. The German people have a destiny to rule the world. Defeat is out of the question.

Wilhelm—I wish you wouldn't steal my stuff.

Adolf—I'm not stealing your stuff.

Wilhelm—Yes, you are. Everything you are now saying I said 25 years ago, yet I finished on a woodpile.

Adolf—They'll never get me on a woodpile.

Wilhelm—What odds are you giving?

HITLER SPEAKS

Oh, gaze at me and you'll behold
The essence of the extra bold;
Some flaws in others you may see,
But you will not find one in ME!

That dreadful word 'capitulate'
Is one I loathe and also hate;
The kaiser ran when in a fix
But could I do it? Who? Me? Nix!

To flee be sure I never will
As did that warlord Kaiser Bill;
He got this break when luck wore thin—
There was a place that LET HIM IN!

THE cost of a handsome pair of cushions will be little if you shop around for remnants of satin or brocade; and for harmonizing crepe or taffeta to make a fold edge as shown here in the sketch. A yard will make two 18-inch cushion tops and the same amount for bottoms. Five-eighths yard of crepe or taffeta will make the fold around both cushions.

If you want to change feathers from old cushions, leave a three-inch opening in the old ticking; sew the larger opening over the smaller one and then work the feathers into the new ticking. Rip apart carefully and sew the new ticking with close stitches.

Iowa Farmers Requested To Plant 60,000 Acres Hemp

FOUR THOUSAND ACRES IS NEEDED FOR HANCOCK COUNTY PLANT

Farmers In Six States Asked To Shift 300,000 Best Crop Acres To Production Of Hemp

Machinery has been set in motion to put about 15 north central Iowa counties in the 1943 hemp fiber production and processing program, it was announced by A. J. Loveland, Iowa USDA War Board chairman Iowa's job in this new farm war production program calls for putting 60,000 of its highest yielding acres in hemp production in the area set up by the war board.

"This is one of the major war production programs on the Iowa farm front for 1943, Loveland pointed out in making the announcement of the big hemp program. "Size of the project may be seen in the announcement that more than $5,000,000 will be spent for 15 hemp mills in the state. This figure includes cost of buildings, the plant equipment and harvesting machinery."

Farmers in six states, Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana and Kentucky, have been asked to shift 300,000 of their best crop-acres to hemp production in 1943 This step is taken to provide a substitute for the Manila hemp and sisal fiber imports cut off by the war Normally the Philippines and other far eastern areas supplied the hard fiber need of the country.

Twenty north central Iowa counties have been tentatively selected in the hemp production area with 15 likly to be definitely seleected following a survey which will begin this week Counties under consideration include Boone, Story, Marshall, Tama, Benton, Webster, Hamilton, Hardin, Grundy, Humbolt, Wright, Franklin, Butler, Bremer, Kossuth, Hancock, Cerro Gordo, Chickasaw, Worth and Mitchell. Soil and climatic conditions ideally suited for hemp production were considered in selecting the area

Tentative sites already have been selected for the proposed 15 hemp processing mills in this area. Mills will be erected where a sufficient number of farmers sign up for hemp production, where suitable labor and transportation facilities are available in the area, and where assistance of local groups is assured in promoting hemp fiber production, Loveland explained. Fiber from about 4,000 acres within a ten-mile radius of the plant site is needed to supply one mill.

In selecting the hemp production counties in Iowa, war board members were guided by the experience gained this year in hemp growing in Kentucky, Minnesota, Illinois and Wisconsin Good, high-producing corn land, uniform and level-land that has been capable of producing an average 60-bushel-an-acre corn yield for the last five years, was selected Consideration also was given to climatic conditions Best quality fiber for hemp is obtained from hemp straw produced in areas far enough north so that days are fairly cool at harvest time, rainfall is abundant and heavy dews are frequent. These factors are essential in the retting or rotting process, which is a critical point in good hemp fiber production, according to Loveland.

The Commodity Credit Corporation is the officially designated agency dealing with Defense Plants corporation in the construction and operation of the hemp mills The War Production Board has given the green light for immediate plant construction and equipment to the Defense Plants Corporation, charged with directing and financing actual plant construction.

Commodity Credit will select the personnel needed to operate these mills (about 100 for each mill); finance the training of such personnel; provide contact forms to cover the agreement between CCC and farmers growing hemp; furnish the seed and harvesting machinery (with necessary machinery operators); and pay farmers in accordance with the terms of the contract when hemp straw is delivered.

Actual sign-up of farmers in the hemp program will be handled by AAA township committeemen in the hemp producing counties.

$50 Per Ton For Class I Straw

Commodity Credit will purchase all hemp straw delivered to the mill by the grower on the following basis: $50 per ton for class 1 straw; $40 per ton for class 2; $35 per ton for class 3 straw, and $30 per ton for class 4 straw.

Hemp yields, based on records this year in Illinois, Wisconsin and Kentucky average from 2½ to 3 tons an acre. Hemp acreages probably will vary from about 5 to 20 acres for each farm.

"This hemp program is definitely one of war production," S. H. McCory of Washington, D. C., told USDA war board members. "Getting an abundant supply of satisfactory fiber for military and essential civilian uses is one of the critical war problems confronting this nation. Fiber has assumed an importance second, perhaps only to rubber, in our production program."

McCory heads the Commodity Credit corporation's national hemp production program He emphasized the need for wholehearted cooperation from farmers and civic leaders in areas where hemp mills will be located McCory, together with A. H. Wright, hemp porduction specialist, and A W. True, from the North Central Regional AAA office in Washington, conferred with the State USDA War Board members in helping formulate plans for the hemp program in Iowa

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Until restrictions were placed on gasoline consumption, tires were wearing out eight times faster than they were being replaced.

We've all heard of wooden tires, but tires made of concrete have been, at least in one instance, substituted for the conventional rubber. A Parker Dam engineer had cast reinforced concrete tires on the rims of a portable welding machine. They worked.

As the temperature inside a tire increases, the pressure goes up, but it is poor rubber economy to "bleed" or let the air out of the tire when it is hot. To do so means under-inflation—and rubber waste—when the casing cools.

In 1911 a tire for the then popular make of car cost the motorist $25.30 and gave about 2500 miles. A comparable tire for the present day popular makes of cars can be had (with ration certificate) for about $15. Properly handled it will return close to 25,000 miles of service.

Fill the Christmas Cookie Jar!
(See Recipes Below)

Cookie Treats

Festivity reigns in the home where the cookie jar fairly pops with Santas, Christmas trees and reindeer made up into cookies dusted with shimmering colored sugars. Have a few fruity and honey cookies along with the real sugar cookies and you will win every youngster's fondest affection.

Since this year's Christmas tree ornaments may be a bit on the slim side, plan to string a few of the cookies on the tree to make for decorations. This will be a real old-fashioned Christmas.

You'll want to pack boxes, too, to send to that son at camp, perhaps, if he is not too far, and also for the one who is home on furlough, or for those nice neighbors who just moved in.

Come, join the cookie parade with the first Christmas goody on our list:

Honey Butterballs.
(Makes 30 to 40)

1 cup butter
¼ cup honey
2 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 cups finely chopped nuts

Cream butter, add honey, flour, salt and vanilla. Mix well and add chopped nuts. Form into small balls on a greased baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 35 minutes. Roll in powdered sugar while hot. Cool, then roll again in powdered sugar.

Have you ever watched the face of a child light up when he picks and chooses his favorite Christmas-y shaped cookie with his favorite colored sugar? Here's the recipe:

Old-Fashioned Sugar Cookies.
(Makes 3 dozen)

½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg
2¾ cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla extract

Cream shortening and sugar. Add egg and beat in well. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk. Cut with floured cookie cutter and sprinkle with white or colored sugar. Bake on a greased sheet in a moderately hot (375-degree oven. About 15 minutes. Thin, wafer-like cookies are made by chilling the dough first, then rolling thin, and lifting shapes onto cookie tin with spatula.

You'll find plenty of the victory vitamin, B-1, which nourishes nerve tissues in oatmeal. This plus iron for your blood and proteins for perking up worn-out tissues—and good flavor besides are found in this cookie:

Does the whipped cream get sulky? The cake fall at the crucial moment? The table decorations look flat and pointless? Explain your problem to Lynn Chambers and she'll tell you what to do about it. Write her at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for your reply.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Get into step with the meat-sharing program now—it's your assignment. Stuffings are advised as good extenders, as are stews, meat pies, meat loaves, soups, turnovers and curries.

Liver need not be included in the 2½-pound adult allowance, nor need the cold cuts, heart, sweetbreads, kidneys and other entrails.

Spices will be on the slender side from now on, but you can still have the best tasting food, ever, with domestic herbs and seasonings. You'll also enjoy emulsion flavors for baking and dessert-making. They come in wild cherry, almond, maple, lemon, and a grand citrus combination.

Vegetables that are tops on your list for wintry days include the Hubbard and acorn squashes, broccoli, beets, carrots, brussel sprouts, turnips and sweet potatoes.

THE VALUE OF THE CHURCH TO THE SOCIAL ORDER

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5 13-16; Mark 12 13-17, I Peter 2 13-17

GOLDEN TEXT—Ye are the salt of the earth Ye are the light of the world.—Matthew 5 13, 14.

Social and political leaders have in the church the strongest influence for good in all the world One marvels that those who profess to seek the best for humanity, who try every kind of social experiment, who labor with every expedient of man, fail to see and use in full measure the power of Christianity. Perhaps the explanation is that some of these leaders are themselves unsaved men, who do not understand spiritual things, and are not willing to give God the glory. Perhaps in the case of others it is because of ignorance or lack of contact with the church.

Whatever the reason, the situation should be remedied. America could solve her problems, both social and political, by a nation-wide revival of true Christianity, with the accompanying salvation of thousands of unconverted. If we cannot have that, let us not fail to have a revival in our own hearts, our own churches, our neighborhoods or communities.

We find in our lesson that the church is

I. A Powerful Influence for Moral Good (Matt. 5:13-16).

Salt in the midst of corruption, light in a world of unbelievable darkness—what striking and meaningful figures with which to describe the Christian.

Believers are the "salt of the earth" because they draw their savor from God Himself. The Christian church, by God's own statement, is His own powerful antiseptic which preserves the social order from falling into the moral decay which sometimes seems imminent. It should, therefore, be honored and encouraged by that society which it serves.

Christians are the "light of the world," and it is the essential nature of light to shine. The darker its surroundings the more marked its brightness, and the more needed its illumination. The good works of Christians reflect the goodness of God, and so they glorify His worthy name. Brother, is your light burning brightly in this wicked world?

II. A Stabilizing Element in Society (Mark 12:13-17).

The world is in social ferment, and our own country has its share of "isms" and social theories calling men to follow, asking their loyalty, making them Utopian promises without foundation.

Alert and intelligent Americans are concerned about these clamorous voices, many of which are quite properly suspected of having purposes far from beneficial to our American way of life, or to democracy itself. Yet they dare not oppose them lest there be the cry of denial of freedom of speech, etc.

What can we do to meet them? Here is the answer: Preach Christ. Bring men to a saving knowledge of Him and to a godly way of living. For the Christian is directed by Christ Himself to "render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's"—and they do it too, because they have first rendered "to God the things that are God's."

III. A Loyal Example of Good Citizenship (I Pet. 2:13-17).

The highest measure of loyalty to country is the Christian standard here stated. In Romans 13:1-10 we learn that all authority comes from God and that the power of rulers is to be recognized as His gift. That means that true rulers will submit to Him in every detail of their government, seeking to know and to do His will.

However, the Christian gives loyal obedience to the "powers that be" even though they may not recognize the source of their power. This is subject only to the limitation that they may not demand that we do those things that dishonor God's name. Since their only real power to rule comes from Him, they have no authority to tell anyone to do that which is against His holy will. When that happens, the Higher Authority takes over and our loyalty must be to Him, the King of kings. The Christian then will be the best citizen, eager to do what king or country may ask, in order thus to bear a good testimony and to close the mouth of foolish critics of the church.

The history of our country and of other lands reveals the names of many illustrious Christian patriots, and the roll of honor of those who loved and served their country well in the humble and difficult places, would bear its hundreds of thousands of names which are found also on the roll of the church.

Christians, let us be earnest and intelligent followers of Christ, whose lives count for moral uprightness. "For God and Country" is the excellent motto of the American Legion, but it should be more than that; it should be the purpose of every Christian citizen.

Floating Ice

Ice floats because, unlike other substances, when water reaches freezing point it ceases to contract as cold things usually do, and inexplicably starts to expand. This, of course, makes it lighter, and so it floats to the surface, because its mass must remain the same.

If water did not expand when it turned into ice the seas and lakes would be permanently frozen, except for a few feet of water at the top, for only the surface receives the heat rays of the sun, and ice that had sunk would never thaw.

JUST FOOLING

Resentment

"How did you get that swollen jaw?"

"A girl cracked a smile."

"Well?"

"It was my smile."

Wrong Impression

"Louise, your hair is very untidy. Did that boy kiss you against your will?"

"No, mother; he only thinks he did."

"Women are open books to me," claims a psychologist. Bet he can't shut them up!

Sporting Chance

"This new 35-mile speed limit will mean a great saving."

"Yes, in more ways than one. A pedestrian now has an even chance of outrunning a car."

Blackout Test Was Success Throughout Large Area

BLACKOUT CALLED SUCCESS BY KLEMME OFFICIALS AND WARDENS

Not A Single Flicker Of Light To Be Seen Anywhere In Town

Klemme and the surrounding community again demonstrated it could cooperate one hundred per cent in the war effort when it joined in the great experimental blackout Monday night which began exactly at 10:00 o'clock and lasted for 20 minutes.

The local blackout was under the direction of C G. Waterman, local defense chairman, asisted by Mayor Keraus and Marshall Buseman The town had been divided into ten sections and each section was patrcled by a deputy warden and police. The men assigned to the ten areas were Walter Kimball, Geo. Lawhorn, Harvey Hubbaid, Orville Bridges, Martin Barz, P W Johnson, Reuben Lemke, Glen Bridges, Orville Stokesbary, and Leonard Swanson Ernest Henschen, chief air raid warden was also on the job and patrcled the entire area in company with the mayor and defense chairman Dr W F Missman and the Editor also accompanied the group and went on several patrols during the test

Only one minor violation was reported which occured in Leonard Swanson's district. A resident had forgotten about the blackout, but immediately turned out lights

A battery charger in a local garage gave out a light, but the e were the only two signs of light to be found in the entire area

The countryside as far as could be seen was blacked out perfectly and all farmers in the area cooperated.

The streets were clear of all persons and there were no cars on the street during the test.

Cars used by the several wardens in covering their patrol were the only lights visible. The lamps had been covered with blue paper but this method did not prove satisfactory as the lights woud have been visible from an airplane for many miles. Some other method of shielding car lights will be used in future tests.

News reports from the area of eight states, which includes fifteen million people, was that the blackout test was considered nearly perfect.

HELLO, FOLKS!

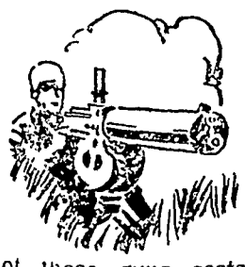
What You Buy With
WAR BONDS

The 50-caliber Browning machine gun is one of the most efficient short range weapons used by U. S Fighting forces. It is effective at ranges up to 2,000 yards and fires about 600 forty-five caliber bullets per minute.



One of these guns costs about $1,500, while a thirty-caliber machine gun costs approximately $600. Our fighting forces need thousands of these rapid-fire guns. Even a small town or community can buy many of them by uniting in the purchase of War Bonds. At least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay day will do the trick.

Over the Top by New Year's Is the Plea of Secretary Morgenthau

As of today twenty-one million American workers are investing eight per cent of their salary – every pay day – in United States War Savings Bonds. This is a very remarkable tribute to our armed forces who are fighting this war. But this job is only two-thirds accomplished.

There are nine million additional American workers who are not investing in War Bonds every pay day.

This appeal is directed to two groups of Americans.

First – to the twenty-one million people who are investing eight per cent of their wages. We ask them to increase their investment to ten per cent or more.

Second – the other nine million whom we ask to join the Payroll Savings Plan and to invest ten per cent or more of their earnings.

It is our earnest hope here at the Treasury Department that by New Year's Day thirty million Americans will be investing ten per cent or more of their wages in War Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan.

Henry Morgenthau Jr.
SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY

EMERGENCY WINTER FEEDING AIDS WILDLIFE DURING CRITICAL PERIOD

The Family Helps Replenish The Food Supply In An Emergency Feeding Station For Wildlife

Early, and in some places heavy snows indicate the possibility of a long, hard winter for wildlife, and although extraordinarily large populations of both pheasants and quail came through the hunting season satisfactorily, the number of game birds that survive the critical winter period will determine the nesting possibilities for 1943. Emergency winter feeding is an important aid to wildlife, and although winter losses will occur during hard winters in spite of efforts to prevent them, mortality can be cut down by effective winter feeding When bad weather sets in, birds must go to heavy cover for shelter or perish from the cold. If feed is available in or near this cover, the birds will survive. If not, wildlife has its choice of staying in the sheltered areas and suffering from hunger or leaving the shelter in search of food and freezing in the open country. Each year thousands of sportsmen, school groups, Boy Scouts, 4-H Clubs, conservation officials, and other interested groups establish and maintain winter feeding stations, and through their unselfish efforts thousands of birds come through the winter that could not otherwise survive.

Iowans have enjoyed the finest upland game bird season in the state's history, and they are urged to help assure future seasons as good or even better by maintaining a feeding station in their favorite game cover.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Soviet Pushes Offensive Against Nazis As Italians Contemplate Allied Threat Of Stepped-Up Campaign Against Them; Tunisia Battle Climaxes African Drive

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

The liberated French supplied the refreshments and a toast was raised to an American alliance when a lieutenant with the Yankee invasion forces brought word to the Foreign Legion barracks in Safi, Morocco, that the troops there were no longer prisoners. Thus ended another phase of the Allies' North African campaign.

TUNISIA:
Allied Wedge

Axis forces in Tunisia stood with their backs to the sea as Lieut. Gen. K. A. N. Anderson's British first army thrust a wedge between enemy strongholds in Tunisia by capturing the town of Djedeida, which controls road and rail communications between Tunis and the Bizerte naval base.

Thus by severing communications between Tunis and Bizerte, the Allies virtually had isolated the Axis positions, leaving only a coastal road open.

The German-controlled Paris radio said that fighting was taking place in the Mateur region and indicated that the British are preparing for a general offensive by deploying forces in that sector.

Axis forces fell back, following futile counterattacks, within the semicircular defense line around Tunis and Bizerte. According to the Morocco radio, Allied paratroopers attacked Axis positions near Mateur and other Allied forces stabbed at the defenders of Tunis.

Defeat of the Axis in Tunisia would leave Allied troops free to move south into Tripolitania and attack Marshal Erwin Rommel's Africa corps from the rear while General Montgomery's British eighth army attacked from the east.

That such plans were contemplated was indicated by the fact that for four straight days General Montgomery's headquarters had "nothing to report." It looked as though Montgomery was delaying an assault on Rommel at El Agheila and merely holding off until the trap was sprung.

TRAGEDY:
Strikes Boston

Not since the 1903 Iroquois theater fire in Chicago had so many people been burned or suffocated to death as perished in the disaster which struck the Cocoanut Grove night club that Saturday night in Boston. An incomplete toll by the police first set the number of dead at 477 with the belief that it might rise above 500. At the time this count was made 212 persons were receiving hospital treatment for their burns and injuries.

As hysterical parents and friends were engaged in the difficult task of identifying the bodies of those killed, Stanley Tomaszewski, a 16-year-old high school boy and part-time employee of the club, told his story of how the blaze began. He said that after a patron had unscrewed a light bulb he attempted to replace it and when he lighted a match to see better, the flame ignited some of the decorations. Swiftly the flames spread and the 750 patrons rushed frantically for the exits. Many were killed as they were trampled beneath rioting hundreds seeking escape. Only about 100 of the total 750 in the building escaped unhurt.

Many of the persons killed were servicemen and football fans celebrating college victories of that afternoon. Buck Jones, well-known western star of the movies, was among the persons who had packed the smart club.

As all available medical help was rushed to the scene, the Red Cross released supplies of blood plasma which was used in extreme cases in efforts to keep the death toll down.

NAZI SHIP:
Trapped in Pacific

In a double-edged announcement from Allied headquarters in Australia came word that two destroyers attempting to reinforce Japanese units at Buna were believed sunk by Allied bombers, while far to the west an 8,000-ton German auxiliary ship was trapped and 78 Germans captured.

The announcement was the first mention of Nazi shipping in this area for months.

WARNING:
To Italians

In a world broadcast on the eve of his 68th birthday, Prime Minister Winston Churchill proclaimed that American and British forces in North Africa expected to "expel the enemy before long" and warned the 40,000,000 people of Italy to overthrow their dictator and sue for peace.

After the conclusion of the Mediterranean campaign, Churchill said, Africa will serve the purpose for which Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is preparing it—as a springboard from which large scale operations on the continent of Europe can be undertaken.

The route for this attack, he indicated, lay through Italy. "Our operations in French Africa should enable us to bring the weight of the war home to the Italian Fascist state in a manner not hitherto dreamed of by its guilty leaders, or still less, by the unfortunate people Mussolini has led, exploited and disgraced."

Although the Churchill talk was optimistic, he warned that the war is likely to be a long one and that bloody and bitter years lie ahead. He refused to predict whether the war in Europe will be over before that in the Pacific, but said that if such was the case all fighting forces of the United Nations would automatically come to the aid of the United States, China and Britain's own kin in Australia and New Zealand.

Turin Smashed

In the heaviest raid of the war on Italy, hundreds of British bombers smashed the city of Turin with fourton bombs, probably knocking it out of the Italian war effort.

As if foreshadowing Prime Minister Churchill's warning to the Italian people, the bombing destroyed great areas of the city. The super block-busters and fire from 100,000 incendiaries pulverized huge sections of the city. Turin is Italy's biggest industrial city, the home of the Fiat engine works, the Caproni bomber planes and many other important factories.

RUSSIA:
An Answer

On the cold steppes before Stalingrad and in the blustery valleys of the Caucasus, the Russian armies gave an answer to a question that military experts had been asking ever since Hitler's troops had driven deep into Soviet territory. It was the question: "Has Hitler destroyed the Russian army?" And the answer was an emphatic "No."

This year's Russian winter offensive began first in Stalingrad itself, where the Germans had been fought to a standstill. Then it spread quickly as Soviet forces struck simultaneously from the north and south knifing through Nazi defenses on both flanks and thrusting spearheads far across the Don river. Three hundred thousand German troops were thus encircled. These were the bulk of the enemy detachments laying siege to Stalingrad. As the first week of the offensive ended, Russian reports credited their army with taking a toll of 250,000 Axis soldiers killed, wounded or captured.

Also in the Caucasus to the south and around Leningrad in the north the Russian might began to tell. Even Berlin admitted that the Russians were "counterattacking."

But the biggest threat to Nazi prestige was the Russian campaign in the Rzhev-Veliki Luki area west of Moscow. Here a strong action pushed toward the Latvian border and threatened to cut Hitler's northern and southern fighting flanks.

What puzzled the experts was how Stalin had been able to conserve so much of his power while the Germans had been pounding him hard all summer. Most vital question now was whether or not the strong Russian offensive could maintain its momentum long enough to drive the Germans back.

FIGHTING DOLLARS:
Tops in Financing

When President Roosevelt launched the nine billion dollar "Victory Loan" drive by purchasing a $1,000 bond from Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau he set in motion the greatest financing program in all history.

This money is needed by the government to meet obligations stemming from the war effort and the President urged that everyone turn his idle money into "fighting dollars" by buying some of these bonds. Pointing out that while over 23 million Americans were already buying war bonds through payroll deduction plans, there still were many who could get in on this newest plan of building up government income.

While the new borrowing campaign is being handled largely by the nation's banks, all wage earners and corporations are being urged to buy these latest securities of all types. Beginning at $500 the bonds are available to all investors and it is hoped that half the amount needed will be raised outside banks.

AIR STRENGTH:
Asia Evidence

Heavy United Nations air raids were raining destruction on Jap bases and supply centers in Burma, Thailand and Indo-China as the growing strength of this arm of activity against the enemy became increasingly evident.

This most recent surge of air strength began with a terrific pounding of Jap railway yards at Mandalay and reached its apex when a U. S. group of bombers and fighters shot down at least 23 planes in one day during operations against the great Pearl river base in China.

In that raid tons of explosives were dropped on the Pearl river estuary, sinking two medium sized freighters and upwards of 100 barges. In addition many docks and warehouses were set ablaze.

SUICIDE FLEET:
Scuttled by French

So that France "might at least be spared the supreme shame of seeing her ships become the ships of the enemy," French sailors destroyed 60-odd ships at Toulon, removing the last visible asset of the Vichy government.

The words were those of Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French. The sentiment was that of all the Allied nations.

Word of the suicide of France's home fleet disclosed that many French officers and dynamite crews went down with their vessels in wild dawn battles with German boarding parties attempting to halt the scuttling of the vessels.

Warships now littering the bottom of Toulon harbor include three battleships, four heavy and three light cruisers, one seaplane tender, 25 destroyers and 23 submarines. Two submarines escaped and a third struck a mine dropped by a Nazi plane as it attempted to flee.

London sources accepted the scuttling as evidence that Adm. Jean Darlan has been secretly playing the Allied game. Fighting French sources said that Adm. Jean Abrial, new Vichy naval secretary, undoubtedly gave Adm. de la Borde orders to scuttle the ships.

BRIEFS:

LIMIT—A limit of 14 days to all army furloughs during the holiday season was announced by Secretary of War Stimson. Because of the increasing strain on U. S. railway facilities between December 12 and January 12 leaves will be granted to no more than 10 per cent of the enlisted strength of each army post.

DOUBLED — OPA officials announced in Washington that twice as many passenger car tires would be available for rationing in December as compared to last month.

HOSIERY — Price Administrator Leon Henderson has set specific maximum retail prices on women's silk hose at from 35 cents to $1.65, depending on quality and type.

GUEST—Upon completion of medical treatment in the U. S., Madame Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Chinese generalissimo, was to be the guest of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House. Her trip to this country was kept a secret until she arrived at her destination.

CHRISTMAS—"On the birthday of the Prince of Peace we can and should rest from the production of the weapons of war." With those words, Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, announced that Christmas will be observed as a full holiday in the nation's war plants.

QUIET CONFIDENCE

It brought no headlines, but Chief of Staff General Marshall made the first step toward better co-operation between Capitol Hill and the Executive Branch of the government by holding a quiet conference with key senators and representatives.

He gave them an intimate, and on the whole optimistic, progress report on the war, which left a good impression with congressional leaders. Both Republicans and Democrats were present, most of them from the military affairs committees, and also the vice president, the speakers and other leaders.

General Marshall gave the actual figures on American losses in North Africa. These must remain confidential, but they were encouragingly small. He explained that one reason for the light casualties was General Eisenhower's peace arrangement with Admiral Darlan.

General Marshall attached great importance to this, since the army, navy and civilian population in North Africa were under the influence of Admiral Darlan. Therefore he suggested to congress that it would be very helpful if there were no critical speeches of the admiral despite his Vichy connections.

Admiral Darlan had come to visit his son who was stricken with infantile paralysis, General Marshall said, then had returned to France. But when his son suffered a relapse, Darlan came back to North Africa. Thus it was pure accident, but a very fortunate one, that he was in Algiers at the time. Darlan had given the order immediately which resulted in the saving of many American lives.

General Marshall also paid high tribute to Robert Murphy, the state department's charge d'affaires in France, who spent most of his time in North Africa. It was Murphy who mapped out most of the advance political plans of the U. S. army.

General Marshall was also optimistic regarding the amount of Nazi strength being diverted from the Russian front, especially airpower. He felt that Hitler would have to take more and more planes away from Russia to protect Italy, now considered the soft spot of the Axis, and that Hitler could not lick Russia without airpower.

Another optimistic part of the war picture, the chief of staff said, was New Guinea, where he expects some real Allied progress against the Japs at Buna.

Note: Secretary of the Navy Knox is now following Marshall's cue and has invited members of the senate and house naval affairs committees to have dinner with him some evening soon. As a result of the elections, it looks as if the executive branches of the government had awakened to the fact that there was a congress.

HITLER INFLUENCE

If Hitler moves in on Spain, he may accomplish at one blow what we have failed to do in nine months of diplomatic discussions with Argentina. He may force that South American country into a break with the Axis.

It was Argentina which principally gummed the works at Rio de Janeiro last January, when astute Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, was trying to line up all 21 Latin-American countries behind a resolution to break relations.

There Argentina Foreign Minister Ruiz Guinazu insisted on "neutrality" and Argentina remained on the fence.

Ruiz Guinazu is a great admirer of Spain, is proud of his own Spanish blood. Furthermore, he points to Spain's "tradition of neutrality" as the best guarantee of peace.

So if the Germans now attack Spain, the Argentine government would almost be forced to come to the defense of the mother country by breaking relations with the attacking country.

Note: Resignation of Argentine War Minister Tonazzi, a friend of the United States, is regarded here as the first important rift in the Castillo government.

Mrs. Cordell Hull was leaving the Shoreham hotel one morning when she encountered Dr. Jose Richling, former minister of Uruguay.

"Can I take you somewhere?" she offered.

"I'm going to the state department," said Richling.

"Come along, I'll take you."

"But are you going that way?"

"No, but it doesn't matter. I have nothing to do. Anyhow, I want to see how my husband works."

Wendell Willkie and Global Politics

By Frank Gervasi

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

Wendell Willkie's recent visit to the Middle East was the second of two memorable events during the last days of August and early September. The first, of course, was the defeat of Rommel's Afrika Korps.

This, among other things, caused stocks to rise on the Cairo Bourse.

The victory over Rommel removed an immediate threat to Egypt and at least put our side in a position to resume the initiative—as they say in treatises on war. The enemy lost a considerable quantity of men and weapons. The myth of Rommel's invincibility was destroyed in a brief hot battle which was over almost before anybody knew it had begun. It was as brief as it was hot and almost as destructive to the German war machine as a short circuit in a generator.

There's no tendency here, however, for the British to overestimate the damage done to the Afrika Korps or to underestimate Rommel's ability to recuperate.

Two Events Collide.

The two events—the victorious battle and Willkie's arrival—coincided so closely that they became confused. The newspaper boys hardly had time to cover the first event before it telescoped into the second, and they were very busy with the second. The blitz visit was crammed with statements, interviews, receptions, appearances before still and movie cameras, radio talks, calls on diplomats and kings, conferences with politicians, soldiers and more diplomats.

Short as it was, the correspondents worked harder and longer during Willkie's visit than at any time while away from the fighting front. Willkie shook up their livers.

He sassed the censors, made formal diplomatic calls in a lounge suit instead of the sacred striped pants and tail coat of tradition. He managed to impart to nearly everything he did an atmosphere of clambake. Censorship, motivated by the sheer necessity for keeping Berlin in the dark as to Willkie's views about political and military affairs in the Middle East, prevented details of his visit from becoming known. This article is an attempt to supply some of those missing details.

In any other setting, the breezy politician might have seemed a heroic figure, remarkable for his frankness and sincerity. In the Middle East, however, with its traditions of reticence, its compunctions of secrecy in political and military matters, Willkie's act didn't quite come off. He was usually out of character and seemed, most of the time, a huge and handsome bull in a store full of porcelain images. Every time he moved, you wanted to warn him that he might break something.

Willkie, Image Breaker.

He did some good but he also broke a few images. The damage occurred despite the presence in his cruise crew of Joseph Barnes, soft-spoken former newspaper man who now is an official in the Office of War Information. Joe was the conscience of the party, a small voice which kept saying: "Be careful, Wendell! Somebody might be trying to sell you a bill of goods. Watch what you say and remember this is a British battlefield and they are the bosses here."

Calls on King Farouk.

He didn't prevent Willkie, however, from calling on His Majesty King Farouk of Egypt in an ordinary suit, or from having himself photographed in a sloppy bush shirt, baggy pants and an outsize sun helmet, with German prisoners who stood rigidly at attention and regarded him with considerable coolness.

Willkie's first plunge into Middle East affairs happened in the marbled hall of the impressive headquarters of the United States forces in North Africa, formerly the home of a wealthy Egyptian family. The active and passive press, uniformed and ununiformed, male and female, American and foreign, were there about seventy strong. Even the Times of London came; so did British and American censors.

Willkie, in a summer-weight single-breasted suit, his pants belt tight around his middle, his hair rumpled, and looking very much a man of the people in his white shirt and unremarkable necktie, sat on a chair before a table set on the first landing of a staircase that swept upward behind him. There was a shaft of light on his face from an open door. He reassured us that the Yankees were doing well.

Then he turned prophet. He announced that, in his opinion, Hitler was 'way out on a limb and that the tide had turned against the enemy.

Rural America's Future Prosperity or Hard Times All Depends on Action of Farmers During Present Period

400 Per Cent Increase in Income Over '29 Causes Boom Danger to Arise

WILL THIS WAR PRODUCE A LAND BOOM ON AMERICAN FARMS?

This question concerns not only agricultural economists, but everyone who lives on or near a farm. Its answer will largely determine future prosperity or hard times for rural America.

Every previous war has brought its own land boom that left a wreckage of deflation behind. Under ordinary circumstances and with an ordinary war, the current situation would be ripe for history to repeat itself. The elements for a first-class boom are present. But from Pearl Harbor down to the moment, farm real estate values have defied precedent by remaining below pre-World War I levels.

Meanwhile agricultural income has zoomed to record highs, production has reached unheard-of peaks and the 1943 outlook promises further expansion.

Farm economists are frankly puzzled over the trend of land prices but they unanimously hope it continues. They credit the good sense of farmers themselves with the fact that farm real estate prices have risen so slightly thus far. They point out that while the danger of a boom exists, farmers themselves have the power to head it off.

Production Picture Brilliant.

As the 1942 crop year ends, farm conditions never appeared more promising. More than 15 billion dollars will flow into farmers' pockets from this year's bumper harvest. The biggest previous figure was 14½ billion dollars in 1919. This year's farm total is nearly four times the low-ebb depression income of 4½ billion dollars in 1932. When operating costs, including taxes, interest, wages for labor, machinery and other items are deducted this year, farmers should have a spendable income of from four to five billion dollars for living, savings and investment. Farm families will have an average of $438 more to spend this year than last.

The production picture is equally brilliant.

For example, the 1942 corn crop is reckoned at 3,132,000,000 bushels—a record exceeded only by 1920 and then by but a slight margin. The crop ordinarily runs between 2 and 2½ billion bushels, but dipped down to 1½ billion in the drouth years of 1934 and 1936. Despite the huge 1942 crop, corn commands a high price.

More bread for doughboys means a bigger wheat producing job for American farm land.

The wheat yield this year will be the largest since the miracle crop of 1915 and the market price is the highest since 1929.

Hogs have returned to their traditional role of "mortgage lifter." They are more numerous than ever and worth more per pound. The $5 hog of a few years ago has been replaced by the $15 hog. In excess of a 100 million hog crop was figured for this year and even more production is expected for 1943.

Beef prices are the highest since 1920. It is estimated that on January 1, 1943, cattle and calves will number about 77 million head—or more than a three million increase for each of the last two years. The 1942 calf crop is probably the highest on record, totaling 32 million head. Sheep and lamb marketings have established records and the average price is the best in 20 years.

Niagara of Milk.

A Niagara of milk, exceeding 120 billion pounds, will have cascaded into dairy pails throughout the United States by the end of this year. More milk cows are grazing America's pastures than ever before—26,000,000 to be exact. Egg production for 1942 is estimated at 50 billion Poultrymen are receiving top prices for their production And to mention one or two other items, there is more hay than ever; and the potato crop of 376,309,000 bushels beats all previous records

Ordinarily whenever an industry does as well as farming has done, there is a tendency to speculate Those already in the business seek to expand their operations Others seek to get in on the bonanza. And soon a spiraling boom is born.

A survey of the rural real estate market recently revealed that farms are selling in increasing numbers, but no unusual price advances are yet noticeable.

The Farm Credit corporation and insurance companies have been leaders in liquidating their farm holdings. It is estimated that the FCA has disposed of more than 25,000 farms since 1938 Some insurance companies report they have sold more than 90 per cent of the farms they acquired during the depression In recent months thousands of Midwest farms have changed hands in individual farm auction sales.

Analysis of the transactions revealed that 60 per cent of the buyers were farmers, half of whom were tenants Of the tenants, most were former landholders who had lost out during the depression, when 2,100,000 farms were foreclosed. With farm income on the rise, these tenants are getting back on their feet and able to make down payments on farms of their own.

Of the 40 per cent non-farmer buyers, a large group represented city dwellers approaching retirement age who have bought farms in order to live reasonably on their pensions and income from savings.

How long this paradoxical situation of high farm income and low farm real estate values will continue, economists do not care to predict. But they point out three factors which at present make the farm picture of World War II different from that of World War I:

A Different Farm Picture.

1. Today's farmers would rather get out of debt than into it. Hence they are not bidding up the farm real estate market by seeking additional land. Instead they are paying off mortgages and investing their surplus funds in War Bonds. They are making needed repairs on buildings and building up their land's productivity by the adequate use of fertilizers and by other soil conservation measures.

2. The hangover aftermath of World War I's land speculation spree is still fresh in the memory of most farmers. Farmers are hedging on the future by "plowing back" present earnings into their present holdings without attempting any expansion.

3. The present farm labor shortage and the rationing of farm machinery are effective deterrents to the urge to acquire more land.

Let's look first at the debt situation. The extent to which farmers are using their expanded income to get out of hock was disclosed by A. G Black, head of the Farm Credit administration, who recently pointed out that a large percentage of farm mortgages are now being paid off ahead of schedule The nation's farm mortgage debt has been reduced to 6½ billion dollars—the lowest figure in 25 years. There are fewer foreclosures and other distress transfers than at any time in the past 20 years.

"Farmers realize more than ever before that a healthy, liquid financial condition is the safest goal these days," said a recent statement of the Middle West Soil Improvement committee "Such a goal means getting debts out of the way. It means building up the blood strains of livestock and eliminating the non-producers It means making needed repairs on the house and barn It means paying particular attention to the fertility level of the soil

Long-Run Earning Power.

"This last is of particular importance, for the real value of land is dependent on its long-run earning power Thus any investment in a soil-building program that will pay dividends in years to come is an important contribution to a farm's future productivity.

"In wartime as in peace, the farmer can obtain valuable information from his county agent or agronomists at the state agricultural experiment station in developing his soil improvement plan Such a program should include the raising of legumes to provide necessary nitrogen, the commercial supply of which is now largely required by munitions factories It should include regular crop rotation and the use of sufficient quantities of fertilizer containing phosphorus and potash to encourage plant growth.

"It should include pasture improvement. By means of such a program, the soil's future fertility level can be assured and its immediate output of foods and fibers for war and civilian needs increased."

Most farmers instinctively fear a repetition of the World War I land boom. Their hindsight has taught them many valuable lessons from the bitter experience of the 1920s and early 30s. If they profit by that hindsight, they can escape the headache of a land collapse.

World War I was a story of agricultural upsurge. Farm income rose from 6 billions in 1914 to 14½ billions in 1919. High prices and a ready market for agricultural products, plus easy credit facilities, encouraged farmers to bid up land prices. Farms were bought on speculation with the expectation of a quick sale at a profit. Land values were inflated from an average of $40 per acre in 1914 to $70 in 1920. Within those six years farm real estate rose in total value from 39½ billion dollars to 66 billions.

The sequel was a crash that still reverberates. Land prices fell from an average of $70 per acre to $28. More than a third of the nation's six million farms were foreclosed by the end of the depression. All farm land and buildings declined from 66 billions to 31 billions. Even today farm real estate is worth only 36 billion dollars—less than it was before World War I.

More, and Still More

Every productive acre of farm land will be called on to yield more food for Uncle Sam's expanding armed froces in 1943 and to meet Lend-Lease demands. As a result the value of farm land as an investment will be enhanced. (Above) U. S. Army Quartermaster Corps receives and allocates food shipments for troops. (Right) Rising demand for dairy products spurs activities in creamery and bottling plants and helps boost farm income to record highs.

United States government leading way in soil conservation crusade, abolishing soil-mining

Undeniably, farm labor shortages and the rationing of agricultural machinery are deterrents to overexpansion. With the War Manpower commission's recent move to defer dairy, livestock and poultry workers, some relief will be forthcoming, but labor will be scarce.

In all history there never has been a time when it was more essential for farmers to follow efficient production methods and utilize to the fullest extent every practice that will result in maximum output with minimum labor. In such a program, the importance of fertilizer is self-evident. The U. S. government is leading the way in its crusade for soil conservation and the abolition of soil-mining practices.

With all these factors in operation, it is evident that if more food is to be produced the present farm acreage will have to produce it. How to accomplish this is a problem farmers themselves meet, but experience has demonstrated that productivity can be increased if the soil's fertility level is raised. Tests have shown that the average farm's crop output can be enlarged from 10 to 30 per cent through intelligent soil treatment. This means taking advantage of proper rotation, the growing of soil-building legumes, the regular application of phosphorus and potash, and terracing and contour plowing wherever necessary.

IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC

I.
He slugged it out unto the end—
This slam-bang fighting man—
A knock-'em-downer from way back
Was Dan J. Callaghan!
There in the black and bloody night
He helped to blast the foe;
An admiral all-out to win
Who died in doing so!

II.
The Jap armada on the hunt,
Outnumbering our force,
Came out to strike a telling blow
(With sneaky ways, of course);
It had, by all the laws of weight,
A prospect more than fair
For victory . . . except that men
Like Callaghan were there!

III.
Bill Halsey was the battle chief—
Another scrappy Celt;
Two Irishmen were topside there,
As soon the Charlies felt;
The Japs were physically strong
But mentally not sharp—
They should have known no Nipponese
Could ever trim a "harp."

IV.
The foe bore down from Bougainville
Our lesser force to pin:
It met Halsey and Callaghan
And soon bore back agin.
Two tougher, slashing, slambang lads
Were never in one fleet
As Nippon found when such as they Got word "Turn on the heat!"

V.
The foe's cry "On to victory!"
Soon changed to "Who threw that?"
As Callaghan tore in between
Their lines in "nothing flat";
They thought all hell had broken loose
And saw a new type war
When Dannie Callaghan let go
A few swings from the floor.

VI.
"What's going on?" some Togo cried
As deadly wallops grew;
"Search me," another one replied,
"For I am groggy, too!"
And groggy was the word for it
For soon the frantic "drips"
Were panicked to a point where they
Were blasting their own ships!

VII.
They'd looked for that "one-ocean" fleet
And how were they to know
One-ocean fleets were plenty with
Two Celts to run the show?
But well they know about it now
And—mark this well, Japan:
Our Navy has a new job now—
Avenge Dan Callaghan!

VIII.
Oh, there were other heroes there;
None more than Callaghan
Would understate what he had done
And praise some other man;
But no one's place in history
Can be much more secure
For he died on the fighting bridge
To make the triumph sure.

EPITAPH FOR ADOLF

This was his story,
And this was his role:
The greater his conquests,
The deeper the hole.

His triumphs were vast,
And he had such a clout,
He got in so deep
That he couldn't get out.

Deer are being hunted by bow and arrow this season. This is a great break for the deer, but it is tougher than ever on cows, bird dogs, farm help and innocent bystanders.

General Rommel is reported not with his men. He may have been running so fast he left the ground and is now establishing an altitude record.

Newspaper Man Stuff:

Down at the White House one of the staffers showed the President a mid-west paper's editorial attack.

"I want to show you how low some people can get," said the White Houser.

"Oh," replied FDR brushing it aside, "those editorials aren't worth the paper they're written FOR."

H. R. Knickerbocker's bride returned by boat the other day from London . . . Two passengers were frightful bores, she was telling John Gunther, so she confided that before getting on the ship a fortune teller told her: "You'll never live to see your 30th birthday!"

"Ha!" said one of the bores. "That's a good one."

"What's good about it?" groaned Mrs. Knickerbocker. "My 30th birthday is two days hence!" . . . The trick worked, all right . . . The bores stayed away for two days, but so did everyone! Including all the submarines.

Several Broadway characters were being discussed when in walked a columnist.

"I wonder," someone wondered, "what his hobby is?"

"Collecting," retorted another, "dirty looks."

One of the New York gazettes sent a photographer down to Chinatown the other morning. The assignment: Get picture of a Chinese reading those Chinese bulletin-board newspapers about the Allied victories, etc. . . . The news photogger had no difficulty finding a willing Oriental—who refused, however, to pose full-face. "Take a picture from back, please," he said.

"Why?" asked the lens-lad. "Bashful?"

"Nup," was the reply. "But this isn't a Chinese newspaper. It's a sign saying 'Get Your Clothes at Barneys'!"

Kiplinger's "Washington Is Like That" is still among the best-sellers . . . Its most engrossing chapter, we think, concerns the FBI . . . The thoroughness of the bureau is almost incredible. In the Mattson kidnaping case, 24,000 possible suspects were examined! Of the 211 kidnaping cases which were handled before it ceased to be a criminal industry, only two remain to be solved and the G-men are still working on them . . . Only one perfect crime was ever reported to the FBI. Not much may be said of it, for the man and woman who did the killing are influential members of their community and would inevitably demand huge damages if their identity were hinted at . . . The bureau knows when the murder was committed and where and how. But the body was never found, and the evidence was not the kind that a court would listen to. But, even now the FBI agents have been "getting" up in the morning with them, and "putting" them to bed at night—for seven years!

It's always interesting to trace the origin of words. Maj Paul Raborg reveals in "Mechanized Might" (Whittlesey) how the war tank got its name. The British built the first tanks during the last war in complete secrecy. Even the workmen who built them didn't know for what purpose they were being made. They were told the machines were to be used in Egypt for transporting large containers of water, and every record in connection with their manufacture was made under the heading "water-carrier." Eventually the men in the factories adopted the word "tank" for brevity. The name stuck and is now used by practically all countries.

F. Oechsner's arresting "This Is the Enemy" has this nifty . . . Goebbels' Romeoing is so brazen, Germans whisper that if he ever wanted to hide, he could never be found—if he slept in his own bed!

It's been Eddie Davis' (the cab driver-author) ambition to write a play for Bob Hope. He got that way one night 8 years ago when he shot gags at Hope while driving the comedian home in his cab. Hope, he says, gave the gags back to him with a push. Last year Davis collaborated with E. A. Ellington on a movie script designed for Hope. He sold it outright to Paramount. Paramount produced it with Hope, Crosby and Lamour; in fact, it's called "Road to Morocco." The title is Eddie's, too. But he had sold it outright, and the screen credits only Frank Butler and Don Hartman as authors. So until Hope reads it here, he won't know that "Road to Morocco" is Eddie Davis' way of "showing him!"

Notes of a New Yorker:

Washington's Louise Atwill, who is the ex-wife of Gen. MacArthur, was being driven home from a party the other night by a Senator . . . "Have you ever been sorry," he asked, "that you are no longer a great General's wife?"

"No, Senator," she said, "I haven't."

"But," he butted, "you'd now be making history!"

"Who made history with Napoleon," she reminded him, "Marie Louise or Josephine?"

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

In 749 war production plants, 75 per cent of 434,600 workers arrive by private automobiles. That's why war workers must have tires.

When it is understood that 54,000 communities in this country depend entirely upon highway transportation, the importance of the rubber situation will be appreciated.

There were 10.78 pounds of crude rubber in the average passenger car tire made in 1940. In 1941 the rubber content was increased to 10.85 pounds.

The overall weight of the average passenger car tire in 1940 was 21.55 pounds, while in 1941 it was 21.69 pounds.

There is a farmer in Osborne, Iowa, who still carries as a serviceable spare, a tire that came on his car as original equipment in 1917. He jacks up the wheels when the car is not in use.

A Special Message

TO ALL WHO WISH TO PURCHASE NEW FARM MACHINERY FOR 1943

We now have Application Blanks for Certificates to purchase New Rationed Farm Machinery.

It is necessary that all woul-be buyers of New Machinery fill out and present them to the County Rationing Authority as the first step in getting a New Machine.

There is much "red tape" involved and we know that the allotment of machinery for Iowa is so small that it can be used up in two counties.

So, if you expect to have any chance at all for anything new for next season, you had better start now. We will help you all we can.

Fred J. Arnold

• SPORTS FLASHES

K H S basketball schedule is in print at last. The Shamrocks lost their game out of five. The losses were to Britt 21 to 16. So the Shamrocks are kind of under the cloud of what they were figured to be. But by the looks of the last quarter of the Garner game we have a hunch that the Shamrocks are supposed to be. The just couldn't hit the hoop in many of the first quarters. Namely Belmond and Britt.

So far this year the games played and the scores you have for them are:

K H S		Belmond	18
Shamrocks	23	Britt	21
Shamrocks	46	Ventura	13
Reserves	19	Goodell	8
Shamrocks	26	Garner	10

This week we started the chapter on birds in Biology. We each had to choose a bird and tell about it. Then we had to draw a bird and put in the parts of it. This is just a long chapter but since there are not many birds around now we will discuss it more later on in the year.

PATIENCE is the guardian of faith the preserver of peace, the cherisher of love, the teacher of humility. Patience governs the flesh, strengthens the spirit, sweetens the temper, stifles anger, extinguishes envy, subdues; she bridles the tongue, refrains the hand, tramples upon temptations, endures persecutions, consummates martyrdom.

Patience adorns the woman and improves the man; is loved in a child, praised in a young man, admired in an old man; she is beautiful in either sex and every age.—Bishop Horne.

Jellies Lend Their Sparkle to Christmas Presents!

Christmas Jelly Gifts

Don't you like the sight of brightly colored jelly flirting gaily with red, green, silver and gold Christmas wrappings?

There's not a nicer present to give at Christmas time to many of your homemaker friends whom you have met at Red Cross meetings, nursing classes and knitting sessions this past year than a small box of assorted jellies and jams—fresh from your own kitchen.

Jelly-making in winter? Yes, indeed. Chances are that you put up a lot of fruit juice during the summer—without sugar—and now you have saved enough from your sugar ration to make up a few batches of jelly. It's perfect for gift-giving and fine for boosting your fast dwindling supply shelf.

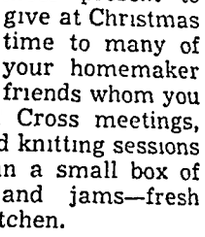
You can use winter fruits, too—cranberries, grapefruit, lemon and oranges. Whatever you make, the results will be received with real holiday cheers!

Remember if your sugar supply is slender, you can use corn syrup and honey. Just follow directions carefully.

Let's start the gift making with this tart, brightly colored marmalade:

Tangerine Marmalade.
(Makes 9 6-ounce glasses)
4 cups prepared fruit
7 cups sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, remove skins in quarters from 8 to 10 tangerines and discard white fibers on inside of skins and on peeled fruit. With a very sharp knife, cut rind into fine shreds. Add ¾ cup water and ⅛ teaspoon soda, bring to a boil, simmer, covered for 10 minutes. Dice peeled tangerines, add with juice to cooked rind, simmer, covered 20 minutes longer.



Measure sugar and prepared fruit into a kettle, filling up last cup with water if necessary. Mix well.

Bring to a full, rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire. Stir in bottled pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot marmalade at once.

You'll be dressing up many a meat extender and meat saver dish with pretty accompaniments during the coming months. Try this bright jelly with your lamb dishes:

Mint and Honey Jelly.
(Makes 5 6-ounce glasses)
¾ cup boiling water
2 tablespoons dried mint leaves
2½ cups strained honey

This Week's Menu
Brown Onion Soup
*Meat Balls with Sour Cream Sauce
Green Beans Carrots
Boiled Potatoes
Lettuce with French Dressing
Cranberry-Apple Compote
Cookies Beverage
*Recipe Given

Green food coloring
½ cup bottled pectin

Pour boiling water over mint Cover and let stand 15 minutes. Strain and add enough water to make ¾ cup Add honey and heat to boiling, adding coloring to tint a light green. Add pectin, stirring constantly Heat to full rolling boil. Remove from heat at once, skim and pour into sterile glasses Seal with paraffin.

Poultry of all kinds will be a favorite on your menus during the meat rationing period And what is chicken or turkey without cranberries or cranberry and orange relish? It's like meat without salt, pie without a good crust, in other words, incomplete.

Cranberry-Orange Relish.
(Makes 1 quart relish)
2 large oranges
4 cups cranberries
2 cups sugar or 1½ cups honey

Cut oranges into eighths and remove seeds. Force cleaned cranberries and orange (rind and pulp) through a food chopper. Mix well, add sugar or honey and stir until mixed. Make several hours before using. Pack in sterile glasses and seal.

Short on butter? You'll enjoy the sunny citrus fruit marmalade that makes toasted breads, muffins and biscuits really delicious:

Orange-Lemon-Grapefruit Marmalade.
(Makes 3 pints)
2 large oranges
1 large lemon
½ medium grapefruit
1½ quarts water per pound fruit
3 cups sugar

Wash fruit and cut into eighths. Remove seeds and white core and cut into thinnest possible slices. Weigh. For each pound of fruit, add 1½ quarts water. Bring slowly to the boiling point and cook ½ to ¾ hour or until fruit is tender. Set aside overnight. The next day measure pulp and juice—there should be 1 quart for each pound of fresh fruit. If there is more juice, boil it down. If there is less, add water to make it up. Add sugar and boil rapidly until syrup gives the jelly test—jells on a saucer, or two drops fall off spoon at same time as it is held in air—220 degrees. Cool 3 to 5 minutes. Turn into clean, dry glasses and seal with paraffin.

Meat Balls
(Serves 4)
6 slices enriched bread
½ cup milk
½ pound ground beef
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon minced onion
¾ cup sour cream

Pour milk over bread and let it stand 15 minutes. Press excess milk out of bread. Combine meat, bread, onion, salt and pepper. Shape into round, flat cakes. Fry in skillet in which a little fat has been placed. When brown, on both sides, add cream and simmer 5 to 7 minutes. Arrange balls on a platter with green beans, carrot strips and potatoes Serve sauce from meat.

Does the whipped cream get sulky? The cake fall at the crucial moment? The table decorations look flat and pointless? Explain your problem to Lynn Chambers and she'll tell you what to do about it. Write her at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for your reply.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lynn Says:

Boughs of Holly: Let's deck the house and the table with evergreen and bright berries. Here's how. Weave those extra branches you trimmed from the Christmas tree around wire—if you can still find some—and perk up with bright colored berries. Hang this on the front door or in the window—or place on the mirror on the table.

Interesting wreaths can be made by dipping boughs in soapsuds or white paint. Nestle fruit or cones inside the wreath for the table and your centerpiece is ready!

Shape freshly popped white popcorn into cone shapes and set on a green pedestal to look like a Christmas tree—this is lovely for the table. Stick cranberries or gumdrops among popcorn trees for color.

Christmas tree decorations will be fewer this year than before, but you can string sugared cookies and cranberries and use fluffs of cotton for the tree. Old fashioned candles are nice too.

THE BIRTH OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2 8-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins.—Matthew 1 21.

How shall we keep Christmas this year of our Lord 1942? That is a question which is pressed home to all of us by trying circumstances, growing wickedness—yes, by countless things which try to tell us that there just is not any use to try to keep Christmas as usual this year.

Well, then let's make it unusual! Let's have it more genuinely Christmas-like than ever. That's what we and this weary world need. The way to do it is to make this more than ever a Christmas centering in Christ. Doing that will mean that this year we will

I. Keep Christmas With Joy (vv. 8-10).

"Merry Christmas" may sound a little flat and empty this year, for there may be little to create merriment. "We wish you happiness at Christmas!" will probably not fit very well, because happiness depends on what happens—and a good many of the wrong kind of things have happened to most (perhaps all) of us.

But joy—that is quite another matter We do not tire of the reminder that joy is something which God gives in the heart and which goes so far down into the depths of man's soul that the surface tempests of life cannot disturb it. Remember Paul who was "sorrowful" on the surface "yet ever rejoicing" in heart (II Cor 6 10).

The ground of our Christmas joy is the good tidings of Christ's coming. That has always been the real heart of Christmas joy, but often it has been obscured by tinsel and trimmings This year let's get back to essentials

And let it be said that this does not mean that we are going to omit all the precious little customs and pleasantries which have had their innocent part in making this a holiday season No indeed; let us have them all, or as many as we can, but make the heart of it all Christian joy.

II. Keep Christmas With Assurance (vv. 11-14).

With so many other things (many of which we had foolishly regarded as permanent and sure) failing us, it is a delight to have something sure to tie to, and we have it this Christmas. Christ the Saviour has come!

Not only do we know that He was born, lo these many years ago, as the Babe in the manger in Bethlehem town, but we know that He still lives! He was born, died for our sins, was raised for our justification, ever lives to intercede for us, and He is one day to come again. The evidence for all this is plentiful and satisfying, and gives us abundant ground for the keeping of Christmas even this year in assurance.

This thought leads us to our third point. We have joy and assurance in order that we may

III. Keep Christmas As a Testimony (vv. 15-20).

Having found the Christ, the shepherds "made known abroad" (v. 17) the good news. They returned "glorifying and praising God" (v. 20).

They, too, lived in a time of great darkness. They were part of the people of whom the prophet said: "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined" (Isa 9 2). That light was Christ, the "light of the world."

There could be no more appropriate time to testify to the world, whose lights have failed, that we keep Christmas because it tells of the coming into this world of the unfailing Light, the One who said of Himself: "I am the light of the world" (John 9·5).

Some day, if Christ should tarry, the world will return to a measure of sanity. One of the realities it will face is that the temporal and material is transitory, that a dependence on them is certain to disappoint. The spiritual and the eternal will then have new opportunity to commend itself to the hearts of men. That is why we want to keep Christmas this year as a ringing, joyous testimony to our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

The writer of these notes does not often hear from his readers, scattered all over the continent (yes, and in foreign lands), but he counts them all as his friends. He prays for them, and counts it a joy to serve them through these lessons. So, since they are his friends, he says to every one of them who sees these lines: "May God make this a blessed Christmas. Through the clouds of trying circumstances may you see His face. Above the noisy clamor of this world may you hear the angel's song. And may the joy of the Lord fill your soul this Christmas Day!"

Second Draftee Was All For Taking No Chances

The draftee on his way to camp asked a stranger, Draftee Number Two: "Do you have a match?"

"Sure," was Number Two's reply, "but I'm not giving you any."

"Why not?" asked the first.

"Well," explained Two, "we'll get to chinning. And if we get to chinning we'll wind up buddies. If we are in the same squad, then we'll both volunteer together for special missions. Maybe we'll even get a dangerous night job, then we'll have to use flashlights. And if the flashlights should go out some night in enemy territory, I sure don't want to be stranded with someone who doesn't even carry matches."

THANKS, EVERYBODY!

We wish to take this way of saying "Thank You!" to our many friends, neighbors and relatives in this community who helped to make our Golden Wedding Anniversary celebration a big success. We also want to thank all who remembered us with gifts, cards and congratulations.

Mr and Mrs. Wm. Bell.

A Grace For Christmas Dinner

"Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name" On the day that marks the birth of Thy dear Son, we give our thanks "for food and friends and all the good Thy mercy send" We ask that we be strengthened in our bodies by the food here set before us, and strengthened also in our deep desire to be worthy of the great assurance of Thy love That assurance we need to remember now, when countless battlefield are drenched with blood, when millions of our men are engaged in mortal combat with our foes or are making ready for the awful fray

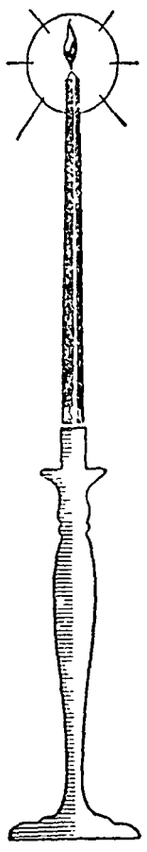
Be Thou with our fighting men wherever they may be Make them strong for the work they have to do, or to endure their suffering Give them to realize, this day, that we are ever near to them, through Thee We love them greatly We are proud of them in their brave service to our beloved land We look forward confidently to their return to us victorious We look to them, also, to carry forward Thy work on earth- here and everywhere in the years that are to come

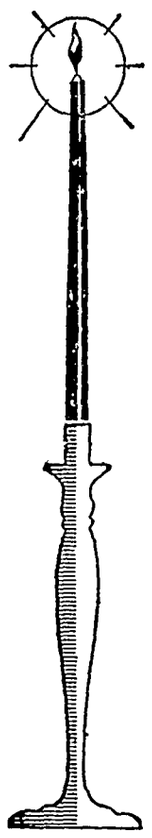
If, perchance, he who has gone from our own family to war has lost his earthly life, or if he shall lose it, help us to remember that "he who loses his life for My sake, shall find it"

Give to us all the will to live rightly, and through our tears to smile joyously in the thought that we shall be together again

We give Thee thanks for the privilege we enjoy of living in a land that honors Thee and has Thy counsel for its guide- a land which, in addition, is beautiful and bountiful We thank Thee for the light to see the right and for the chance to fight for it, here or elsewhere We thank Thee for the gift of Thy dear Son who was born this day in a manger and has become our friend and Father, and who is revealed to us most plainly when we pray at home as now, or in a public place of worship

We humbly implore Thy blessing. Amen.





Editor's Note The above article was written by Walter P McGuire, editor of the Southside Virginia News at Petersburg, Va in the December 10 issue and according to Mr McGuire "in the hope of bringing this note of encouragement and comfort into homes of fighting men whose absence will be felt most poignantly on Christmas day and might depress unduly"

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEES GET INSTRUCTIONS ON HEMP CONTRACTS

All township AAA committeemen were called together Friday to get final instructions on growing of hemp and completing contracts. Township meetings will be held at which farmers will be given an opportunity to sign hemp contracts

There are 125,000 acres of land that are suitable for growing the hemp in the west half of the county, and farmers are asked to contract 4,000 acres of hemp for 1943. This means that only 3 2 per cent of this land will be planted to hemp, and when the 4,000 acres are contracted, that will be all that the plant will be able to handle.

However, this does not mean that all hemp will be grown in the west half of the county. There is suitable soil for growing hemp in other parts of the county and it is expected that some hemp will be grown in other areas, too.

LEDGES ZOO TO BE DISCONTINUED FOR DURATION

Wildcat In Ledges Park Zoo Emerging From Artificial Den

With meat rationing becoming a reality, the problem of providing food for more than 50 birds and animals in the Ledges Park Zoo has lead to action by the State Conservation Commission to abandon this popular display. Care of the animals has necessitated the employment of an extra man, and during the past few months there has been a sharp reduction in park attendance.

The animals in the zoo for the most part have been found injured in the wild and turned over to conservation officers and have finally found safety and shelter in the animal pens near Boone Negotiations with large zoos are under way to provide homes for the larger predatory animals. The injured animals that would be unable to survive in the wild have been given to the zoological department of Iowa State College for study purposes. The raccoon will be held in rearing pens and released to the wild in the spring. The remainder of the animals will be released in the Ledges Park to add to the native animal population. In releasing the animals to the wild, the pen doors are left open, and the animals are free to come and go until they become accustomed to freedom. Because of the fact that a number of the animals are in hibernation and will not emerge until spring, complete abandonment of the zoo will not be possible until the middle of April next year. If and when conditions warrant, the zoo can be quickly repopulated with native birds and animals.

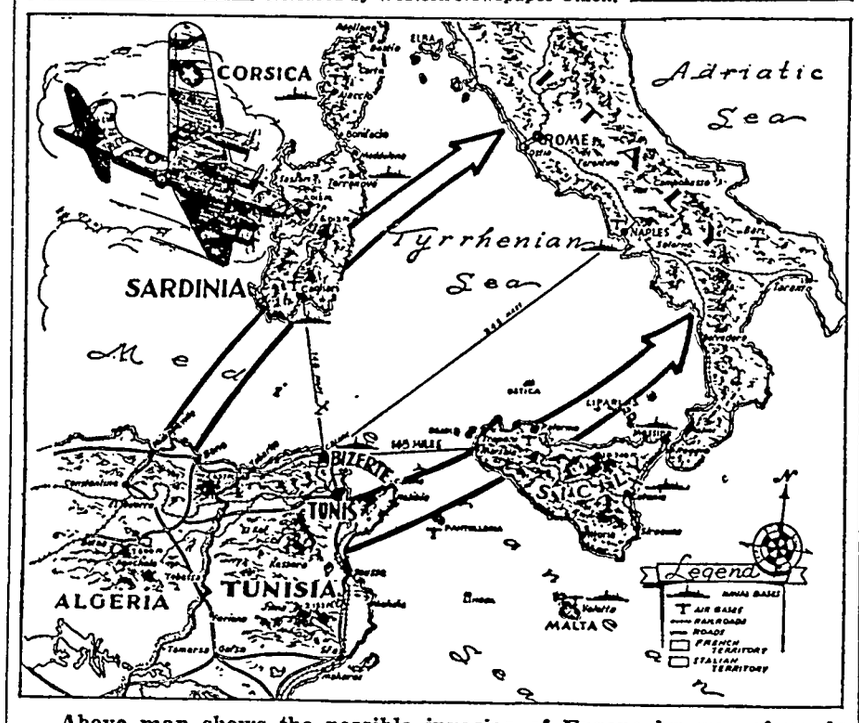
Manpower Commission Rules Draft As FDR Halts All Service Enlistments; Wickard to Direct U. S. Food Program; New Front Threatens the Axis in Libya

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



Above map shows the possible invasion of Europe by way of newly won bases in French North Africa. While the Allied drive had been stalled temporarily waiting for essential reinforcements, military men were certain that the last Axis strongholds would soon be in Allied hands.

U. S. FOOD SUPPLY:
Under Control

When President Roosevelt appointed Claude R. Wickard, secretary of agriculture, to be national food administrator, he set in motion a vast program that would eventually touch almost every pantry shelf in the United Nations. For Wickard was given specific control over food production, processing and distribution not only to U. S. civilians and the U. S. military but was also made responsible for such distribution to our fighting allies over the entire globe.

In the executive order creating the new food setup, the President directed Wickard to consult with Donald Nelson of the WPB and with Leon Henderson of the OPA in working out policies effecting price control and industrial use of foodstuffs. He was given direct charge of rationing scarce food items among U. S. civilians and for the allocation of food supplies between the civilian population and the military forces after consultation with military and naval heads.

Thus all government agencies charged with supplying food to civilians were placed in direct charge of a single head with the expectation that much of the confusion surrounding this problem would now disappear. This was the first time since World War I when Herbert Hoover was national food administrator that any single control had been placed on this exceedingly vital nationwide program.

Also streamlined in the same executive order was the department of agriculture, as Wickard was directed to consolidate into one division all agencies concerned with food production and into another division all those agencies concerned with food distribution.

Wickard was also made a member of the War Production board and was given direction of food imports through the Board of Economic Warfare. His new job will give him a greater voice in the allocation of farm machines, fertilizers and other farm aid which will be necessary to reach the high 1943 agricultural goals.

NO HIBERNATION:
On Russian Steppes

When Russia's armies first struck back at the Germans in the opening round of the winter offensive on that front it looked as if the Nazis had decided to dig in and hibernate until spring would come and the going would be easier. But after these first thrusts by the Russians, the Hitler troops came to life and on every front "counterattack" was the key word in even the Moscow reports of the fighting.

Despite this, the Russians said that in a single week they had destroyed 192 German planes and had succeeded in "repulsing" these strong Nazi counterattacks. The issue was far from settled.

In fact, on the first anniversary of last year's counter-offensive before Moscow, the Russians extended this year's winter campaign deep into the Caucasus. In this sector, as around Stalingrad, there was great loss of German life and the Russians claimed thousands of prisoners were taken.

ENLISTMENTS:
Halted by FDR

In a move designed to tighten control over the manpower situation, President Roosevelt suspended enlistments in the army and navy, transferred selective service to the War Manpower commission and authorized priorities over civilian employment.

For the first time in the nation's history, physically qualified men are forbidden to enlist, and for the first time in history the navy and marine corps will take others than volunteers.

Meanwhile the war department ordered suspension of inductment for all men 38 years of age and older. Arrangements were made to give honorable discharges to certain men in the upper age brackets who are already in service.

The presidential order expanded the powers of Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower commission so that he will have the power to determine not only who goes into the armed services but what civilian jobs the stay-at-homes can take. The office of director of selective service, held by Maj Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, will continue but Hershey is subject to McNutt's authority. All local draft boards were directed to continue functioning as in the past, except that future orders will come from the War Manpower commission.

TUNISIA:
'Holding Action'

Resistance had stiffened in northern Tunisia. The stalled British First army, with its American components, was fighting a bitter holding action in the face of daring German dive-bombing and tank attacks in the mountains while waiting for important re-inforcements with which to resume the offensive.

A new threat to the Axis in Libya was shaping up in the direction of the Sahara desert, more than 800 miles south of Tunis. The Morocco radio, broadcasting a report from the headquarters of French Gen. Henri Giraud said native companies had occupied heights on the Algeria-Tripolitania frontier east of Djanet. The latter place is in the southeastern corner of Algeria, about 30 miles from the Libyan border.

It is on the flank of a possible route of invasion by Fighting French forces who could advance from Fort Lamy in French Equatorial Africa through southern Libya.

An Allied communique said there was no change in the situation at the front, but that heavy aerial assaults were continuing on the docks and airfields at Bizerte and Tunis.

Naples Blasted

The Naples harbor, a major supply depot for Axis forces defending Bizerte, Tunis and Tripoli, felt the great weight of war when American four-engined Consolidated bombers hurled 100,000 pounds of explosives at Italian battleships, cruisers, destroyers and supply dumps. Reports from Allied headquarters in North Africa said that "it will take the Italians a long time to repair the damage done to Naples harbor." Huge fires were raging when the bombers, which had met no enemy planes, returned to their base.

SEA BATTLES:
For Land Goals

Around Guadalcanal in the Solomons and around the island of New Guinea in the southwest Pacific a continuation of the "double-barreled" strategy on both sides featured the U. S.-Jap struggle for these footholds. It was the strategy of sea forces trying to co-ordinate their activity with that of the land units fighting each other in fierce jungle struggles.

Every time the Japs would try and land additional re-inforcements for their hard pressed armies at these two points, the U. S. fleet would rush in to smash up these landing attempts.

Meanwhile the U. S. strategy was having a little more success by landing a huge AEF on New Zealand. Where and when this army would eventually make its stand was of course a military secret, but the "arm-chair" strategists believed it was headed to relieve the marines and army fighters on Guadalcanal.

General MacArthur's problem of rounding up the Japs in New Guinea was accomplished only by the slowest kind of fighting—advances were figured in yards and feet. But as they retreated, the enemy had not far to go until he reached the sea. Biggest question marks was whether or not the U. S. fleet could spare the ships to smash Jap evacuation attempts.

NIMITZ:
'We'll Crush Japan'

Our victories in the Pacific foreshadow the eventual complete destruction of Japanese power, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the U. S. Pacific Fleet, said in a review of the accomplishment of the fleet for the past 12 months.

Nimitz pointed out that "most of the ships caught by the enemy's surprise attack on Pearl Harbor are on their way back to the fleet, better fighting ships than ever, and our citadel in Hawaii has been greatly strengthened."

Asked if the Japs would be driven from the Aleutians, he said:

"Emphatically yes. As to time, I don't want to say anything that would disclose our plans, but we will drive the Japs out before they can do any damage."

He said the outlook was good for advancing into Japanese home waters in the Western Pacific. "However," he said, "this requires a great massing of men, planes, ships and materiel. We will need superiority in these things in order to force our way into enemy areas. Our factories are meeting our demands for the necessary materiel."

FACE-LIFTING:
For Government

As 1942 drew toward its end U. S. citizens had a chance to look back over the past few weeks and see just how much the national administrative picture had changed.

In a short period of time every important phase of American life had taken on a new complexion. All of this meant that the nation was settling down to a real all-out effort aimed at winning the war in the shortest possible time.

Here is the new picture:

James F. Byrnes had been named director of economic stabilization. Donald Nelson had reorganized and streamlined the War Production board. Claude Wickard has been made national food administrator and will work with Leon Henderson in the rationing of U. S. food supplies. Paul McNutt was given complete control of the manpower problem. Harold Ickes has a brand-new appointment as petroleum administrator for war. William Jeffers was in charge of the nation's rubber supply.

PAUL McNUTT
His headache is manpower.

Those who had urged the President to delegate his vast wartime powers could now study the new executive "war cabinet" and could place responsibility for the various phases of the national effort elsewhere than the White House.

LAST PROJECT:
For WPA

WPA, largest relief agency of the nation's greatest depression, is passing out of existence. On order of President Roosevelt WPA activities will end in many states by February 1, 1943, and will be completely out of the national picture by June 30, 1943. Wartime pickup in private employment was cited as the reason for putting an end to the spending of millions of dollars through the medium of "work-relief."

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

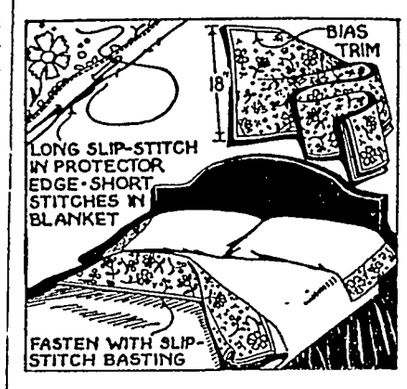
ICE CREAM: Upon orders of the War Production board, the manufacture of ice cream has been curtailed about 20 per cent during December and January. The move was taken to provide more butter.

WAGER: An improved Allied position has brought a betting increase in London as to the war's duration, with some brokers wagering even money it would end by June, 1943.

TRANSPORTATION: A Swedish dispatch reports the Germans have directed that all freight cars in Norway be shipped to Germany, presumably because of a severe shortage of rolling stock in the reich.

SUBMARINE: Germany has developed a submarine with surface speed great enough to overtake all but extremely fast merchant vessels, it is reported.

ON THE HOME FRONT with RUTH WYETH SPEARS



BLANKETS are worth their weight in uniforms, so let's protect them from unnecessary wear and from extra cleanings by covering the upper edges. A strip of muslin would do but why not use a pretty material? They will cost no more when made of attractive material, and a set of matching pillow cases may be made to go with each blanket protector.

Try to find a flower print with pastel tones and then bind the protector in bias tape that will repeat one of the flower tones. For blankets 72 inches wide, two yards of 36-inch material will make two protectors or one, plus trimming bands for a pair of pillow cases and a sheet. Five yards of bias tape will be needed to bind the edges of each protector. The sketch shows how material is basted in place with slip-stitching through the bindings. In this way they are easily removed for washing.

Gibraltar, West Gate of Mediterranean, Helping U. S. in North African Invasion

Gun Bristled Port, Fort Has Been Hit Often From Air

Under the friendly protection of Gibraltar's guns on land, at sea and in the air, ships bearing American troops, tanks, aircraft and ammunition steamed through the historic corridor to invade the north coast of French Africa at the same time Yanks were landing on the African northwest coast.

Once again, the Strait of Gibraltar, one of the world's busiest bottlenecks, became a gateway to war. Now the western Mediterranean had joined the war strafed eastern Mediterranean to make that sea one great battle arena.

Time and time again Axis air power had attacked Gibraltar. But to no avail. The "Rock" stood the air harassment. It can, and will stand further and greater attacks.

The Strait of Gibraltar is only nine miles wide. Here Europe and Africa come nearer meeting than at any other place. Britain's Rock of Gibraltar stronghold on the north side of the strait is not situated as is often supposed, at the narrowest stretch of the strait. It is more than 13 miles from the nearest point on the opposite coast.

Roughly three miles long and less than a mile wide, Gibraltar is surrounded on all but one side by Spanish territory. In the north it is joined to Spain proper by a low, sandy isthmus. To the south its nearly 1,400-foot-high bulk looks across the strait toward its mountain mate in Africa soaring above the Spanish Moroccan port of Ceuta. Together the towering rocks were known to the ancients as the "Pillars of Hercules." One legend has it that they were united in a single mountain range until Hercules broke it apart in order to open a way between the Mediterranean and the Atlantic.

A market scene in the Moorish city of Tangier which sweeps up the slopes of the southern or African side of the Strait of Gibraltar. Tangier is in the International Zone, a nick out of the Spanish Morocco which caps Africa's northwestern shoulder.

These are rural folk who stream into Tangier on market days. Their stock in trade is pottery.

An air view of the Rock of Gibraltar. It rises in almost sheer cliffs out of the Mediterranean on the left, but sweeps more gently toward the Bay of Algeciras on the right where the ship basins are shown. The city of Gibraltar rises from the harbor in the center of the photograph. The Rock bristles with guns set in man-made tunnels and recesses.

Craglike Cliffs on East Side.

On the eastern side looking toward the open Mediterranean where the craglike cliffs make an almost sheer drop into the sea, no direct attack on Gibraltar has ever been possible. On the western side, however, is the city of Gibraltar (normally 20,000 population) overlooking the British naval base with its man-made harbor through which most of the citadel's food and other supplies must come.

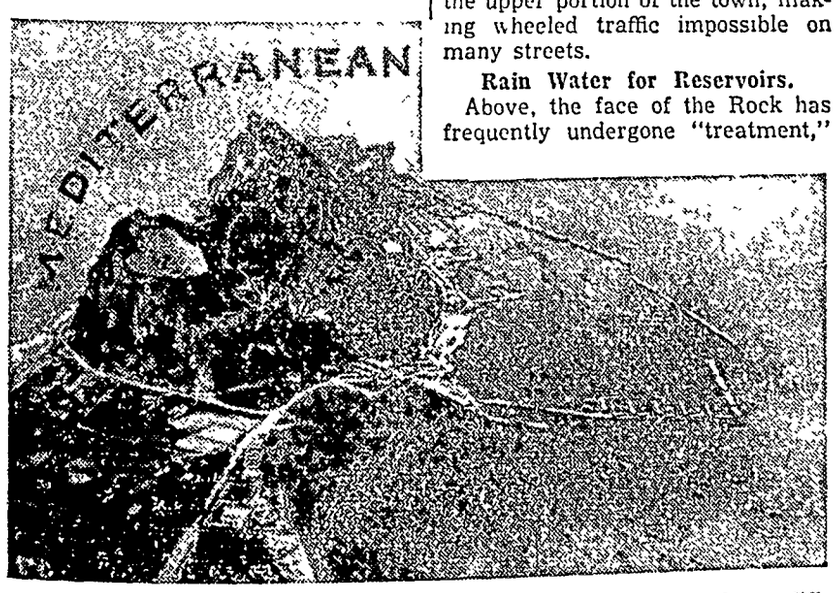
While the Rock is known to every school child as a symbol of strength, the city is known to but few. It is a British city if the traveler confines his observations to British soldiers who are everywhere, British "bobbies" who appear as if they had just emerged from a London police station, British flags that top the masts of municipal and government buildings, and British warships and commercial vessels that outnumber all others anchored in the harbor.

But a peacetime sidewalk study reveals a strange mixture. In a short stroll you see Scotchmen in kilts brush past turbaned Moors from the other side of the strait; and Cadiz mingle with sturdy Spaniards from Madrid, Malaga, Greeks; brown-skinned Hindus and Egyptians jostle Levantine Jews; and dusky Senegal Negroes rub elbows with Chinese from Canton.

The city spreads up the side of the Rock from the shore of the broad Algeciras bay, to a height of 250 feet. Long flights of steps lead to the upper portion of the town, making wheeled traffic impossible on many streets.

Rain Water for Reservoirs.

Above, the face of the Rock has frequently undergone "treatment," since the Moors occupied it centuries ago. A fortified castle dating back to Moorish occupation still stands in one of its recesses, sharply contrasting with the more modern British ramparts. Tunnels have been bored, paths dynamited and in places its rough "countenance" has been given an application of cement upon which rain water is caught and drained into reservoirs of the city.



Ceuta, across the strait, for decades has been an important military and penal station for Spain. It is predominantly a Spanish town. Its mosque, which recalls Moorish domination, has been used as a cathedral for several hundred years.

Only 28 miles to the east, Tangier presents another picture—a Moorish picture that could be far removed from Gibraltar. From the harbor it resembles a white sheet spread from the seashore up the African slopes. Its spotless white walls, glistening in the sunlight, suggest that "clean up-paint up week" is perpetually observed there.

Once inside the city walls the traveler is bewildered by the maze of lanes which the Tangierians call their streets. So narrow are they that wheeled vehicles have never rumbled over the cobbles and pedestrians are compelled to jump into doorways to avoid being sideswiped or trampled upon by donkeys with bulging loads.

In the business section coffee houses offer the principal Tangier recreation. Patrons sit in groups on the floor, playing with queerly marked cards, or lean against the walls sipping beverages, smoking pipes, and sometimes singing to the tune of a native orchestra.

Next door an unkempt shopkeeper, seemingly more interested in keeping his long-stemmed pipe lighted than in making a sale, presides over a cupboardlike shop displaying pottery, brassware and trinkets.

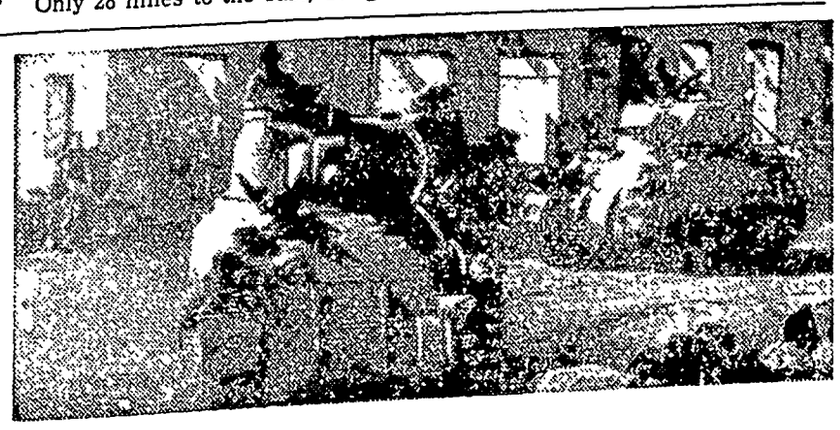
An American's description of a Tangier residential district would be "more narrow winding streets hemmed in by high white walls." The walls are blank except for doorways leading into courts. A peep through an open door reveals some of the city's garden spots—flower beds surrounding fountains, shaded by lofty palms. Some courts, however, are miniature farmyards where cattle and fowl are fattened for market.

A visit to the market place is well worth a trip to Tangier. There city folk mingle with the rural folk. Men, women and children, camels, horses, donkeys, dogs and fowls, all are huddled together in the dust amid piles of vegetables, fruit, nuts, candies, kitchen utensils and homemade shoes.

Around the edge of the market place letter writers and fortune tellers ply their professions; black, portly Sudanese Negroes in tatters dance to the tune of metal cymbals and discs dangling about their bodies, and the fire eater and snake charmer fascinate throngs with their clever tricks.

Modern improvements have come to Tangier in a somewhat small way. The city has not, and for a long time will not, outgrow the East's special taxi—the single passenger donkey — because of the narrow streets; telephones are readily available and there is a modern hospital, built by the French.

The Old 'Pincer Play' In Action Once Again



Having passed through Gibraltar, the Yanks landed in Algeria and headed east toward Tunisia, Libya. The British tanks shown are heading west through Libya to put the pressure on the Axis from the east side, while the Yanks, assisted by the French, will put the force on from the west side.

Mostly Heathens Live on Jap Held Lomblen Isle

The island of Lomblen, seized by the Japanese according to Axis report, is one of the small islands of the Netherlands Indies extending eastward from Java. It is about 60 miles northwest of Timor, and approximately 400 miles from Australia.

Nearly all of Lomblen's 32,000 dusky natives are heathens, worshipping wooden idols, generally snakes or crocodiles. Inland their villages are built mostly on the hillstops for protection, while along the coast they long preferred mountain-side locations, above the water. Since western influence came in many villages have been built along the beaches.

Mountains extend across the north and south sides of the island, topped by the smoking volcano of Lobetola, rising more than 5,000 feet. The more level central portion of the island is planted principally to sago, with coconut plantations scattered throughout the lower areas.

The island is irregular in outline, with many deep indentations too shallow for harbors, but affording a variety of fish. The island's greatest length, northeast-southwest, is a little over 50 miles.

Lomblen is one of a group known as the Solor islands and was ruled by the Netherlands governor on Timor. Dutch possession was long disputed by Portugal, but sovereignty was finally settled by treaty in 1859, when certain Portuguese financial obligations were cancelled.

Daily Haul of Sharks Is Taken Off Florida Coast

Axis U-boat operations off Florida haven't stopped commercial fishermen from bringing in their daily hauls of sharks.

In fact the war that cut America's important Norwegian source of cod liver oil has boomed the domestic shark-fishing industry. The shark's liver—weighing almost a fourth of the total weight of the sea denizen and containing as much as 80 per cent of the vitamin A-rich oil—is a big contribution to the health of the nation.

Over half of the vitamin A manufactured in the United States now comes from shark livers. Demand forced prices for whole sharks in California alone from a few hundred dollars a ton in 1941 to more than $1,500, says a National Geographic Society bulletin.

But sharks have more than their livers to contribute to commerce. It has been said that every part of a shark can be used but its breath. Its fins—lopped off as soon as the fish is dead—find their way into the soupbowls of the Orientals. Fins often bring as much as $2.50 a pound.

Automobile Dim-Outs

Operation of motor vehicles under dim-out conditions is under study at Hebron, Ohio, to determine what night road markings will be necessary if and when automobiles all over the nation will be operated with blackout equipment.

Agencies participating in the tests are the Ohio department of highways, the U. S. public roads administration, the OCD and the village of Hebron.

From these studies proper vehicle lighting equipment and the most effective traffic markings will be determined.

Under observation in the tests are center lines of various types, intersection and railroad crossing markings, guard rail reflectorization and the many other types of highway signs.

Specially designed headlights, providing 35 candle power instead of the usual 60,000 candle power and reflecting no illumination above the horizontal, are being used in the tests.

Test cars also are fitted with dim-out tail lights so designed that four points of lights are visible at 60 feet and one point at 160 feet.

Unlucky Friday?

The European association of misfortune with Friday undoubtedly arises from the fact that the Crucifixion of Christ occurred on that day. The English custom of executing public criminals on Friday strengthened fear of this day. The belief that 13 is an unlucky number is derived from the Last Supper of Our Lord and His twelve disciples. Another source of superstition may be traced to the use in law courts of 12 jurors and a judge to fix guilt.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Rubber is used on planes for lining gas tanks and fuel lines, for de-icing instruments, for insulating cabins with weatherstripping, for lining flying suits to make them moisture-proof and for dozens of other purposes.

Proper inflation means maximum miles. A tire under-inflated 20 per cent (24 instead of 30 pounds) will reduce its life by 15 per cent and 25 per cent of the mileage will be lost in a tire that is 30 per cent under-inflated.

The Baruch Committee anticipated that 53,000 long tons of rubber would be imported by the U. S. in the last 18 months starting July 1st last.

No more auto chases in movies for the duration. No more turns at high speed on squealing tires and no more new cars. Possible audience reaction to the waste of rubber — and speeding — brought the taboo.

IS THERE A SANTA CLAUS?

For many years there has been a newspaper classic printed in hundreds of papers throughout the United States each year at Christmas time We again print the story which originated in the New York Sun many years ago Here it is:

IS THERE A SANTA CLAUS?

Dear Editor—I am eight years old Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus

Papa says: "If you see it in the Sun, it's so"

Please tell me the truth: "Is there a Santa Claus?"

Virginia O'Hanlon.

Virginia, your little friends are wrong They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or little children's, are little In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, a compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus? You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see Did you ever see fairies dancing on your lawn? Of course not but that's no proof that they are not there Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world

You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, or even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal Beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding

No Santa Claus? Thank God; he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood

WHY THE FIRE TRUCK IS PAINTED RED

Somebody asked why the Klemme fire truck is painted red. Here's the answer:

Fire Trucks have four wheels and carry eight men.

Eight plus four equals twelve.

Twelve inches equals one foot.

A foot is a ruler.

A ruler is Queen Mary.

Queen Mary is a ship which sails the seven seas.

The sea is full of fish.

The fish have fins.

The Finns are fighting the Russians.

The Russians are Red.

The fire trucks are rusin' . . .

Therefore fire trucks are red.

Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my tires to keep,
And if I wake at morning's dawn,
I pray the Lord my tires are on.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The mess kit is one of the most important items in the Soldier's equipment. It consists generally of a pan, a plastic canteen and cup, a fork, knife and spoon, all in a canvas pack cover. The total cost runs up to about $2.00.

Canteens and other items such as handles on knives and forks, formerly made of aluminum, are now plastic. Alloy has replaced stainless steel. You can buy many of these mess kits for our boys with your purchases of War Bonds and Stamps. Invest at least 10 percent of your income in War Bonds or Stamps every pay day and top the quota in your county. U S Treasury Department

GREEN COLONIAL FURNACE SERVICE

Obituary Of James Arthur Schneider

JAMES ARTHUR SCHNEIDER was born December 8, 1871, on a farm near Froelich, Clayton County, Iowa, the third of a family of eight children born to his parents Henry and Sarah Schneider

He was baptised in the Christian faith at the Evangelical Church at Froelich, Iowa

His childhood days were spent on the farm and he attended a nearby rural school.

On December 17th, 1902, at the age of 31 years, he was united in marriage to Ella Mathilda Arnold They began housekeeping on the Schneider home farm near Monona, Iowa, where they lived seven years Later they purchased a farm near Goodell, Iowa, where they now reside, and where they have lived continuously for 33 years, with the exception of six years spent in Twin Falls, Idaho, where they moved in an effort to find relief for Mr. Schneider's asthma

The United Brethern Church of Goodell was Mr Schneider's church home and his place of worship.

Although he suffered from asthma for many years, he did not let it spoil his disposition; he was always friendly, kind-hearted and honest in his dealings. For the past two years his ailment grew gradually worse, and the end came Saturday evening, December 19, 1942.

He reached the age of 71 years, and 11 days.

He leaves besides his wife, three sisters: Alma and Edna of Mason City, Iowa, Anna of Los Angeles, California; one brother, Lafe Schneider of Twin Falls, Idaho; and other more distant relatives and friends.

"What is this mystery that men call death?
My friend before me lies; in all save breath
He seems the same as yesterday. His face
So like to life, so calm, bears not a trace
Of that great change which all of us so dread.
I gaze on him and say: He is not dead,
But sleeps; and soon he will arise and take
Me by the hand. I know he will awake
And smile on me as he did yesterday;
And he will have some gentle word to say,
Some kindly deed to do; for loving thought
Was warp and woof of which his life was wrought.
He is not dead. Such souls forever live
In boundless measure of the love they give."

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good heath is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

CEDAR RAPIDS

The New York Scene:

Sallies in Our Alley: A drama critic was saying he had to cover a new show, although advance reports revealed it was a stinker . . . "Then why don't you skip it?" he was asked . . . "I gotta go," he groaned, "I need the sleep!" . . . Milton Berle, entertaining at a nearby army camp, rocked his audience with this: "What kind of a place is this, anyway? As I came in here a big soldier came up to me and said: 'Are you Milton Berle?' When I said yes, he said: 'I want you to know you've always been No. 1 on my Hit Parade'—and then he hit me!"

PRAYER:

He's yours now and since I can't have him back,
I want to tell you certain things to do:
He likes his door left open—just a crack—
(The dark can scare a little guy of two).
Put Mother Goose upon the nearest shelf,
And keep a shabby "Teddy" ever near
And when you hear him laughing to himself
Call all the Angels in—so they can hear;

Be good to him and give him all the things
That I can never give him anymore . . .
A puppy dog, a plane with silver wings,
A Noah's Ark to sail the nursey floor;

And, Mary, when small Angels go to bed,
Lean down for me—and kiss his curly head.—Martha.

New York Street Scene: We overheard it at the corner of 58th and 5th the other sundown, while waiting for the lights to switch . . . The cabbie, who recognized us, explained what happened . . . His impatient passenger kept screaming at him to never mind the lights—but hurry to 42nd Street—she had a date and was late . . . So he stopped and barked: "Lady, this is where you change for the aeroplane!"

New York Novelette: He was 1-A and waiting to be called . . . So they decided to take what happiness they could and blend before he entered the army . . . To set the day, he called his draft board to find out how much time they had before he would go . . . At first they couldn't find his card . . . Then they discovered an error . . . A careless clerk had filed it among the list of draftees who had died since registering . . . The board informed him that he would be inducted within a week . . . Where they could have stolen years of happiness, they now have but a few days . . . They were married yesterday and will part Monday . . . If he hadn't phoned, he probably wouldn't have been called for the duration.

Former CBS news editor Matthew Gordon has joined the literary legions fighting Axis propaganda with a punchy book, "News Is a Weapon" (Knopf) . . . He reports that when Harold Denny, the N. Y. Times newsboy, returned to this country after being in a Nazi prison, he said: "The Nazi official questioned me about the New York Times, which he evidently hated, and revealed more knowledge of this newspaper's internal organization than I had myself. He told me of a staff change that I verified on arriving in New York!" . . . Actually the staff change was no secret. The Times itself mentioned it. But the incident illustrates how closely Nazis follow our press, because they know it is one of their most formidable enemies.

James Gordon Bennett Sr. became a journalist in the 1820s . . . When he died in 1872 he was called "The World's Most Infamous Journalist" and a "black-hearted, contemptible libeler" by his kindlier enemies . . . Bennett was the first Washington correspondent before starting the old N. Y. Herald, which he created in a cellar, with candles as the only source of light. His initial investment was $500. He was the entire staff, including porter . . . He is blamed for so-called "yellow journalism," and his coverage of a famous trial in 1836 is still a Broadway classic. You can read it in Oliver Carlson's "The Man Who Made News," published by Duell, Sloan and Pearce, Inc. . . . Newspaper men of his day liked him because he paid them well . . . Bennett's old foe, Horace Greeley, wrote Bennett's eulogy, and Bennett would have approved because it was no attempt at a good notice . . . At his funeral every important editor in New York served as a pallbearer . . . He must have been good.

When Richard Tregaskis, the INS correspondent who authored "Guadalcanal Diary" (the February Book of the Month), first applied for a job with the news service, he was hired on the strength of a unique qualification—a full and working knowledge of the Portuguese language. He was put into the cable department with a view to eventual service in Lisbon or Rio de Janeiro . . . Came December 7 and Pearl Harbor, and where was Tregaskis assigned? To the Solomon Islands with the U. S. marines!

DYNAMIC CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—Romans 12 1-3, 9-21
GOLDEN TEXT—Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.—Romans 12 21.

Dynamic—there is a word with an attraction for both young and old. It speaks of power, but not just brute force There is personality with its winsomeness, challenge, accomplishment, all around attractiveness and usefulness as the essential element of this kind of power

It may surprise some of us to hear that this is the kind of life every Christian may, and ought, to live, by the grace of God. Not that each one will have the gifts of leadership, or the personal qualifications which mark some for places of public service, but that each may have divine power working in and through his life.

Such a life can be lived only as God's power is able to flow through a surrendered life This must begin in the individual, and in the depth of his own heart Then it will appear in his relationship to his brethren in the church, and ultimately in his life in the world

I. In the Heart (vv 1-3).

It is only the believer who is ready to serve God. The unregenerate man needs cleansing, not consecration Having that, he is ready for the transforming work of God which will bring him out into a place of freedom and spiritual strength. Notice that this is brought about by an act of the will We are to present ourselves as a living sacrifice That is our part, God will respond in blessing.

Conformity to this world (v 2) is the blight on the church and on the individual believer which so hampers the work of Christ in the world today The worldly Christian is an anomaly.

The call then is for non-conformity to the world and surrender to the transforming grace of God. Then there will be both true humility (v. 3) and full confidence in God's power.

II. In the Church (vv 9-16).

The dynamic living of the Christian is not something to be paraded before the world, a thing of which we may be proud It begins, as we have seen, in the heart, and then gives itself in gracious, affectionate, earnest living within other believers.

Here we note that being dynamic does not mean only being a "live wire" It may express itself in quietness which is graciously powerful; in goodness which overcomes evil; in love which weeps with the sorrowing, or in humility which is willing to touch the lowly.

These verses are full to overflowing with the kind of instruction which, if heeded, would make the fellowship of the church well nigh heavenly. For example, "in honor preferring one another" would put an end to church "fights"—blessed thought! If all were "fervent in spirit, serving the Lord" there would be no problem about getting the work of the church and Sunday school done, and done well.

If Christians were "patient in tribulation," would continue "instant in prayer," and rejoice "in hope," we would at once be free from complainers, and weak or unhappy church members.

We could go on, but the teaching of the Word is so plain that what we need to do is to practice it.

III. In the World (vv. 17-21).

"Take thought," that is, plan to have "things honest in the sight of all men." Bishop Moule's comment is particularly acute. He says the Christian "is to be nobly indifferent to the world's thought and word when he is sure that God and the world antagonize. But he is to be seriously attentive to the world's observation, were the world more or less acquainted with the Christian precept or principle, and more or less conscious of its truth and right, is watching, maliciously, or it may be wistfully, to see if it governs the Christian practice."

How then does the Christian behave toward the world? He does not return evil for evil. How often Christians have failed at that point, becoming involved in a "blow for blow" conflict with some worldly man or institution. How much better to "live peaceably with all men" as far as it is possible to do so.

The Christian is not to seek revenge. The injustice suffered may be confidently left in the hand of God. He will make it right in due season and in His own way. He will judge righteously, where we might be prejudiced. We might be too severe; He will be fair. The way to deal with such situations is by the "coals of fire" method (v. 20). It really works. We ought to use it more frequently.

Verse 21 sums up the whole matter. Instead of letting the evil of this world get the best of him, the Christian will "overcome evil with good." It seems just now that such a plan does not work, that evil has taken the upper hand, but let us wait a bit. The final accounting has not yet been made.

A Bit on the Humorous Side

Prime Condition

"You haven't looked so well for years, old man!"

"Ah, it's the exercise I get, tossing about in bed at night worrying about the business."

Curious Lad

Golfer—Dear, dear. I'm certainly not playing the game I used to play!

Caddie (disgustedly) — What game was that?

The way some secretaries type the boss' letters is a triumph of mind over matter.

Caught Him

"MacPhersin's a cheat, and I'm not goin' to play golf with him again"

"How's that?"

"Well, how could he have lost his ball a yard from the green when it was in my pocket?"

In Duplicate

Barber—Well, my little man, how do you wish to have your hair cut?

Little Man—I'd like it cut just like my daddy's, and please don't forget to leave that little round hole on the top where his head comes through.

Asking for Trouble

The door of the ladies' hairdressing shop opened and in came a meek-looking little man.

One of the assistants approached him.

"What can I have the pleasure——" she cooed.

"Er—could you spare me a blonde hair for my shoulder?" he stammered. "I want to make my wife jealous."

Fell for Her

"Fortune knocks at least once at every man's door."

"That may be. But it was her daughter, Miss Fortune, who called on me."

Orson Welles Introduces Many of Him to a Few

Orson Welles, of "Citizen Kane" fame, once gave a small town lecture. There were but few listeners and no chairman present So he up and introduced himself in the following fashion:

"I am a director of plays," he said. "I am a producer of plays. I am an actor on the legitimate stage. I am a writer of motion pictures. I am a producer of motion pictures. I am a motion-picture actor. I write, direct, and act for the radio. I am a magician. I also paint and sketch. I am a publisher. I am a violinist and a pianist. Isn't it a shame that there are so many of me and so few of you?"

Our Telephones

In this country today, the 25 associated Bell telephone companies serve 7,128 communities having 18,841,000 telephones, while 6,350 independent companies serve 12,072 communities having 4,609,000 telephones, reports Collier's. In addition, there are more than 60,000 connecting rural lines owned by groups of farmers.

Uncle Phil Says:

We Offer the 23rd Psalm

Our language, used by an artist, can produce something as grand as anything heard at a symphony concert. An example: Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

Well-bred people are a delight, and often an object of envy.

We delight to indulgently smile over the peculiarities of the friends we love.

The only fun worth having is the kind that is still funny when you get up the next morning.

It's So Exciting, Too!

Since millions enjoy headlines more than any other part of the newspaper, why not try one that is mostly headlines?

It is often easier for a woman to hold a strong man than her own tongue.

Beauty is only skin deep, and often the look of wisdom, also.

Usually a narrow-minded man doesn't care if he is, and you can't shame him in that.

NOW CAR OWNERS CAN BUY
THE NEW Firestone
WAR TIRE

YES—It's true! If your present tires cannot be recapped, you are eligible to apply for a certificate to buy the new Firestone War Tire no matter whether you hold an "A", "B" or "C" gasoline ration book.

The new Firestone War Tire is now on sale at Firestone Dealers and Firestone Stores. Its construction has been tested and proved by more than two years of service. Naturally, you'd expect Firestone to build the best War Tire that can be built, because Firestone has always been a pioneer in developing new processes and creating new products made from rubber. And with its unequalled background of experience in building tires that successfully withstand the most gruelling tests of durability and safety, it is not surprising that Firestone is building a War Tire with such exclusive features as:

Safti-Lock, Gum-Dipped Cord Body — same construction that has made Firestone Tires so strong, so safe, so durable on the road as well as on the Speedway. The body of the new Firestone War Tire is built to outwear several treads and can be recapped for thousands of miles of extra service.

Firestone Non-Skid Tread—famous for performance and protection against skidding.

Vitamic Rubber—made by adding a new wear-resisting rubber vitamin, called "Vitalin."

If your present tires can be recapped—be sure to have them recapped by the Firestone Factory Controlled Method. Firestone has the largest system of recapping shops in America, strategically located to give you better service. This nation-wide system is strictly supervised and uniform in workmanship. For longer mileage, bring your tires to us for recapping.

COME IN AND SEE IT! The new Firestone War Tire is now ready for the car owners of America. Your nearby Firestone Dealer or Firestone Store will be glad to help you make out an application for a tire rationing certificate.

PROTECT YOUR TIRE MILEAGE with Firestone LIFE PROTECTORS

For longer mileage and greater safety, equip every tire with a Firestone Life Protector. This amazing double-chambered tube keeps your tire inflated in event of a puncture or a blowout, so that you can stop safely without cutting or slashing the precious tire. Marriage Of Klemme Girl Took Place Last June

MARRIAGE OF KLEMME YOUNG LADY ANNOUNCED HERE THIS WEEK

Miss Nora Wellemeyer Bride Of Richard Mohler At El Paso

Mr and Mrs Arthur Wellemeyer of Klemme, Iowa, this week announced the marriage of their youngest daughter, Nora, to Mr Richard A Mohler, son of Mr and Mrs Lynn Mohler, of Maxwell, Iowa

The couple were united in marriage by the Rev. Floyd A Boulware on Thursday, June 18th, at the Trinity Methodist Church in El Paso Texas.

Mrs Mohler was born and raised in Klemme and graduated from the local high school in 1937

The following spring she began studies at the Iowa State Teachers College and continued them until fall when she accepted a teaching position at the Ell Township School No 5 She taught two years in this township before resuming her Elementary Course at Cedar Falls From this she graduated in the summer of 1941 and that fall accepted a position as fourth grade teacher in the Laurens Consolidated School

Even though nuptial vows had been taken this past summer, the bride chose to accept the unusually attractive contract offered her by the new grade school at Vinton The school's proximity to her husband' work at Waterloo held an added inducement to teach at Vinton

Mr Mohler, though born in the state of Minnesota, was raised in Iowa, and attended high school at Hudson from which he graduated in 1933 He continued his education at Minneapolis, Minn., and at Le Mars, Iowa, and to date, has received both his Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Theology degrees.

For the past two years Mr Mohler has been engaged in defense work at the John Deere Tractor Company in Waterloo. His night work permitted some time for post graduate work at the State Teachers College It was there that he became acquainted with his future wife

Mr Mohler's change of work and plans to continue his Theological studies in Dayton, Ohio, has prompted Mrs. Mohler's resignation of her position at Vinton, and the consequent announcement of their marriage.

Leaving Thursday morning they are driving to Ohio, but enroute they will visit the groom's relatives at Minneapolis, Minn., and the bride's sister, Mrs. James Carlson at Glen Flora, Wisconsin, and other friends at Chicago. They will arrive in Dayton about January 8. Their new residence may be contacted through the Bonebrake Theological Seminary of that city.

TRUCK OWNERS WILL GET HELP BY COMMITTEE

Announcement has been made by the Hancock County Farm Transportation Committee that appeal blank are now available for the use of truck owners who hold Certificates of War Necessity for the operation of their trucks which do not permit enough milege or gasoline to carry on necessary trucking operations

There was some confusion in completing applications and in the issuance of Certificates of War Necessity that resulted in the issuance of Certificates on which there are obvious errors An appeal procedure has been set up by the ODT to correct such errors and to take care of cases where there has been a change in conditions that necessitates a change in the Certificate

The Farm Transportation Committee has been designated by the Office of Defense Transportation to assist farm truck owners and commercial truckers who haul chiefly farm products in making appeals if they believe that they have not been permitted sufficient mileage and gasoline to carry on trucking necessary to the war effort.

Since the Committee has been asked to make recommendations on the appeals, they prefer to have the truckers meet with them so that they can interview them in regard to their trucking operations

Meet Thursday And Saturday

Therefore, they have set Thursday, December 31st, and Saturday, January 2nd, as days on which they will be in session at the County AAA office in Garner for the purpose of helping truckers make their appeals as described above Truck owners are asked to bring with them their records of mileage and trips made, gasoline used, etc., since December 1st, as this information is required in making the appeal They should also bring their Certificates of War Necessity with them

TURN HANCOCK 4-H CLUBS INTO WAR PRODUCTION CLUBS IN 1943

Iowa 4-H Clubs in 1943 will be war production clubs with a new goal to produce as many pounds of foodstuffs as possible rather than to groom highly finished show animals.

In addition, members will be asked to take an active part in the club activities which made a definite contribution to all war needs. This will include demonstrations of practices used in production for community and county, plus health work, aid in state and national fire prevention, recreation, war drives and the sale and purchase of War Bonds and Stamps.

According to state 4-H leaders at Iowa State College, the 1943 program has been rewritten and extended so that every boy and girl of club age can become a member of America's largest rural youth organization, regardless of whether they live in town or on the farm or whether they are able to carry a project through to completion. Enrollments should be in County Extension Director Paul Henderson's office at once.

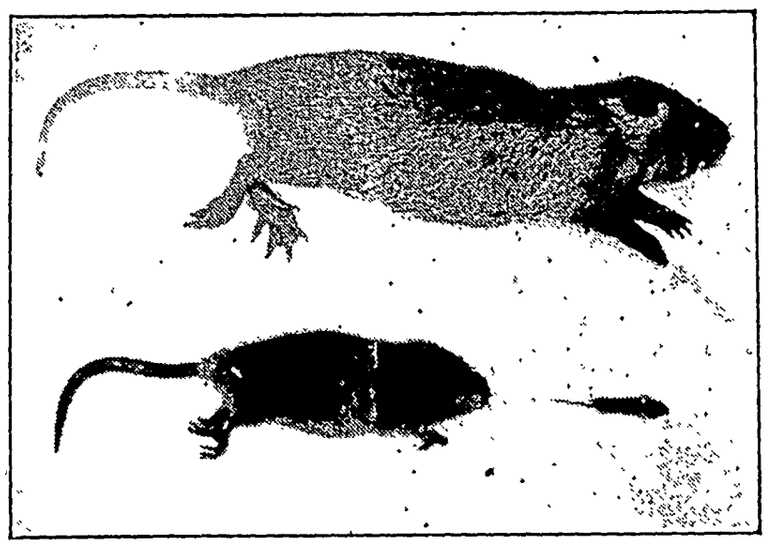
RARE ANIMAL TRAPPED NEAR CHARLOTTE, IOWA



Picture Shows Rare Aquatic Animal Trapped Near Charlotte, Iowa, And Muskrat And Deer-mouse To Show The Comparative Sizes

When Willie comes home wild-eyed and breathless from his trap-line with a tale of a large, sleek, aquatic animal that he saw dive into the creek and disappear under water, and when his description sounds a little like one of Sinbad the Sailor's, Pa, remembering his own youthful magination, is apt to peel off one of his superior smiles and say, "Did you?" and Mother immediately begins to wonder if the new Arabian Nights book wasn't just a little strong for Willie.

To Willie's persistent questioning, the learned Dr. Blodgett on the corner finally comes out flat-footed and says, "Willie, there ain't no sech animal," or words to that effect. Even Tinker, whose store of outdoor lore is so profound that his home-made wart cure mixture is recognized as the best in the country, says, "Willie, it can't be"

What a kaleidoscope of facial expressions there is on the Main Street next day when Willie comes dragging his animal up the icy street!

This is the exact experience of two young Iowa trappers at Charlotte in Clinton County Gene and Les Miller, 15 and 17-year-old trappers, saw a large animal plunge into Deep Creek when they were trapping for muskrat. The next morning the animal was caught in one of their muskrat traps, which the heavy beast had dragged under an over-hanging tree root. After chopping the roots away, the animal was killed and brought home No one in the neighborhood had ever seen anything like it. In general appearance it resembled a giant muskrat. On closer examination it appeared more nearly like a beaver; however, instead of the broad flat tail of a beaver, the tail was round and scaled almost like that of a 'possum. Being unable to identify the animal, the boys called Garfield Harker, the local conservation officer. Harker was also stumped and sent the animal to the Conservation Commission for identification. Guesses have run to crosses between beaver, muskrat, ground hog, opossums, and many other native animals Some guessers believed the animal to be a freak beaver. Look at the picture, guess yourself, and we'll tell you what the animal is next week.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Hard-Fought Battle for Air Supremacy Holds Key to Control of North Africa; Italians Fret Over British Air Raids; Gains in New Guinea Mark Pacific War

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

United States soldiers cross a stream in the Gona-Buna area of New Guinea. The occupation of Gona by Allied forces, directed by General MacArthur, left the Japanese pinned down in a narrow strip of coast in the Buna area, 12 miles south.

NORTH AFRICA:
Air Battle Grows

Cheering word of ever-increasing Allied air strength in North Africa came from London and the Morocco radio as swarms of American and British planes in Tunisia provided cover for land operations.

Press reports tell of ground commanders telephoning for air coverage "as casually as calling for a taxi."

Chief battleground for the opposing forces had been Tebourba, a strategic junction 20 miles west of Tunisia and 35 miles south of Bizerte. Here a series of rapid action tank battles took place, with the key town changing hands as battle fortunes shifted.

Continuing efforts were made to extend and equip new airfields from which Allied planes could operate. Reports reaching the United States stressed the importance of the many American Commando transport planes now available. They are described as 50 per cent faster than the JU-52s and are capable of moving jeeps, small field guns and up to 98 soldiers.

On the opposite side of Africa, the British Eighth army was reported allowing Marshal Rommel's army no rest in the El Agheila area. The official communique spoke of patrol and artillery action. British military sources in London had warned that the "real" offensive was not yet under way and that when the Eighth army strikes, the blows will leave no doubt as to its strength.

RUSSIA:
Central Front

Although Nazi forces have been hard pressed in Russia, military observers were quick to warn against undue optimism. Despite a grave strain on their communications, German forces were said to be showing no signs of faltering in defensible positions.

Generally speaking, news was good. The Red army drove seven miles deeper into enemy lines on the central front near Velikie Luki, recapturing 13 settlements, while the Germans failed in their drive to regain the initiative on the Stalingrad front.

On the central front the Russians attacked with ski troopers supported by tanks painted white. This front extends northwest of Moscow, roughly from Rzhev to Velikie Luki.

Russian reports said the Nazis were trying not only to smash the Soviet offensive but also to start one of their own, evidently in the belief that the Red army is exhausted after their continuous attack.

JAP DEFEAT:
In South Pacific

When Allied forces, directed by General MacArthur, occupied the Gona area of New Guinea, the Japs lost the northern anchor of their ever-diminishing beachhead in Papua, which already has been badly sliced by veteran American and Australian jungle fighters.

This new defeat left the Japs hemmed in a narrow coastal strip centering on the Buna area, 12 miles to the south.

First announcement of the Gona victory was made by Prime Minister John Curtin, who gave the news as he was conducting a review of the war before the house of representatives in Canberra, Australia. His announcement was made 16 days after an Allied headquarters communique had announced the original Australian entry into Gona.

The Japs had landed at Gona on July 22 and from that area launched their invasion drive which took them across the Owen Stanley mountain range to within 32 miles of the Allied base at Port Moresby.

COMPLAINTS:
From Italy

"Why do the British bomb our towns now instead of German towns? After all it was the Germans who bombed London."

That was one of the many complaints reported originating in Italy during the past 30 days. Well-informed diplomatic quarters have reported ever-growing discontent in Italy over the war. Mussolini's people are weary. They do not like the arrogance of their German Allies. Already they are dazed by repeated British bombing attacks. And every Italian knows the immediate future is black.

But the same sources also report that Italy has little chance of breaking away from German domination and seeking a separate peace. A steady stream of German air, anti-aircraft and land forces, all under Gestapo supervision, is pouring into Italy. Most of the land forces are said to have been drawn from the few reserves in Germany. Russia's new offensive makes withdrawals from the Eastern front practically impossible.

The almost incessant bombing of Turin, northern Italian industrial center, continued unabated. The smoke and fire of one raid was not dissipated before another wave of British bombers returned to spread new destruction. It was evident that the RAF did not intend to give city authorities even time to restore public utilities.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

WASHINGTON: Newspaper men covering this wartime capital now need about 40 press passes to get them into the various buildings and offices around the city. Up until stricter measures were taken—to guard against spies, saboteurs or traitors—one pass, that admitting the bearer to the White House, would get newsmen almost anywhere they wanted to go.

NEW ORLEANS: Andrew J. Higgins, shipbuilder extraordinary, is definitely going to build 1,200 cargo planes for the U. S. army. Contract for this number of aircraft was signed some time ago and the planes are to be built largely of non-critical metals.

ALGIERS: U. S. doughboys in Africa are now getting a weekly edition of their own newspaper, the Stars and Stripes. This North African edition is the product of combined efforts of the London staff of the Stars and Stripes in Britain and the staff of Yank, army magazine.

CHICAGO: Three Nazi sympathizers, under sentence to die January 22, were granted a stay of execution while the U. S. circuit court of appeals studies the findings of their recent trial. They are Hans Max Haupt, father of Herbert Haupt, executed Nazi saboteur; Otto R. Wergin and Walter O. Froehling, friends of the Haupt family.

LONDON: Continuance of the German reign of terror in Bohemia and Moravia was charged by the exiled Czech government, a spokesman for which said that 35 more Czechs had been executed by the Nazis. Twenty-nine men were shot on one day for allegedly possessing arms and explosives and participating in anti-Nazi activities, the Czech spokesman said. Six Czechs accused of being ringleaders in a sabotage and terror gang were executed in Prague. In Jugoslavia one official report said that guerrilla warriors had retaken almost half of that country.

STRATEGY:
Nazis First

Much interest throughout the United Nations has long centered on the broad or general plan for defeating the Axis. Always there have been theories advanced which often seem to have little basis in fact. Others again have a highly legitimate tone.

One of the most recent explanations of such strategy, and one of more plausible presentations of it is that advanced by Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia. In a current statement he declared that President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill decided even before the fall of Singapore (February 15, 1942) that the most necessary job was to beat Hitler and then take after Japan.

Thus the campaign in the South Pacific and on the Australian continent becomes one of a "holding" action. He warned his countrymen that they might have to endure strong air and sea-borne attack from the Japanese forces based on the island of Timor. He urged them to further prepare themselves for such action.

He pointed out that the closest co-operation exists between the Australian government, General MacArthur and Admiral Chester Nimitz, commander of the U. S. fleet in the Pacific.

CANNED FOOD:
New Restrictions

America's housewives are finding less and less use for their can openers.

Many canned foodstuffs are eliminated for civilian consumption for the duration upon a new order of the War Production board. The order was designed to save large quantities of tin, steel and rubber for war purposes. The saving in rubber would be made through fewer truck deliveries under the reduced output program.

Canned foods henceforth eliminated include apples, applesauce, apricots, numerous types of berries, grapefruit segments, orange juice, dehydrated vegetables, powdered skimmed milk, bacon and other meats, fruit for salad, okra, succotash, various fruit juices, white asparagus, chili con carne, meat loaf, vienna sausage, sausage in oil, frozen and storage cream, various fats, syrups and sea foods.

CASUALTIES:
Total War

Well into the second year of World War II, U. S. citizens were pondering the official announcements from Washington which reported for the armed forces during the first 12 months of the fighting. There were 58,307 such casualties in that period according to the Office of War Information. This total includes killed, wounded, missing, interned in neutral countries and prisoners of the army, navy, marine corps, coast guard, merchant marine and Philippine Scouts.

War department reports showed that army casualties totaled 35,678 and of this number 2,009 (including 480 Philippine Scouts) were killed; 3,332 were wounded; and 29,000 (including 10,500 Philippine Scouts) are missing in the Philippines and the Dutch East Indies and 1,119 are missing elsewhere in action; 112 are prisoners of war, not including those missing in the Philippines; and 106 are interned in neutral countries. Six hundred and nine of the 3,332 wounded have returned to action. As the majority of the army's missing were in the Philippines and Dutch East Indies, most of these are presumed to be prisoners of war.

Navy department officials said that they had reported or were in the process of reporting to the next of kin 22,629 casualties for the year. Broken down here is the picture: Navy—dead, 4,532; wounded, 1,579; missing, 8,636. Marine corps—dead, 1,129; wounded, 1,413; missing, 1,926. Coast Guard — dead, 40; wounded, 11; missing, 119. Merchant Marine—dead, 482; wounded, none; missing, 2,762.

According to Japanese and German figures 3,138 U. S. civilians are interned, said the OWI report.

3-CENT COIN:
May Avert Shortages

If mint officials have their way new 3-cent coins may jingle in your pockets some day in the not distant future.

Officials asked authority to make such coins in case the copper shortage becomes so acute that there won't be enough pennies. The house passed legislation authorizing the new coin and returned it to the senate for action.

Director of the Mint Nellie Tayloe Ross has asked the nation's school children to undertake a "help win the war" campaign by putting idle coins, especially pennies and 5-cent pieces, to work meeting business demands, and thus save many tons of vital metals.

DETROIT LABOR:

Approximately 660,000 essential war workers in the Detroit area have been frozen to their jobs in an all-inclusive order by Montague A. Clark, Michigan director of the War Manpower commission.

The order lists 34 categories in which employees may not change jobs without specific government authorization. It affects nearly two-thirds of the area's gainfully employed workers. It includes workers at the Willow Run bomber plant, and other plants throughout the region.

POLL TAX AGAIN

Despite the bitterest legislative battle of the year, the administration has no intention of abandoning the battle for poll tax repeal. Next round in this savage controversy will be fought out in the courts.

Labor leaders William Green and Phil Murray were given this private assurance by FDR himself when they called to urge the President to make a statement denouncing the filibuster and pleading for passage of the bill.

Green was very emphatic that Roosevelt take a hand.

"This issue has war implications, Mr. President," the AFL leader argued. "While our soldiers are fighting to protect the right to vote, a minority of willful men in the senate is filibustering against it. You could break the filibuster if you spoke out."

Murray also put in some strong licks for presidential intervention. Roosevelt, however, interrupted to say that the administration was doing all possible to put over the repeal bill and he was too busy with the war to become involved in the controversy.

He added that the administration wouldn't give up even if the fight in congress were lost, since Attorney General Biddle was preparing a case to test the validity of the poll tax in the courts.

Green and Murray accepted this alternative. But in talks with friends the labor chiefs are not optimistic about favorable action in the courts, fearing that the Supreme court will dump the issue right back in the lap of congress.

ARMY MASCOTS

Mascots are popular in the armed services. Dogs are most common, but some units have adopted cats, eagles, goats, mules, horses, prairie dogs, and even kangaroo rats.

In fact on the morning report of the 355th Infantry, Camp Carlson, Colo., appears the name of a certain sergeant who has never received a cent of pay since he joined the army, yet he is one of the happiest and best liked members of the outfit.

The "sergeant" in this case is a white fox terrier, a company mascot. He was in good standing until recently, wore his chevrons proudly on his khaki jacket.

But one night he left the camp AWOL to chase prairie dogs and did not return in time for reveille. Like any other soldier, he had to pay the penalty for misconduct. In a solemn ceremony, attended by officers, he was "broken," his stripes were taken away, and the warrant was signed by the colonel.

NEW NEBRASKA SENATOR

Senator-elect Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska, who will fill the most famous shoes in the senate, those of George Norris, was in the senate once before, many years ago.

He was then a law student and visited a friend who was the son of a senator. The senator took the two boys to meet Woodrow Wilson, who happened to be at the senate. As Wherry tells the story on himself, he shook hands with the President, after which there was an awful silence. Then Wherry, feeling something must be said, blurted out:

"I've heard a lot about you."

He wished the senate floor might open up and swallow him.

MRS. LUCE GOES ROUND THE WORLD

Mrs. Clare Luce, newly elected Republican congresswoman from Connecticut, will be an additional problem for the British embassy to worry about. Mrs. Luce came back from a trip through Egypt and the Far East with the feeling that something was wrong with the old British empire. Undoubtedly her views had a lot to do with recent editorials in her husband's magazine, Life, criticizing the British.

In Egypt she found the Egyptians carrying signs in the streets saying "We Want Rommel." In China, she found severe criticism of the British, and she heard the fear expressed by the head Chinese censor that if China let too much news of India pass on to the United States, Chinese supply shipments would be curtailed from India.

Everywhere she tried to find an explanation for the fall of Singapore. Finally one young English officer put it this way:

"We just went cold."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Well, that's your part of the world to defend. Our part is Europe. We know that after the war, you'll give all that part back to us."

CAPITAL CHAFF

¶ Maj. Frank Capra's first training film, just finished for the army, is so good that every American should see it, either in or out of the army . . . The war department is now trying to make up its mind whether to release it to the civilian public. ¶ For several days after the North Africa landing, the Rockefeller office had 5,000 to 10,000 words cabled daily from Latin America in the form of comment and praise of the new front. This material was then radioed by OWI to Europe.

Portrait of a Man Colyuming Blindfolded:

Styles in war books change. First, foreign correspondents came back and authored tomes on how things looked in the Old Country, America's chances for staying out, etc. Some said the war wouldn't touch us, some argued that we'd better get something over our chin, but fast. Next came the books on those who'd smelled powder—in Norway, England, Russia, etc. Now there's a third set. These—Harold Denny, Frederick Oechsner, Louis Lochner, and others—all describe their experiences in the Axis clinks they were jammed into when the blow-off came. The way to go nuts is to read one of the latter, and then reread one of the earlier ones which counseled us not to worry, that Hitler wanted nothing from us—except everything. A good example of a "take it easy" book is The Cong. Record.

It will take a lot of Yankee Doodle victories to make many American dopes realize we've got a pretty scrappy army and navy. These lame-brains keep on resisting good news. When the flash came from the South Pacific that our forces had slapped the kimonas off the Japs, they grumbled: "Great—if it's true." Then they'd add, "How can you tell until you get the Tokyo report?" Meaning they prefer to trust the enemy rather than Washington . . . On the other hand, they swallow rumors like candy. Give them anything that looks bad for us and they polish it up and peddle it eagerly. But that can be stopped. Whenever you hear a jackass selling a rumor, ask him, "How do you know?" . . . It's a quicker smotherer than chloroform.

Doodlings: You can leave money in most hotel rooms and come back with a reasonable chance of finding it there. But leave a razor blade, and it's a gone goose. Are chambermaids growing beards — that they've got to go south with the blades? Please, girls, they're gonna be hard to get . . . The week's prize patsy was the songwriter who went to see his doc on what was giving him the fidgets. The medico stung him $10 for advice to cut down on coffee . . . One theater manager said his house is equipped with earphones for the hard of hearing and with smoked glasses for the Pulitzer Prize committee—to keep them from knowing too much about the candidates.

Laval, who is notoriously greedy, ratted for a smaller price than Benito was promised. The way it looks now neither will get a thing, but when the Duce peddled himself as a slave to Der Fuehrer it looked as though he would pick up a few lira. The Nazis were riding high. They had smacked down the Low Countries, and Norway and Denmark. When France succumbed Benito figured he could share the spoils without risking his skull. So he declared himself in. Look at him now. Laval didn't even have a promise. He went over to the Heel from Berlin when the frantic Fuehrer didn't have a thing to offer him. Maybe he betrayed the French people for the sheer pleasure of being a Louse. His whole record stamps him as a guy who really enjoys doing somebody a dirty trick.

There are a lot of things you can say about Laval—most of them bad—but until now nobody ever accused him of being a chump. And his declaration for a Nazi victory leaves him all the way out on a limb. Maybe the habit of double-crossing people has become so strong that he's double-crossing himself. Anyway, he's on the record as Berlin's official boot-licker and flunkey. He speaks the wordage Joe Goebbels authors for him. For two years he had to fake his sentiments and pretend to be working for his own nation. When he cut loose last week his words didn't surprise anybody.

However, Benito, unless he's forgotten how to chuckle, can have one at the expense of the boss. When the invincible Fascist legions got their schnozzolas rubbed in the African sand, Berlin hustled Rommel in there to show Rome how to humble the British. That was the third sneer Berlin had for Benito, the other two having been sneered in Albania and Greece. But now that Rommel has turned tail and sprinted for cover (a stunt believed to be patented by the Fascist forces), Benito must feel better. It gives him and the master a lot in common next time they stage a huddle at the Brenner Pass. Maybe that laugh is all Musso will get out of the war.

The Magazines: Harper's offers a bang-up adventure yarn in "A Long Way from Home." It's Jacqueline Clarke's report on how the neutral ship carrying her to her bridegroom in England was torpedoed by the Nazi water rats. The author is the gal who was so comic as the maid in "Blithe Spirit." Her eight days in an open boat, with the Atlantic gale juggling it, are a ready-made flicker . . . Herbert Hoover makes Collier's with an outline of how we'll have to feed Europe's hungry when the savages have been tamed.

News of 1942 Tells of Churchbells in England, Gray Hair, 'Steaming Stars,' and a Breath Holder

By CLIFF LANGE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

During the past year news of the Allies battling the Axis, war production, conscription, wage-price-labor control measures, all have shoved many stories to the back pages. Stories that might have been "played up" more if they happened during peacetime. The following is a quick summary of some of those many news-shorts, and human interest stories.

JANUARY

Dr. Howard E. Wilson in an address in New York city said that most Americans are guilty of "geographic illiteracy" and that Hitler's successes were made possible because of his knowledge of the geography and economics of the nations he intended taking under his "protection."

Later on two Boston, Mass., doctors, Herbert D. Adams and Leo V. Hand reported that a man, operated on for a lung ailment, whose heart had stopped beating for 20 minutes, was brought back to life and in good condition. They had kept his brain and the rest of the body supplied with oxygen.

FEBRUARY

Many of you have seen in the movies, or heard on the radio the personality known as the "Voice of Experience." He was Marion Sayle Taylor. "Was" is the correct verb, for he died February 1 at the age of 53, from a heart attack, in Hollywood.

In a middle of the month meeting, Dr. John W. Studebaker, U. S. commissioner of education, told a meeting of 1,500 educators in the East that schools must modify their course of studies. Schools should add technical courses, stress health education and Latin America.

Down in Puebla, Mexico, the Astrophysical congress was told that the Milky Way system is 180 million billion miles from the sun. Scientists meeting at Columbia university, New York, were told by Prof. Roger Williams, University of Texas, that an abundant supply of vitamins promotes "intellectual keenness" and also are "capable of fostering morality."

MARCH

Hold your breath on this one: Eugene J. Frechette Jr., 20, New Haven, Conn., junior at Wesleyan university, Middletown, Conn., brought honors to his Alma Mater by establishing a record by holding his breath for 20 minutes, 5 seconds in a laboratory test. OK, let out your breath now. What did your wife say when you told her that one?

A New Jersey building contractor, Claude Habberstad, tried out some new wooden tires he had made. He drove 75 miles an hour on a concrete highway and said the tires should last for 12,000 to 15,000 miles if the speed was kept down.

APRIL

Somehow or other, as the files are scanned of this year's news, it seems that vitamins received more than usual amount of news-coverage. For instance: The para-amino-benzoic acid of the vitamin B complex known as paba, (easier to say, too) was given to 30 gray-haired prison inmates. It restored the original color of the hair in more than two-thirds of the cases in eight months. The "libido" in almost all of the cases, varying in age from 29 to 57, was greatly increased.

"In a marriage between German and Jew the German would get by far the better of the bargain." That is what Dr. Ashley-Montague, Philadelphia, had to say before a meeting of anthropologists at Harvard. Another blast at the Nazi racial theory "myth."

MAY

Here are a few of the Pulitzer Prize winners, as announced by Columbia university Meritorious public service by a newspaper prize went to the Los Angeles Times, best national reporting award went to Louis Stark of the New York Times; local reporting prize to Stanton Delaplane of the San Francisco Chronicle; Ellen Glasgow's novel, "In This Our Life" also took first award.

On the 25th anniversary of his consecration as bishop, Pope Pius broadcast to the world, appealing for peace. He said, in part. "The family is sacred; it is the cradle not only of children but also of the nation, of its force and its glory. Do not let the family be alienated or diverted from its high purpose assigned to it by God."

JUNE

According to the U. S. census bureau, more than 38 million persons 25 years old, or older, completed at least eight years of grade or elementary school. More than 18 million in the same classification had finished high school.

And another thing, said Dr. McLaughlin of the University of Michigan, "exploding" stars don't actually explode. They just merely "let off a little steam."

At the end of this month the nation faced a shortage of 50,000 teachers, especially in mathematics and physics. The draft, higher wages in industry were the cause of many schools deciding to close in 1943.

JULY

Russian composer Shostakovich's Seventh symphony which he dedicated "to our struggle against Fascism, to our future victory, to my native city, Leningrad" was heard for the first time in the U. S. when played by the NBC symphony orchestra conducted by Arturo Toscanini in New York city.

Dr. Grinnel Jones, and co-worker Dr. Juda, both of Harvard, announced the perfection of a new fire-sisting chemical which can be sprayed or painted on wood to make it practically fire-proof. OK for plastic planes?

AUGUST

This sounds as though it is not meant to be, but it is all in earnest. A witness, known only as Mr. Murray, testified before a senate military sub-committee on making concrete cargo-carrying submarines to save steel In case you have doubts, remember that Sen. Josh Lee said he is convinced of the plan's feasibility.

Yale university announced the award of 10 scholarships to labor union leaders. They'll start to school next February and undertake a research project on the development of trade unions. There was no statement as to whether the "continuous membership" and "check off" clauses were in the awards.

SEPTEMBER

Along comes this month and you are told, according to London AP reports, an unpublished Sherlock Holmes story, "The Man Who Was Wanted," was found by Adrian Conan Doyle, son of the writer. He said his father didn't want it published because it just wasn't up to "scratch."

You old-timers remember the Police Gazette, don't you? It has been barred from the mails by the post office department. Lascivious, lewd material was the reason given.

OCTOBER

The Sister Elizabeth Kenny method of treating infantile paralysis by hot applications, massage and exercise, which has caused so much furore in the medical world, is to be taught in six New York hospitals. Sister Elizabeth Kenny, an Australian, is director of a University of Minnesota clinic.

NOVEMBER

As for Stalin, over in war-torn Russia, things might have seemed a little brighter when he was told that Sergei, acting Patriarch, has conferred the official blessing of the Russian Orthodox Church on him. Sergei is a native of Polish territory taken over by the Russians. Josef Stalin was called "the divinely anointed leader of our armed and cultural forces."

Celebrating the British victory in Egypt, church bells in England rang between 9 a. m. and noon on Sunday, November 15. Some of them rang for the first time since Dunkerque in June, 1940, when it was decreed that they should be rung only as an invasion warning.

DECEMBER

Charles Van Hefty, a Chicago war plant engineer, served as an example to hundreds of other motorists in that city, and cities all over the nation. He had hoarded 85 gallons of gasoline just before the recent gas rationing went into effect. Neighbors kicked. Police investigated. Firemen supervised his pouring the gas down the sewer while they shot streams of water after it. Hefty was out 16 bucks.

Amazing Ways to Do Amazing Things Shown in Record of 1942 Accidents

In the topsy turvy year of 1942 one bit of Americana remained unchanged. Unusual accidents kept on happening as usual.

A roundup by the National Safety Council, Chicago, Ill., of dizzy mishaps for the year reveals that war or no war, a lot of people found time to do amazing things in amazing ways. For instance:

Saleslady Bessie Swank of Bridgeton, N. J., tried valiantly to fit a small girdle on a plump customer. She tugged so hard she was taken to the hospital with a severe back injury. The customer took the girdle.

Eugene B. Grabbe of Denver has never been a circus trapeze performer, but he could be. Washing windows on the seventh floor of the U. S. National Bank building, he started to fall as the buckle on his safety belt gave way. Grabbe hurled himself backward with such force that he floated through the air with the greatest of ease, cleared a 16-foot space and landed on his feet atop an adjacent four-story building. He broke both legs, but considered himself lucky.

Joe Konecny of Great Bend, Kan., had stored his car in a garage at Little Rock, Ark., to make an auto trip with a friend. As he and his friend were driving along near Mountain Home, Ark., their car collided head-on with another machine. Both cars were wrecked. When Konecny crawled from the wreckage and looked at the other car, he saw that it was his own. It had been stolen from the Little Rock garage. Joe got legal "revenge."

Wrong Girl.

Wallace D. Smith of Louisville, Ky., was flying an airplane at a low altitude when he saw a girl he thought he knew. He waved at her. She waved back. Pleased but distracted, Pilot Smith flew his plane into a tree top, an electric light wire and another tree top, where he ended his trip. He shinnied down, hurried to the girl to assure her he wasn't hurt. She wasn't the girl he had thought she was, but a total stranger. He was distracted again.

Dramatic Critic's Selection of 10 Best Plays

Burns Mantle, New York Daily News drama critic, listed the following as his choice for the 10 best plays of the season, ending June: "Junior Miss," by Jerome Chodorov and Joseph Fields; "In Time to Come," by Howard Koch and John Huston; "The Moon Is Down," by John Steinbeck; "Angel Street," by Patrick Hamilton; "Jason," by Samson Raphaelson; "Blithe Spirit," by Noel Coward; "Candle in the Wind," Maxwell Anderson; "Letters to Lucerne," by Fritz Rotter and Allen Vincent; "Hope for a Harvest," by Sophie Treadwell, and "Uncle Harry," by Thomas Job.

THE GLORY OF THE SON OF GOD

LESSON TEXT—John 1 1 14

GOLDEN TEXT—And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth. John 1 14

A New Year! It brings a thrill to our hearts, for even in this year of our Lord 1943 we may look forward with expectancy to God's blessing upon us and be hopeful that better things are ahead. Yet we do so with a sense of sadness as we realize that our world is so far from God, and with a deep feeling of responsibility for our life and testimony in the coming months.

There could be no better way to begin any year—and certainly not this year—than by the study of God's Word. This should be done in the home and in the church, but may we suggest that this is an especially good time to enter into the fellowship of your local Sunday school.

Were we to select a Scripture portion with which to start the year we could not find a finer one than the Gospel according to John.

The purpose of the Gospel is stated in 20 31 as being "that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life through His name." This first lesson of the series reveals the glory of Christ.

I. In the Beginning—the Living Word (vv. 1-3).

God reveals Himself to man. As the word is the express image of the thought, so in an infinitely greater sense Christ, the Living Word, is the express image of God (see Heb. 1 1-3).

In "the beginning," spoken of in Genesis 1 1, Jesus Christ already "was" (v 1); and He not only "was with God," but He Himself "was God." He, the Living Word, the complete and final revelation of God as both Creator and Redeemer, was the infinite and eternal God. He came to bring to man the reassuring message of God's redeeming love.

The profound depth of these verses is beyond the deepest thinker, but their glorious message of redemption is simple enough for the understanding of the youngest child. We may receive truth which we cannot fully understand and be blessed by it.

II. In the World—the True Light (vv. 4-11).

He is both the life and the light of men. In fact, His life was the light that shined (yes, and still shines) in the darkness of this world, revealing God's love.

But the world did not receive the light. His own world knew Him not (v. 10). How tragic! Yet even deeper is the hurt of verse 11—His own people received Him not.

And it is so today. Nations refuse His light upon world problems and try to fight them out. Class hatred; capital against labor; the "have" against the "have not"; yes, even the bitter fightings between professed Christians, all bespeak the fact that the shining of the "true light which lighteth every man" has not been permitted to penetrate very far into this dark world.

However, it has reached, by God's grace, into the hearts of believers, and there it has brought forth glorious results.

III. In the Believer—Power and Glory (vv. 12-14).

Those who receive Christ are born again. It is not a matter of "blood," that is, of family or heredity. Nor is it "by the will of the flesh," that is, by natural instinct or development of an inherent divine spark. And it is not by "the will of man," for it does not come by human will power.

It is "of God," a divine rebirth which gives power in the life, and authority to declare one's self to be the child of God (v 12). This is all so clear and so altogether desirable for both time and eternity that one wonders why all do not at once turn to Christ as Saviour. Have you?

The believer also sees in the Word which "was made flesh and dwelt among us," the glory of "the only begotten of the Father." All that such an expression means we shall not know until we reach eternity, but that does not prevent the believer from beholding, by the eye of faith, his glorious Saviour, the One who is "full of grace and truth."

John, the "man sent from God" (v. 6), was a witness to the Light to the intent that men "might believe." We, too, are to be witnesses, and that includes every one of us who knows Jesus Christ as Redeemer and Lord.

If we will all thus fulfill the responsibility and privilege which is ours, we may see in 1943 a real revival of spiritual life and power. No need is greater than that, and we could render God and our fellow men no greater service. This New Year's Sunday is the right time to make a start. Shall we do it?

Wedding of Kimonos

Marriages between both animals and inanimate objects sometimes take place in the Orient with elaborate religious ceremonies, says Collier's. India has had weddings of trees, monkeys and statues, and Japan of rocks, flagons and kimonos.

For instance, a famed kimono wedding took place in Kyoto in 1934 with full Shinto rites, the bride being a celebrated, hand-painted silk garment while the groom was a renowned, hand-embroidered cotton robe.

THE POWER OF THE PRESS

● Manufacturers and merchants sense the power of the press. Early they began using it to carry their advertising facts and ideas into homes. And they found it a most profitable way in which to tell their story to buyers. And the buyers in turn found it profitable to deal with those who were willing to state in print the values and services they offered.

THE CHAMP

("Barney Ross, once holder of two ring championships, now a member of the marines, has been promoted and recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross for a glorious exploit at Guadalcanal. Shel' shocked and wounded, he killed many Japs in an all night fight while defending three wounded buddies."—Official release by the Office of War Information.)

A pug? . . . An old ex-champ, that's all?—
Say, mister, stow that guff!
He battled where it really counts
And showed a hero's stuff;
No floodlights beat above his head,
He heard no cheering din;
He got no rest between the rounds
But he kept "coming in."

II

Jap bullets clattered off his hat—
His plight was pretty bad
But still the kid he stood his ground
And gave 'em all he had;
The ring was just a shell-hole raw,
No punch or blow was wrong,
No neutral corner, referee,
No rules and not a gong!

III

No swift three minutes . . . then a rest . . .
No towel wet and cold,
No seconds for a cool massage,
Not one barred punch or hold.
He'd had his fights when he had seen
More than a single foe
But not so many as he saw
In this one, that I know!

IV

They came by scores through jungle green
And waited for no bell,
(But Barney had been rushed before
And knew that system well;)
There was no time to dance or spar
Before the tactics rough . . .
This was the truly finish fight
Without the fancy stuff.

V

The Jappies led with everything,
Wild rights and lefts they threw;
The kid with gun and hand grenades
Gave back the "old one-two";
The mist arose and figures danced,
Across the beach-head floor;
The kid was hurt and groggy but
He's been that way before.

VI

A dozen Armstrongs rushed him now . . .
And some MacLarnins, too . . .
(One at a time had been enough
But now they seemed too few) . . .
With wounded buddies to protect,
Half blinded by the blood,
The kid he just threw everything
The way a champion would!

VII

They heeled him with their Tommy guns
And tore him half apart;
They thumbed him with their hand grenades
But couldn't touch his heart;
They hit him foul and hit him low
They bit the kid but he
As in four hundred other fights,
Barked: "That's all right with me!"

VIII

The lights went out and all went black . . .
And when the kid came to,
He heard the "Winner . . . and champ!"—
The sweetest words he knew;
They told him of his greatest fight
And pledged the D.S.C.;
"I was a little overweight . . .
And off my form," said he.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS

The New Year With Gay Pineapple-Cranberry Duff!
(See Recipes Below)

Rin[illegible]elcome, 1943 solve[illegible]

[illegible]e New Year with a re-ep your chins up, your budgets balanced and your meals victory and vita-min minded Nev-er mind trivial resolutions, just keep the impor-tant ones, and you'll be doing part in the way you can best—that's the best job, you, Mrs. [illegible]erica, are qualified to do.

Plan every meal so carefully that you will make use of every bit of food you have. That means doing the most by your leftovers and fit-ting them into your meal program. Economy is the watchword—elabo-rate food is out for the duration. Vi-tamins, minerals and proteins are your cue to balanced meals.

By way of initiating this program you will note that even the New Year buffet supper I've planned fits into the guide outlined above the chicken may be leftover from your holiday dinner as may be your spin-ach and beets for vegetable and salad.

Scalloped Chicken.
(Serves 6)

1 cup cooked, cubed chicken
1¼ cups buttered crumbs
3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1½ cups medium white sauce

Cover bottom of baking dish with crumbs. Add chicken, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pour sauce over all, cover with remaining crumbs. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven 25 minutes.

The casserole of chicken is sim-plicity itself and is especially fine with the spinach timbales because it provides a bit of sauce that goes well with them:

Spinach Timbales.
(Serves 6)

3 cups cooked, chopped spinach
2 tablespoons butter, melted
3 eggs, slightly beaten
1¼ cups milk
¼ cup soft bread crumbs
Salt and pepper
Dash of nutmeg

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: More foods have come in under the ceiling price list. Foods exempt from March ceilings but under the new ceilings are poultry, mutton, butter, eggs, cheese, canned milk, onions, white potatoes, dry beans, corn meal, fresh citrus fruits and canned citrus fruits and juices. Take this list to the market with you and make sure you do not pay any more for these items than you paid for them between September 28 through October 2.

The 2½-pound meat allowance must include meat for you, your dogs, cats and other pets. It includes meat eaten in your house by guests, meat eaten by you in restaurants, and bone gristle and waste that comes with edible meat. It includes bacon, sausage and canned meat.

It does not include scrapple, or the variety meats like liver, heart, kidneys, tripe, and brains. The allowance includes beef, lamb, veal, mutton and pork—but excludes poultry, eggs and fish. Stretch your meat allow-ance with these and meat ex-tenders like oatmeal, cereal and bread crumbs.

Coffee rationing will mean that you have to consider other drinks for hot drinks these cold days. First, you can probably stretch your coffee by using a "coffee stretcher" — using half coffee and half stretcher. You'll have fruit juices, hot and cold, milk for drinking, hot soups, bouillon and consomme.

New Year's Eve Buffet

Scalloped Chicken
Spinach Timbales
Victory Bread
Beet-Horseradish Salad
Olives and Pickles
Pineapple-Cranberry Duff
Fruit Cake Mints Nuts
Recipes Given

Combine all ingredients in order given. Pack in 6 well-buttered cus-tard cups, set in a pan of hot wa-ter, in a moder-ate (350-degree) oven 45 minutes. Unmold and serve with casserole.

A crisp gelatin salad that carries out the colors of the season and that is packed with vitamins and vigor is this:

Beet and Horseradish Salad.
(Serves 8)

1½ tablespoons gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
2 cups boiling water
½ cup lemon juice
¾ cup sugar
1½ tablespoons horseradish
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¾ cup chopped cabbage
¾ cup chopped beets

Soak gelatin in cold water and dissolve in boiling water. Add lem-on juice, horseradish, vinegar, salt and Worcestershire sauce. Cool un-til slightly thickened. Add chopped cabbage and beets. Pour into mold and chill until firm. Serve with wa-tercress or lettuce and mayonnaise.

One of the vitamins in great de-mand is vitamin B1—the vitamin re-quired for healthy nerves and stam-ina. Here is a bread which draws its vitamin B1 from the whole grain cereals—wheat flour and wheat germ, and is delicious be-cause of its sour milk, molasses and raisins:

Victory Bread.

1 cup flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup whole wheat flour
1 cup wheat germ
½ cup brown sugar
1 cup seedless raisins
½ cup molasses
½ cup sour milk
¼ cup melted butter

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and soda. Add whole wheat flour, wheat germ, sugar and rai-sins. Combine molasses, sour milk and melted butter and stir quickly into flour mixture. Pour into a greased oblong pan or two loaf pans. Bake in a moderate to slow (300-degree) oven for 1 hour.

Easy does it! That's what you'll say when you whip together the fascinating cranberry and pineapple drink that looks so-o pretty with its swirls of pink fluff atop each glass-ful. Serve it as the dessert with pa-per thin slices of that fruit cake you put up before Christmas. The drink is a grand one to substitute for cof-fee, and requires no sugar either:

Pineapple-Cranberry Duff.
(Makes 6 small glasses)

1 1-pint, 2-ounce can of unsweet-ened Hawaiian pineapple juice
½ of 1 1-pound can cranberry sauce

Chill both juice and sauce thor-oughly in the can before opening. Beat sauce with rotary beater until fluffy, add pineapple juice gradually, beating all the while. Pour into glasses and serve at once.

Champ

Typifying the spirit of a fighting 1943, a symbol of the United States' determination to wage a unified war effort, this young gentleman faces the New Year with complete con-fidence.

Ring Out, Wild Bells

Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky,
Thy flying cloud, the frosty light;
The year is dying in the night;
Ring out, wild bells, and let him die.

Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring, happy bells, across the snow;
The year is going, let him go;
Ring out the false, ring in the true.

Ring out the grief that saps the mind,
For those that here we see no more;
Ring out the feud of rich and poor,
Ring in redress to all mankind.

Ring out a slowly dying cause,
And ancient forms of party strife;
Ring in the nobler modes of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws.

Ring out the want, the care, the sin,
The faithless coldness of the times;
Ring out, ring out my mournful rhymes,
But ring the fuller minstrel in.

Ring out false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good.

Ring out old shapes of foul disease;
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold,
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace.

Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be.

—From "In Memoriam" by Alfred Tennyson.

Resolutions? Resolve To Keep Them in '43

Resolutions by the millions will be made throughout the United States on Friday, for it will be New Year's day—the time designated by tradition to make vows.

People everywhere will register solemn promises to themselves to foreswear bad habits and acquire good ones. The heavy smoker will resolve to give up the weed. The red-eyed tippler will promise to shun the flowing bowl. Bad-tempered in-dividuals will vow to count ten be-fore exploding with rage. Lazy peo-ple will try to form habits of hard work. Selfish people will cultivate generosity. And so on.

Skepticism will meet the promises of many self-reformers. "I hope he means what he says," will be heard in many instances. "Old stuff!" will be the cynical comment on oth-ers.

But however futile previous efforts at reform have been, the practice of making fun of the good resolutions of others should be discouraged.

Why not make good resolutions, even if past experience indicates that some of them will not be faithfully kept? Why not try to improve our lives?

New Year's on January 12

Highlanders in some of the re-mote areas of the Hebrides and Or-kaney and Shetland islands still cel-ebrate New Year's day on January 12. This odd custom is regarded by archeologists as a survival of the Julian calendar, promulgated by Ju-lius Caesar. In some districts, both January 11 and January 12 are held as holidays, but the tendency is to fall in line with the modern calen-dar and recognize only the first of the month. The modern trend is to-ward standardization.

New Year's Eve 'Sandwich Bar' Enlivens Party

"Snack" time at your New Year's eve party will be much more fun if you let your guests make their own lunch, fill their own plates and sit wherever they please. Such a scheme will encourage an informal spirit, especially among some of the guests who may not know each other very well. Moreover, it will be an inexpensive method of entertaining them.

The principal requisite for the oc-casion is a Sandwich Bar, holding all the "makings." Any well-deco-rated table sufficient to hold a vari-ety of sandwich ingredients will serve the purpose.

The Sandwich Bar should con-tain:

1 loaf of sliced white bread
1 loaf of sliced whole wheat bread
1 loaf of sliced rye or pumper-nickel bread
½ pound baked ham
1 pound of butter
½ pound liver sausage
½ pound cooked tongue
½ pound American cheese
½ pound cream cheese
Assorted cookies and cake

The quantity of each of the above may be decreased or increased, depending on the number attending the party. Pickles, olives, relishes, mustard and mayonnaise should be included on the table.

Toasted Sandwiches.

Some of the guests may like their sandwiches toasted. So it will be a hospitable gesture to have your elec-tric grill or toaster on the table.

The arrangement of the food will be an important factor in adding to the snack's eye-appeal. The follow-ing suggestions may be helpful:

Have a large bread board as the center of operations on the Sand-wich Bar. Stack the sliced bread on either side of the bread board and arrange the various meats on platters nearby. In smaller dishes, place softened butter, cream cheese, relishes and mayonnaise.

As an added surprise, something new, like "Shrimp a la 1943" will make a decided hit with your guests. Here is the recipe:

Mix together ½ cup chopped shrimp, ⅓ cup minced celery, 1 teaspoon each of chopped pickles, olives and pimientos. Stir in 3 table-spoons of mayonnaise, ¼ teaspoon lemon juice and ⅛ teaspoon minced parsley. Spread the mixture in tiny hot biscuits. This recipe makes enough for about 30 tiny biscuits.

New Year's Customs Survive in Scotland

Bonnie Scotland is the home of two quaint New Year's customs that warm the hearts of all who follow them. These are the ceremonies of "First Footing" and of "Hogmanay."

"First Footing" is a rite reserved for midnight of New Year's eve. A person who after the stroke of 12 o'clock sets foot inside the home of a friend or relative is believed to bring that home good luck for the remainder of the year. He is ex-pected to bring some slight offering as a token of his good wishes. He is warmly received and is the privi-leged friend throughout the year. Tradition has it that a tall dark man is the best "First Footer."

"Hogmanay" is also a New Year's eve custom, reserved for children.

The youngsters go from house to house chanting:

"Hogmanay, Trollalay,
Gie us your white bread,
And none o' your gray."

In response, those who are sere-naded respond by giving the chil-dren gifts of small oaten cakes, short bread and currant bun.

New Year's Resolutions Once Strenuous Affair

Practically every country ob-serves New Year's, but none more uproariously than the Scots who have singled it out as a national festival.

One old custom which is still ob-served at several towns along the coast dates to the time when fire and the sun were the principal ob-jects of worship. A barrel is cut in half, and the top part is broken into faggots and piled into the low-er half after being mixed with a generous allowance of tar. The bar-rel is then stuck on a pole, set alight and carried blazing through the village.

When burning faggots topple out of the burning mass, there is a fierce struggle for possession, for those who manage to capture such pieces will have good fortune for the next year. After a tour of the village, the burning barrel is carried to a stone altar on the side of a hill and al-lowed to burn itself out.

New Year's Oracle

A curious custom of "dipping" the Bible on New Year's morning as an oracle for the coming months was a feature of the holiday's celebration in some parts of England a century ago. The ceremony took place be-fore breakfast. The book was opened at random and the finger of the seeker was placed upon any chapter that chanced to be contained in the two open pages. The con-tents of the chapter were then con-strued as foretelling the seeker's for-tune for the remainder of the year.

The separate cushions are cov-ered with rose and green chintz and all seams are finished with deep rose cord welting. For the covering 12¼ yards of 36-inch wide plain material and six yards of flowered were used and 52 yards of welting at a few cents a yard.

THE Junior Red Cross is the American Red Cross in the schools of the nation. It is also the world's largest youth organi-zation, with more than 14,000,000 members in the United States.

The principal duty of the Junior Red Cross in war time is the mak-ing of comfort and recreational articles for our service men ev-erywhere. During the past year, Junior Red Cross members made more than 3,000,000 such articles, such as games, recreation room furniture and writing kits.

The Junior Red Cross has also taken a very active part in the making of many essential articles for Civilian Defense organizations throughout the nation. These items included splints, stretchers, and first aid cabinets.

"Earn, buy, make, give," are the four steps all Junior Red Cross members take in raising and using the money they get in their national enrollment drive. They must earn the money to buy the mate-rials to make the articles to give to the hospital, army camp or Civilian Defense organization.

Junior Red Cross members have also been very active in salvage campaigns of all kinds throughout the nation, contributing more than half of the salvage gathered by children of school age throughout the country.

In addition to furnishing oppor-tunity to learn by making these articles for service men and oth-ers, the Junior Red Cross affords children of school age basic train-ing in civilian preparedness so that they may take their places later on in the volunteer activities of the Red Cross or the Office of Civilian Defense.

Approximately half the pupil population of all elementary and secondary schools in the nation were enrolled as members in the Junior Red Cross campaign just completed.

Perhaps Dud Should Have Impersonated Himself!

The dud actor walked proudly to the center of the stage. He raised a hand, beamed down at the audi-ence.

"Good afternoon, ladies and gen-tlemen," he said. "I sincerely trust that you will all enjoy my performance. For my opening number I'd like to do an imper-sonation of that famous chap, Rudy Vallee."

The orchestra swung into an in-troduction and the dud began to croon. The audience soon grew restless. And by the time the song was over, boos were heard from all parts of the theater.

The performer looked around in bewilderment.

"Gee," he mumbled. "That Vallee must be terrible!"

Golf vs. Bowling

The odds against making a hole-in-one in golf are about 30,000 to one, while the odds against mak-ing a perfect score of 300 in bowl-ing on new alleys with new pins is about 290,000 to one. In other words, it is far easier to shoot a hole-in-one than it is to make 12 consecutive strikes.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

A single bicycle tire and tube gives rubber enough for the insulation of six Army radio sets.

Just because the synthetic rub-ber program has been upped to 1,100,000 tons production capac-ity by the end of 1943, the chances of car owners getting synthetic tires before 1944 have not been increased. War needs will take the bulk of the syn-thetic.

In normal times, say 1940, the aver-age car owner expended only $15 a year for tire and tube replacements. He spent $117 for gasoline and $10 for oil out of his annual $139 ex-penditure for car maintenance, ex-clusive of heavy repairs.

Picture 16,000 automobile tires and you have an idea of the amount of rubber used in the construction of a battleship—75 tons.
